Farmer-Labour Leader Speech Of Acceptance

In accepting the position of leader in the Legislature of the U. F. O. Labor party, Mr. E. C. Drury spoke as follows:

"In accepting the position to which you have elected me I feel keenly sensible of the honor which you have conferred upon me, and also of the great responsibilities which accompany that honor. The position is unique in the political history of the province, and, so far as I am personally concerned, is not one which I should have chosen, as I realize that bed upon which you have placed me is likely to have more thorns than feathers in it. I do not, however, entertain any fears regarding the situation. It is true, we may be lacking in experience, but the situation is not one which calls for the fine arts of the politician. It is true that in a sense we represent the farming community, and in all truth, that section of the people has been in great need for many years of a greater voice in the Legislatures of the province and of the country, a voice which it is our duty to supply. But in a very real sense we represent not alone the forty per cent. of the people who are on the farms, but also the great bulk of the common people of all classes the people who are desirous of good government of stability, efficiency and economy, and of the fair and equal enforcement of law. Our success, therefore, depends not on political manoeuvring, but on the breadth and fairness of our policy and on our adherence to the high ideals of democracy and public service which have made his movement a vital thing in the life of the nation. May we not hope that before long this movement, which has had its birth in one particular class, may expand and broaden till it shall become, not merely a Farmers' Party, but in a very real sense a People's Party.

"It is too early to speak of our Legislative program. We have not yet been called on to form a Government, and it would be unwise to anticipate. We can, however, lay down certain broad principles which must and should govern us in the matter. Our war, in the past, has been waged on special privilege. We are not at this time going to abandon the principles of justice and fair play which have actuated us in the past. If we are called to power we must stand for no class legislation of whatever kind. Our Legislative program must be framed for the benefit of every just and honest and legitimate interest in the province If in the carrying out of such a program, the unjust and dishonest interests get in the way, so much the worse for the latter.

"If called to power, one of our first administrative duties must be fearlessly and effectively to enforce the will of the people as expressed in the recent prohibition referendum. With that mandate I am personally in thorough accord and sympathy. We must see to it that it has effective enforcement It may be that it will be found that there are loopholes or defects in the law which render it difficult to enforce. If so, it will be our duty to correct them.

"The people look to us to make an honest attempt to solve a problem which bears heavily on all, and which, as wages and prices of farm produce decline, may become an intolerable burden—the high cost of living. The solution of that problem in its entirety may not be within the power of the Provincial Legislature, but it will be our duty to thoroughly investigate the conditions surrounding distribution, and if we find that prices are unduly inflated as the result of obstructions or combinations in restraint of trade to vigorously enforce such laws as will make these impossible.

"We are here as the result of a widespread conviction, not only on the part of the farmers, but on the part of urban dwellers also, that the two old parties have failed to achieve their ostensible purpose, that, namely, of 'government of the people, by the people and for the people.' And my hope is that, with your loyal support, we may be able to advance the cause of true democracy. Thus and thus only will our existence be ultimately justified.

"I thank you again for the confidence you have bestowed upon me, which, in all humility, I shall try to merit."

THE NEW LEADER

E. C. Drury, the leader-elect, is a farmer, with a real claim to the title, since he can trace his ancestry back through a line of farmers for several generations. His great-grandfather emigrated to Canada from Warwickshire one hundred years ago and took up a holding of one hundred acres at Crown Hill, which remains the Drury homestead to this day. "E. C." was born at Crown Hill forty-one years ago, the son of Charles Drury, who at one time was Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, having preceded the Hon. John Dryden in that office. He spent his boyhood in Simcoe County, having been educated at the Public school at Crown Hill, later at the Collegiate Institute at Barrie, and still later at the Ontario Agricultural sill later at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. He graduated with the class of 1900.

Mr. Drury first became prominent as a farmer in 1905, when he represented the Farmers' Association of Ontario in the proceedings before the Laurier Tariff Commission. He became master of the Dominion Grange and in 1910 attended the meeting at which the Canadian Council of Agriculture was formed, becoming its first secretary. He was a strong advocate of reciprocity and took a prominent part in the campaign that ended in the defeat of 'the pact.' Mr. Drury's connection with the U. F. O. dates to the beginning of that organization, since he was one of the small group of men who brought it into being. He has been an energetic supporter of the farmers' movement at all times Mr. Drury ran for the House of Commons as an Independent Liberal in 1917 but was overwhelmed in the avalanche of votes that put the present Union Government into power.

$30,000 Paid To Sun Directors

TORONTO, Nov. 1—That the directors of the Sun and Hastings Loan Co. (unknown to their shareholders) were paid $30,000 by the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation when the latter company took over the former a few years ago was one of the disclosures made by Whitford Vandusen this morning at the investigation into the affairs of the Standard Reliance at Osgoode Hall, before A. C. Cameron, official referee. Witness also admitted having receired $4,000 from Col. Dinnick in some compensation for the loss of his position as president of the Sun and Hastings Loan Co.

At the opening J. R. L. Starr, K.C., produced an affidavit from Dr. Geo. Smith setting forth that Col. W. S. Dinnick was still suffering from abscesses resulting from the removal of several teeth last Saturday, and that he could not leave his bed for a few days. "I don't think he will incur any risk by appearing in court a week from this date," the affidavit concluded.

After some discussion it was decided to examine Co. Dinnick on Thursday and Friday, next week.

The first witness was Whitford Vandusen of Toronto. Examined by Geo. H. Kilmer, K.C., he said he was a director of the Sun and Hastings Loan Co., for ten or twelve years prior to the amalgamation of that company with the Standard Reliance. At that time witness was president of the Sun and Hastings. He signed the necessary notices sent to the shareholders calling meetings in connection with the proposed amalagamation.

"Did you see Col. Dinnick in the course of the negotiations?" "Yes."

"Did you discuss the details of the transaction with him?" "Not particularly with him personally. We saw each other several times."

"You were getting the best price you could for the Sun and Hastings?" "Yes—the best terms we could."

Witness said he had been a shareholder in the Sun and Hastings and upon amalgamation he received par value for his shares. He had also previously owned shares in the Standard Reliance. The total amount of stock he held at amalgamation was $7,400, covering both blocks of shares.

He did not join the board of the Standard Reliance, nor held any bonds or debentures of that company.

"Was the par value of the stock of the Standard Reliance all you received from them in respect to that transaction" "No."

"What else did you receive?" "I received $4,280 from the Standard Reliance."

"What was it paid for?" "It was part of $30,000 that was given to the directors of the Sun and Hastings for giving up their positions." Witness said this sum of money was promised verbally by Colonel Dinnick at a meeting of the directors of the Sun and Hastings.

LETTER OFFERED PAYMENT

Counsel read a letter to the Sun and Hastings from the Standard Reliance: "In the event of our proposition to your directors for the purchase of the assets of your company by the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation pursuant to the terms of our letter of this date (September 14, 1914) being accepted we would pay your directors the sum of $30,000 in cash upon the conclusion of the sale as compensation for their services in the past and for the prospective loss of directors' compensation."

Witness said the notice of meeting ing of shareholders to approve the agreement for sale was dated October 15, 1914. He was sure a copy of the agreement was sent out to the shareholders.

U.S. Government Prepared To Cope With Coal Strike

WILL PROTECT MINERS WHO ARE PREPARED TO WORK—DISORDER WILL BE STERNLY DEALT WITH—GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS AWAIT DEVELOPMENTS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON Nov. 1.—The miners must make this next move in the soft coal strike was the opinion today of Government officials. The strike was a reality today even though the directing heads of the United Mine Workers of America were restrained from activity by federal court injunction. Government officials awaited reports as to the extent of the walkout for upon this information rested the future course of government.

Must Be Careful About By-Elections

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—Men chosen by Mr. E. C. Drury for Cabinet positions, who are members of the House already, will have to resign their seats and seek re-election. In order to have seats when the Legislature holds its first session, these members will have to place their resignations in the hands of two members-elect who will then address their warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery for the issue of an election rit. This procedure is similar to that to be followed in making an opening in the House for the Premier-elect.

It is admitted that the coalition will have to be extensively careful about opening up seats for its ministers unless the men are farmers running in rural ridings. The anti-Government vote in the towns and cities on October 20th was very "wet" and might not strongly support a new Government pledged to get bone-dry prohibition. Then again, coalitions have been nortoriously unpopular in the past.

GERMAN FIELD GUNS

If Hastings County should subscribe a higher percentage to the Victory Loan than any other county in Ontario, it will win a German field gun. The offering of this prize has just been announced and everywhere counties are making special efforts to win this lasting testimony to patriotism and public spiritedness.

The basis of award is as follows:

1. That one gun be awarded to the unit attaining the highest percentage of its combined team members and Special Subscriptions Objective.
2. That one gun be awarded to the unit attaining the highest percentage of its team members objective.
3 That one unit cannot win both guns. Should one unit be first on both basis above mentioned the unit which attains the second highest percentage of team members objective would be awarded the second gun.
4. That, if practicable, the Ontario Executive Committee arrange to have a plate attached to the guns on which would be engraved a suitable inscription and the names of the Executive Committee of the winning units.

$10,000,000 OF BRITISH LOAN TAKEN BY STEEL TRUST

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, announced that the corporation has agreed to purchase $10,000,000 worth of notes of the $250,000,000 loan being raised for Great Britain by J. P. Morgan & Company.

"We think it decidedly to the interest of the United States as well as Great Britain," he said, "that purchases of this character should be made by Americans at this time.

"This should have a marked effect toward the restoration of the normal rates of exchange and the bettering of the financial and commercial relations between the two countries"

THE POETESS OF PASSION

(Mail and Empire)

Though she was not a favorite of the critics and seldom appeared upon the literary page, Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, whose death is reported, had a wide circle of readers. She appealed to the same classes as have made Harold Bell Wright the author who commands the largest number of admirers in America. People who admire Masefield and Galsworthy would throw up their hands in amazed protest if they were told that Mrs. Wilcox and Mr. Wright were probably known and revered in circles that had never heard of "The Everlasting Mercy" and "Fraternity," and that these "low brows" were probably exerting a greater influence through their writings than the two Englishmen. If the American geniuses do not appeal to the "tired business man" they probably do appeal to the tired working girl, and to those people who in a former generation hung breathless upon the magic words of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth. Mrs. Wilcox directed her appeal to the sentimentally inclined. She wrote what they could understand, and when she composed something that they could not swiftly grasp they thought it must be even grander.

It is not to be denied that the American poetess had a gift of putting the commonplace into easily remembered words that her manner had a greater distinction than her matter. It was she, if we are not mistaken, who framed the soulful thought:

"Laugh and the world laughs with you,
Weep, and you weep alone."

She also wrote:

"So many gods, so many creeds,
So many roads that wind and wind—
While just the art of being kind
Is all this sad world needs."

These lines have been printed in books, in newspapers, in magazines. They have been stamped on leather, on metal, and published in calendars, advertisements, Christmas cards, and quoted, we suppose, on billboards. They hang on the walls of ten thousand homes. A writer who can make this wide appeal is not lightly to be dismissed as unimportant. In her day Mrs. Wilcox furnished a shining mark for many a witticism, and many a bitter sneer on the part of people who, while they despised her art, would willingly have given their eyeteeth to know as well as she knew, how to write to please the multitude.

Economy Of Buying In The Home Town

(By E. Trowern, Secretary, Dominion Executive Council, The Retail Merchants Association of Canada, Ottawa)

If a city or town is good enough to live in, and good enough to take a salary from, it should be good enough to buy in. If the teachers, the preachers, the professors, the firemen, the policemen and the civic servants want increased salaries the most direct route to bring about that desired end is to keep the money circulating in the Home Town. If all the money in Canada ever got into the hands of one or two men, business in general would stagnate. The proper and healthy condition is to have money circulated so that everyone will, through his or her industry, get some of it.

The first expectation of a producer is to be able to sell his crop after it has been grown. To sell it he must have customers, with money who are able to buy it. The further the producer is away from the consumer the more the transportation costs. Farms near thriving towns and cities are more valuable than those which are isolated in the backwoods. The best way to make backwoods farms valuable is to buy in the cities and towns near them.

Prosperous cities and towns are built up through proper co-operation between retail merchants and their customers. They must work together. The customer requires the retail merchant, and the retail merchant requires the customer. If customers send all their money away to mail order houses for staple goods and expect the corner store to live on the sale of lamp chimneys, eggs and coal oil, they will awaken some day to find the little corner store closed. Goods when you want them and where you want them are worth more than goods thousands of miles away. Ten cents' worth of toothache gum in the corner Drug Store in the Home Town is worth more to a suffering child with an aching tooth than ten tons of the same article in Hong Kong, China.

Retail merchants endeavoring to locate in places where they are required They have a double mission to perform they buy goods to suit their customers and they expect to make a living by selling and caring for them. The better service a retail merchant gives his customers the better business he should receive in return. The service should be mutual and the customer should be equally anxious to see that the retail stores in his city or town succeed.

Retail merchants endeavor to lo- through mail order houses you are saving the middleman's profit on all you buy is only a glaring deception, to say nothing whatever about the question of lack of loyalty to your Home Town. Let us follow the process and see if less labour is required. A person living in a town and whose position depends upon the prosperity of the town receives a catalogue. In order that the said catalogue should reach the person, processes must take place:

1. The catalogue is designed.
2. Printed.
3. Cuts made.
4 Delivered to the Mail Order House Office.
5. Addresses secured.
6. Catalogue wrapped up and addressed.
7. Stamped.
8. Placed in the mail bag.
9. Mail bag taken to the station.
10. Carried on the train.
11. Taken off the train.
12. Taken to the Post Office.
13. Delivered to the customer in the town.
14. The customer spends time reading it over and selects an article.
15. Writes a letter.
16. Secures a Post Office Order, or encloses the cash and takes the risk.
17. The Postmaster enters it up and puts it in the mail bag.
18. Mail driver takes it to the station.
19. Mail clerk in charge of the train delivers it at the other end.
20. Post Office delivery waggon clerk delivers it to the Post Office.
21. Postal clerk checks it and sorts it ready for the postman.
22. Postman delivers it to the Mail Order House.
23. Mail Order House clerk opens the letter.
24. The bookkeeper credits the cash.
25. The order clerk selects the order.
26. Stenographer acknowledges the receipt.
27. The shipping clerk mails away the order.
28. The postal clerk sorts it out for the mail delivery.
29. Places it on the train.
30. Mail clerk takes it off the train.
31. Delivers it to the local Post Office.
32. The underpaid Postmaster delivers it either direct to the customer or gives it to the rural mail delivery service that is costing Canada a large sum of money to mostly benefit mail order houses.
33. The customer receives the article and after a careful examination finds that he or she could have bought a better article in the Home Town and have had the good will of the retail merchant, and helped to build up the Home Town by keeping the cash in local circulation.

No sane person could say that there is any economy in that system of doing business, especially when fourteen transactions out of the thirty-three are made by the Government mail order service at less than cost price, thus benefitting the mail order house proprietors at the expense of the whole people of Canada.

True economy and sound patriotism therefore, call upon every loyal citizen of Canada to patronize his Home Town and keep the wheels of commerce moving in the direction in which most persons can be mutually benefitted.

The Nervous School Child

Needs Rich, Red Blood to Regain Health and Strength

Many children start school in excellent health, but after a short time home work, examinations, hurried meals and crowded school rooms cause their blood to become weak and thin, their nerves over wrought and their color and spirits lost. It is a great mistake to let matters drift when boys and girls show symptoms of nervousness or weak blood. They are almost sure to fall victims of St. Vitus dance, or drift into debility that leads to other troubles. Regular meals, out-door exercises and plenty of sleep are necessary to combat the nervous wear of school life. But it is still more important that parents should pay strict attention to the school child's blood supply. Keep this rich and red by giving Dr. Williams Pink Pills according to directions and the boy or girl will be sturdy and fit for school. The value of Dr. Williams Pink Pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. Pearl G. Harrington, Kingsville, Ont., who says:—"I have often [illegible] that I should write you and let you know what Dr. Williams Pink Pills did for me. At the age of thirteen I was afflicted with St. Vitus dance. The trouble became so severe that I had to be taken from school. I was given medical treatment but it did not help me, in fact I was steadily growing worse. Then a friend advised my mother to give me Dr. Williams Pink Pills, which she did, with the happiest results, as the pills completely cured me and I was again able to take up my studies and attend school. Again about three years ago I was attacked with nervous prostration and once more took Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and after using five boxes was fully restored. I cannot praise these pills too highly as I believe they will cure any case of St. Vitus dance, or restore anyone who is weak, nervous, or run down.

You can safely give Dr. Williams Pink Pills to the most delicate child, or take them yourself with equally good results when you need a blood tonic. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Wedding Bells

MOTT—ALEXANDER

A very quiet wedding took place at St. Thomas rectory on Monday evening, 27th, when Rev. Canon Beamish united in the holy bonds of matrimony Miss Maggie Alexander and Mr. Fred Mott of this city. The bride was attired in grey silk and hat of beaver with coral trimmings and wore a corsage bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Ethel Donald, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, wearing a sand colored suit with hat to match, and a corsage bouquet of roses. The groom was assisted by Mr. James Alexander.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the home of the bride, Station Street, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. The young couple will reside in Belleville.

LET US TELL YOU THE STORY OF CHIROPRACTIC

Chiropractic, the wonderful DRUGLESS HEALTH SCIENCE which has solved the Health Problems of hundreds of thousands, is less than a quarter of a century old. The first Chiropractic Adjustment was given by the late D. D. Palmer, in September, 1895. A few years afterwards B. J. Palmer, D. C., Ph. C. developed it into a well defined non-therapeutical Science, Art and Philosophy that had no resemblance whatever to any therapeutical method. Right from the very start the results obtained were so wonderful that its growth became phenomenal. At the present time there are ten thousand practitioners located in every part of the globe and hundreds of thousands of sick people are being daily benefited by taking Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments. Students from foreign countries are learning to become practitioners and the demand for Chiropractors is greater than the supply. All this in less than a quarter of a Century.

Investigate the principles of this great Science. Your Chiropractor will be glad to give you full information.

Civilization Not a Blessing.

Mene, the Eskimo boy whom Admiral Peary brought back from the Arctic zone years ago, died of pneumonia in a logging camp, says an exchange. It was scarcely a kindness, though meant as one, for Peary to take him away from his native snow and ice.

A man of the old stone age could not survive in the modern environment of civilization; or perhaps in the view of the Cro-Magnons, who drew pictures in colors on the walls of French and Spanish caves 20,000 years ago, drawings that still survive, civilization does not amount to much when dangers from street cars, automobiles, falling airplanes, influenza and a multitude of other things are greater than were those from the sabre-toothed tiger or the woolly rhinoceros in their day.

No Eskimo has ever flourished in the temperate zone. The scenery of Greenland and Baffin may be monotonous, it may have a certain uniform whiteness that tires the eye, but fresh air is abundant and nipp- It is not poisoned by soft-coal and it suits the natives lungs!

Wheel-Mounted Sled.

Snow and ice are not perpetual in Alaska, popular belief to the contrary, and while dog sleds are commonly used during the colder months, they are of no value in the summer, when the ground lacks its covering of white, says Popular Mechanics. This latter fact led a resident of the territory to invent a conveyance to be drawn by his dog team during the warm season. A sled of Indian design was mounted on four small bicycle wheels, and a steering column and wheel from an automobile were connected to the front pair. Five dogs, hitched in the usual manner draw the wheel-mounted sled.

BRINGING UP FATHER IN SOCIETY

The latest play founded on the popular comics of "Bringing Up Father" the world renowned cartoons created by George McManus, will be the offering at Griffin's next Friday night, November 7th. It bears the infectious title of "Bringing Up Father in Society." As might be inferred, the theme of the attraction revolves round the efforts of "Jiggs" "Mahoney" "Mother" "Dinny" and the rest of the Mahoney clan to break into the charmed circle. In justice to "Jiggs" who is better known as "Father" it may be chronicled right here and now that he is forced to enter "society" against his will. How he fares, how he meets and opposes the best laid plans of his wife, "Mother," how he arouses laughter, mirth and paves the way to gaiety, joy, happiness and gladness unconfined, is entertainingly described in three rollicking and side-splitting acts, each wedded to catchy and original music. The cast is a large and competent one in which a chorus of pretty and vivacious young women predominate. The plan opens at Griffin's next Thursday morning at 10 a.m.

GEORGE BEBAN AT GRIFFIN'S

George Beban, the famous delineator of Italian characters appears at Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday in an absorbing drama titled, "One More American," on the same program with the above offering, a funny two-act Mack Sennett comedy, "The Dentist" Gaumont Graphic, containing important news events garnered from everywhere, a 2-act Bison 101 ranch Western story and Harry Morey and Betty Blythe in a story of the home "The Grouch."

A NOVEL CLIMAX

Interesting always and at times vividly dramatic, Pauline Frederick's newest picture, "The Fear Woman" which is being shown at Griffin's to-night embodies a distinct novelty in climaxes. Its denouncement is not only completely unexpected but is, moreover, true to feminine psychology. When Helen Winthrop (Pauline Frederick) deceives the man she loves into thinking the worst of her and then, when she is sure that everyone else shares his belief, suddenly lets him see the truth, this makes for perplexing drama and confirms popular belief in woman's baffling mental processes. Besides the above offering a funny Christie comedy, "Just plain folks," a beautiful Outing Chester travelogue, Official British News, a Lyons-Moran comedy and the reel of knowledge screen magazine are also being exhibited on the same program.

BRYANT WASHBURN AT PALACE

Handsome and manly Bryant Washburn is appearing at the Palace tonight in Earl Derr Biggers captivating story "Love Insurance," besides the above offering "Topics of the Day" containing the wit of the world press and the closing chapter of the popular circus serial "Lure of the Circus" are also being shown on the same program.

TOM MIX AT PALACE MONDAY

That picturesque portrayer of Western roles, Tom Mix, is the star of "Fame and Fortune," a powerful William Fox play which will be the attraction at the Palace this Monday to Wednesday. In "Fame and Fortune," which is described by those who have seen the play as probably the best that this sensational actor has yet appeared in. Based on Charles Alden Seltzer's story "Slow Burgess" which attained considerable success in boo form, the photodrama gives Tom Mix numerous opportunities to display that daring horsemanship and consummate acting which have made him one of the foremost of present-day screen artists. A nw Luke comedy and the 10th chapter of Vitagraph's whirlwind serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain" are also being exhibited.

STAR COURSE ENTERTAINMENT

The first of the Y.M.C.A. Star Course entertainment took place last evening in the auditorium of the building, and was largely attended. If the programme given last night is a fair criterion of the entertainments to be given there will be no fault found whatever by ticket holders. While only two, namely Mr. Ord and Mrs. Jean Bohannan, provided the program it was all that could have been desired. They are certainly clever artists, and have had varied experiences as entertainers. They have just returned from a six months' tour of France, Luxembourg and Germany where they delighted thousands of our soldiers boys. Their programmes are full of interesting references to the boys abroad. They present the most modern ideas in comedy, song, impersonation, etc., the programme being a series of surprises. While the keynote of their offerings is laughter there is much in them that is serious. Both are good singers and their voices are heard to great advantage in the selections given and the encores responded to. Mrs. Bohannan is an artist at the piano and gives evidence of it in some selections rendered. The varied programme presented was as follows:

Original Opening Duet.

Will you Remeber—(Tenor Solo).

"Old Sweetheart of Mine" (with musical setting), (Raey).

Day I Get to Heaven; Daddy's Sweetheart, (Liza Lehman).

"Ain't it Fine To-day?—Jean Bohannan.

Wonderful Mother of Mine—(Tenor Solo).

Original Talk on Mother and Father with musical insets.

Singing Lesson; Operatic Potpourri —(Duets).

Humorous Talk on Soldier Life.

Marche des Tamboures, piano solo, (Smith), Godard Mazurka.

Original one act play with music, entitled, 'Their Matrimonial Venture.'

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. M. Malyea and family wish to thank their many friends for the kind expression of their sympathy during their sad bereavement and for the many spiritual and floral offerings.

A Montreal Woman's Experience — Says Internal Bathing Saved Her Life.

If the thousands of men and women with constipation and the many ills which follow would bathe internally instead of continually dosing themselves with drugs, they would soon realize why every user of J.B.L. Cascade is so enthusiastic in its praise. There should be one in every home. Keep the colon clean and free from poisonous waste and you will not need the Doctor.

Mrs. Robert Gordon, 422 Cadilac St., Montreal, Que., writes: :"I cannot speak too highly of the J.B.L. Cascade.. It has saved my life. I have been troubled with constipation, piles and ulceration of the bowels for years I have only been using Cascade for three months, and am happy to be doing my own work again after having been laid up for many months. I would not take one hundred dollars for my Cascade if I could not procure another."

The J. B. L. Cascade is the only perfect appliance for Internal Bathing, the invention of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrell, of New York, and is doing more towards improving the health and efficiency standard of the nation than all other means combined.

BURFORD TOWNSHIP FARMERS MUST REFUND TRIP EXPENSES

BRANTFORD, Oct. 31.—Judge Hardy gave judgment in the suit brought by William Milmine to recover for the treasury of Burford Township the expenses of nine farmers who went on the big delegation to Ottawa to protest against conscription. It was held that the meeting, whereat the township council by resolution agreed ship the expenses of nine farmers who ratepayers and the ratepayers who had sons in the war were not summoned. The judge pointed out that a legal meeting of the ratepayers should have been advertised and not called by telephone. Ex-Reeve Burtis, B. Doran, and Wm. CHAPTER XI.—Continued

"You say "than whom," but it's the one instance where the comparative does govern the objective in English. And Angus, or Morell, or somebody august, even denies that it ought to govern it there."

She looked momentarily disconcerted Then she said:

"All I maintain is that "than we" is very pedantic in ordinary conversation—very pedantic indeed and I shall stick to my opinion if you argue forever. "Than us" is much more usual and much more euphonious. I consider it's much more euphonious than the other. I prefer it altogether."

Miss Wix emitted a little tart laugh. 'You may consider it more euphonious to say "hegs" and "happles," she observed; 'but I suppose you don't do it.'

Her sister turned to her wrathfully, and the ensuing passage at arms was terminated by the spinster putting her handkerchief to her eyes and beginning to cry.

'I am not to be spoken to so,' she faltered—'I am not! Oh, I quite understand—I know what it means; but this is the last time I will be trampled on and insulted—the last time, Sam.'

"Don't be a fool, Emily; nobody wants to "trample" on you. You can give as good as you get, too. What an infernal rumpus about nothing anyhow! 'Pon my soul! I think you have both gone crazy.'

'I am in the way—yes; and I am shown every hour that I'm in the way!' she sobbed, in crescendo. 'Humphrey is a witness how I am treated. I will not stop where I'm not wanted. This is the end of it. I will go—I will take a situation.'

Everybody excepting the offender endeavored to pacify her. Cynthia put an arm about her waist, and spoke consolingly, while Walford patted her on the back. Humphrey brought her whisky-an-water, but she waved it aside violently, reiterating her resolve.

'I will take a situation; I have made up my mind. Thank Heaven. I'm not quite dependent on a sister and a mroquite dependent on a sister and brohave the health to work for my living. I would rather live in one room on a pound a week than remain with you. I shall leave your house the moment I can get something to do. I will be a paid "companion"—I will go into a shop!' And she went into hysterics.

When she recovered from the attack, she drank the whisky-an-water tearfully, and begged Kent to escort her back to The Hawthorns at once. He complied amiably, and attempted on the way to dissuade her from the determination she had expressed. It was his first experience of this phase of Miss Wix and he was a good deal surprised by the valor she displayed. Her weakness had passed, and the light of resolution shone in the little womans eyes. Her nostrils were expanded; her carriage was firm and erect. He felt it was no empty boast when she asserted stoutly that she should go to a registry-office on the morrow—nor was it; she probably would do as much as that. She was quite sincere. But the prospect of employment was as the martyr's stake or an arena full of lions, to her mind; and, after the office had been visited, the decision of her manner would perceptibly decrease, and the heroism in her eye subside, until at last she trembled in a cold perspiration lest her relatives meant to take her at her word.

'It will be a small household if you go,' he said. 'I suppose Caesar won't live at home after he "comes out," and your sister and brother-in-law will be left by themselves.'

Miss Wix sniffed.

'When he "comes out." '

'Yes, he seems to have been rather a long while doing it,' answered Kent. 'But there can't be any doubt about it this time; the agreement for the spring is drawn up, and signed, I hear.'

They were passing a lamp-post. Miss Wix's mouth was the size of a sixpence, and her eyebrows had entirely disappeared under her bonnet.

DANGEROUS ANTISEPTICS AND GERMINCIDES ARE UNNECESSARY

A dependable antiseptic has come to be considered a necessity in most homes. Especially is this true since Absorbine, Jr., has had such a wide introduction, because this liniment is not only a powerful antiseptic and germicide but it is absolutely safe to use and to have around the house. It is not poisonous and it cannot do harm even if the children do get hold of it. That is a big point to consider.

Absorbine, Jr. is concentrated and is therefore economical. It retains its germicidal properties even diluted one part Absorbine, Jr. to 100 parts water —and its antiseptic properties, one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts of water.

The antiseptic and germicidal properties have been repeatedly tested and proven in many prominent chemical laboratories. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Absorbine, Jr. combines safety with efficiency. $1.25 a bottle at most druggists or postpaid.

COHEN COAL AT PETERBORO.

Despite the efforts of the City Solicitor of Belleville, acting under orders from the City Council, Miss Sophie Cohen, coal dealer, of Toronto, does not seem to be in any hurry returning the money sent her last year for coal which never came. Peterboro civic fuel department, also, it seems sent money to Miss Cohen for the coal which came not, the shadowy, smokeless, fireless, non-combustible kind of fuel which burned up money but gave forth no heat.

The following from the Peterboro Review should console Mayor Platt with the thought that he was not the only one to fall for Cohen coal:

> "Ald. Taylor reported to the City Council last night that Miss Sophie Cohen, of Toronto, had paid another $500 to the city of her indebtedness for coal not delivered under contract last winter and paid for by this municipality. This makes $1,000 of the judgment for $1,500 secured against her by City Solicitor Widdifield last summer. Miss Cohen complained that the coal had been diverted elsewhere in the scramble for fuel last winter.

THE REAL THIEF OF TIME.

A popular poet sings of the sin of unpunctuality. The virtue of punctuality is usually its own reward. The punctual man gets the worst of it. He it is who, innocently trusting the advertisement of a public meeting, is in his seat at eight o'clock, and sits there waiting patiently or fuming until half-past eight, when the wise but unscrupulous arrive, says the Toronto Star. He has a sincere regard for the value of time, but is always losing it by keeping his appointments and waiting for the other fellow. The unpunctual man is like the tightwad who saves his money by holding back his share of the expenses of his amusements and undertakings. He deserves all the scolding that is hurled at him, but scolding is his only punishment. He can afford to disregard censure while he hoards his ill-gotten gains of time, knowing that the loss will fall upon his virtuous neighbor.

An older poet told us that procrastination is the thief of time. What he should have said was that the procrastinator is the thief of time and the punctual man the loser and the victim.

DEWART, THE BLUFFER.

Hartley Dewart with his forlorn hope of twenty-nine Liberal followers in the Legislature, served notice on the Lieut.-Governor that he expected to be called upon to form a Government. Hartley's "Great Expectations" were doomed to disappointment and his bluff has been called. Upon the suggestion of Sir William Hearst, the Lieut.-Governor will call upon E. C. Drury, leader of the dominant group in the next Legislature, to form a Government, which Mr. Drury will proceed to do. The U.F.O. was scathingly condemned during the election by Dewart, but he can see now where he could use the U.F.O. for his own advantage. However, the U.F.O. is not blind and can also see things which Hartley Dewart would prefer to conceal and his intrigues are likely to be defeated. All that is required of the U.F.O. is that they legislate for the whole people and not for any particular class and they will be loyally supported by the people as a whole.

ITS VISION BLURRED BY PARTIZANSHIP.

The Toronto Globe's claims to political independence and high ideals as a great national newspaper are shattered daily by its exhibitions of partizan spleen. The Globe defended the rotten Ross Government to the last muddy ditch and has persistently attacked the decent Whitney and Hearst Administrations. An example of the Globe's "independent" perspective of provincial affairs is given in the following extract from a leading editorial in its issue of Friday:

> Ontario hopes that when the Seven Sleepers move out of Queen's Park in a few days Sloth and Inefficiency will move out with them. The most serious charge against the Hearst Administration is that it left undone those things which it ought to have done. It was inert and inactive. It settled into a self-satisfied indolence. It exhibited no initiative. In days when the Province yearned for leadership and progress it slept.

Then the Globe proceeds to hold a post mortem on the corpse of the Hearst Government and fails to find a healthy organ in the entire cadaver, for the reason that its own editorial vision is so blurred with beams and motes that it reflects an unhealthy appearance to anything political it gazes upon.

SUCCESSFUL PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

An outstanding example of the possibility of success for public ownership of public utilities has been furnished by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railroad, running from North Bay to Cochrane, with branches connecting with the Kerr Lake, Elk Lake and Porcupine mining sections. The T. & N. O. has been operated by a Commission for the Ontario Government. The management of the T. & N. O. Railway has been both progressive and efficiently economical and there have never been any labor troubles to disturb its operation or any serious wrecks to cause loss of life and financial loss. The big figure in the successful management of the Ontario Government Railway has been Mr. J. L. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N. O. R'y Commission, whose resignation has just been announced. Mr. Englehart, since his appointment by Premier Whitney has taken a deep and personal interest in the operation of the railway to which he gave almost his entire time, having retired from active business life in other lines where he had achieved success. The opening up of Northern Ontario by the T. & N. O. Railway has brought much prosperity to Toronto and other business centres of older Ontario, as well as Canada as a whole, and great credit is due Mr. Englehart for his services to the province as the head of a railway which opened up a new and rich section of Ontario to the benefit of the province as a whole. His retirement will be a distinct loss to Ontario public service. Chairman Englehart had able colleagues in Commissioners Frederick Dane, of Toronto; George Lee, of North Bay, and the late Dennis Murphy, of Ottawa, and so well and harmoniously did the Board of Commissioners co-operate that there never has been one serious disagreement in the course of their deliberations. Therein lay one of Chairman Englhart's greatest aids to success in always being able to count upon the loyal and whole-hearted co-operation of his colleagues.

THE "HUNCH" AND THE ARGUMENT.

A pessimistic soul in Toronto shook his head and said he was afraid that the Victory Loan would have a rough passage. He would give no reason, save that he had a "hunch." Considering that all his "hunches" foreshadowing disaster, during and since the war, have been only windy emptiness, one may be forgiven for doubting the plenary inspiration of this one.

Why should the sale of Bonds be difficult? Canadians are not so weak-minded as to assume that all military expenditure ceased on Armistice Day. They know that the demobilization of an army approaching half-a-million men is no task for the fag-end of an afternoon. They know that the dislocation of export trade by war must be reduced by extending credits to Great Britain for the purchase of our surplus products.

Why should the sale of Bonds be difficult? The business men of Canada, the captains of finance who are in constant touch with the problemes of reconstruction know that the loan is a pressing necessity to maintain the prosperity of Canada. They will buy Bonds to the limit of their present and prospective resources for they know the advantages of owning gilt-edged, easily-negotiable securities with a yield of 5½ per cent.

Why should ehe sale of Bonds be difficult? There are more than a million Canadians of moderate means who bought last year Victory Bonds of fifty-dollar, one-hundred-dollar and two-hundred-dollar denominations. Did any of these people regret the purchase or find the investment unprofitable? Are there not many thousands who discovered the advantage of possessing a financial reserve against domestic emergencies? All the education that was required a year ago to screw the courage of small investors to the sticking point is unnecessary today. The lesson is learned.

Why should the sale of Bonds be difficult? There are more than a deposit at the Banks than ever before. The people appreciate the advantage of transferring money from a three per cent. basis to sure "paper" yielding 5½ per cent. The average Canadian is a good business man. Against the pessimist's "hunch" there seems to be a body of solid argument which no one can gainsay. The Victory Loan of 1919 will be oversubscribed.

Ottawa despatches tell us of all the railway lines, hotels, etc., that will be taken over by the Government when it purchases the Grand Trunk system. But what we really are interested in learning is what's going to happen to the Grand Trunk's Edmonton newspaper stock.

A Bad Plan.

Calgary Herald.

Montreal school board has suggested that all male teachers be dismissed and their places taken by females. This because the male teachers have asked for salary increases. If the board takes that action it will be making a fatal mistake. The trouble with education already in Canada is that there are too few male teachers on the job.

The Underpaid Minister.

London Advertiser.

Those ministers who talk of striking for higher wages will have the sympathy of every fair-minded man and woman. With few exceptions, men of this noble profession are self-sacrificing in the interests of their fellows. To them we turn for spiritual comfort and support in those dark hours that enter every home and it is given generously and effectively. The clergyman is to be found whole-heartedly fighting for the cleanest, healthiest and happiest communal life, combatting the mean, the indecent and the dishonest. Yet he is grossly underpaid. His is the case of the laborer being more than worthy of his hire as present stipends go.

"A Britisher."

Kingston Standard.

Some time ago there was a discussion as to a name which would describe all the peoples of the British Empire, and "Britisher" was one of many suggested. Without any particular attention being paid to it, it seems to be winning its way into public favor. As a good instance of this the following words of the Prince of Wales can be taken, spoken at the Toronto Exhibition: "Besides being Canadians, we are all Britishers, which, for lack of a better expression, means loyalty to the British flag and to British institutions; in other words, citizens of the British Empire. I am a Britisher through and through, and I know of no place where I could feel prouder to say so than in Toronto." With such an endorsement as this it is to be hoped that "Britisher" will now be accepted throughout the Empire, and know for what it stands for throughout the world.

HALLOWE'EN.

A witch and an owl began to prowl around the house one night;
The witch had a broom, and bats filled the room; the kiddies all ran in fright,
And a cat with a tail as high as a sail talked "meow-ow—" 'round the house.
A pumpkin grinned, "Glad I never sinned and was always as meek as a mouse."

"Hoo-hoo-hoo," cried the owl with never a scowl, "A game I have for the kiddies,
Donkey's tail is off, pin it on, and aloft a fine game, too, for the widdies":
When door-bells start to ring, and back doors to swing, and ghosts
tread lightly the hall,
A creep and a shiver down your back till you quiver and want to fall through the wall.

Jack-o' lanterns a-swing, lights hobgoblins bring, be good in your own happy home,
For the awful'st things, Jacks can sure bring, to boys and girls who roam;
Once a little brother sassed back at mother and a ghostess caught him in his bed,
Took him and shook him most out of his skin, that bad little brother in bed.
When I was a girl—a sort of a whirl—
a hobgoblin saw me one night,
Washin' dishes on Hallowe'en, worstest face I'd ever seen, popped at that winder in sight;
My heart pit-a-pat, didn't stop e'en

And a pie-face was there, "No!"
"No!" "I wasn't scared" (?) that Hallowen'en night with that

No Return of the Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. JOHN E. GUILDERSON

"I suffered with Rheumatism for five years, having it so badly at times I was unable to get up without assistance.

I tried different medicines I saw advertised and was treated by doctors in Amherst, also in my home town, but the Rheumatism came back.

In 1916, I saw in an advertisement that 'Fruit-a-tives' would stop Rheumatism, and took one box and got relief; then I took them right along for about six months and the Rheumatism was all gone and I have never felt it since.

Anyone who would care to write me as regards 'Fruit-a-tives' I would be glad to tell them what 'Fruit-a-tives' did for me."

MASONS HONOR SOLDIERS

Cataraqui Lodge, No. 82, A. F. & A. M., Kingston, gave a banquet Thursday evening to returned soldier members of the lodge. Among those present were Grand Master Harcourt, of Toronto, and Col. Wm. Ponton of Belleville, who were the principal speakers of the evening.

FELL FROM BALCONY

A young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hallstone, of Madoc, was the victim of a severe accident on Tuesday. While playing on the balcony at the rear of his home he fell through the railing fifteen feet to the ground below. Among his injuries are a broken leg and several cuts and bruises. He is, however, doing well and his condition is satisfactory.

SEVERELY INJURED

A distressing accident happened in Madoc this week when Mr. S. J. Danford was thrown from a wagon. He was hauling a load of crushed stone when his horse became startled and sprang forward. Mr. Danford was badly injured, having three ribs and his shoulder broken. He is still in a precarious condition.

HALLOWE'EN AT HOME

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen held a successful Hallowe'en At Home in the Oddfellows Temple on Front Street last evening. Progressive euchre was played between the hours of eight o'clock and eleven, after which refreshments were served to all present. A large number of card players took part in the game. The hand-painted Nippon butter tub was won by Miss Rita Hunter as first prize for the ladies. Mrs. Archie Goyer won second prize, a crotchet bordered towel, and Mrs. Andrews carried away the third prize, being the booby. The gentlemen's first prize was won by Mr. Bert Smith, who won nine games out of ten, Mr. W. Rogers won second prize and Mr. W. Tedman third prize. After refreshments were served dancing was indulged in, the floor being continually crowded. The music was supplied by a two-piece orchestra. The music was all that could drums. The music was all that could have been desired, the players being very generous in their encores.

NAPANEE MAN SUMMONED

On Thursday morning Justice of the Peace George Hunter of Kingston received word from Toronto that the car answering to the number which ran over William Lowry, of Westbrooke belonged to Frederick Burt, R.M.D. No. 1, Napanee. As soon as this word was received, Mr. Burt was notified that he was to appear before the court on Nov. 8th, to answer to the charge committing a breach of the Motor Vehicle Act by knocking down William Lowry and causing actual body harm.

A QUIET NIGHT

Hallowe'en was a rather quiet night in this city, there being no disorder of any nature and no calls for the police. Despite the inclemency of the weather a large number of the younger population were out and many were attired in grostesque costumes. Vandalism was discarded, which speaks well for the boys. In many homes Hallowe'en parties were participated in.

VACANT DWELLING BURNED

At a few minutes before the midnight hour last night, a vacant frame dwelling situated on Sidney street, West Belleville, near the agricultural park was discovered to be on fire and was burned to the ground. The fire brigade responded to a call but were unable to do anything to save the building. The house in question was the property of Mrs. S. Hibbard of this city and was not insured. It had been unoccupied for some time. The blaze attracted a number of citizens to the scene, the illumination being such that it was thought a large building was burning. There appears to be no doubt that the fire was incendiary in its origin.

THE MARKET

A goodly number of our country friends were today in attendance upon the market. Good prices were realized for all products offered for sale and in some cases they were considered rather high. Fresh eggs were a rather scarce commodity and were quickly picked up at 70 cents per dozen. Fresh dairy butter sold from 63c. to 65c. per pound. Dressed chickens and ducks were quite plentiful, and sold well. The former brought from $1.75 to $2.50 per pair, according to size and quality, while ducks sold at $2.75 and $3.00 per pair. The ruling price for potatoes was $2.50 per bag. Garden products were bought in considerable quantities.

KINGSTON GIRL'S TRIUMPH

Miss Marjorie Campbell daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Campbell, of Kingston, has almost overnight, as it were, become a theatrical star of the first magnitude and today is the talk of all London, Eng., where she is the leading lady in that wonderfully fascinating play, "Tiger Rose," which ran so successfully for many months on the American side. The play, after a week's "try out," in Bournemouth, England, opened at the famous Savoy theatre in London on the night of October 16th and made an instant and remarkable hit, with Miss Campbell fairly captivating the large audience and instantly winning her way into the hearts of the people and, incidentally, gaining for herself a lasting place in theatrical Stardom; for as a consequence of her brilliant success she has been literally besieged by managers seeking to sign her up for other plays at fabulous salaries. As a consequence, too, of this success her name is now blazoned forth each night in great flashing letters before the Savoy theatre as the chief attraction of that great playhouse.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—A coal famine will be cheated, A. J. Casey, coal magazine editor said yesterday. Most Misquoted of All Books.

No book has contributed more to the general stock of misquotations than the Bible. No book exists in such a multitude of forms, which may account for some of the popular departures from the wording of the King James version. But it is not easy to supply reasons for most people's habit of saying "In the sweat of thy brow," when the text reads "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." Why "the parting of the ways" instead of the "parting of the way"? "Bone of my bone," instead of "bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh" may be due to the desire for perfect parallelism. And the same explanation may hold for "Thus far shalt thou come, but no further,' instead of "Hitherto shalt thou come." But why the general preference for "better part," when we are expressly told that "Mary hath chosen that good part"? The Vulgate, for whatever reason, says "the best part"—optimam partem—often cited in the Middle Ages in proof of the superiority of the contemplative life, as represented by Mary, over the active life, symbolized by Martha. But apparently no such contrast was originally intended. Why, again "a multitude of sins"? Perhaps there is no other reason save that the tongue is an unruly member; such at least the world agrees in calling it, though the Biblical text describes it as "an unruly evil."—Harry Ayres in the Review.

Sporting News

Sam Countryman, who died recently at Watertown, N. Y., was one of the lacrosse stars of twenty-five or thirty years ago when that game was at its peak of popularity in Canada. Countryman came from the town of Prescott which furnished many brilliant lacrosse players in the early days. As goal tender of the Brockville Club he was noted as one of the best men between the sticks in Canada. Sam was particularly watchful of attempted invasions of the goal crease which was a sort of No Man's Land for opposing players, and any one foolish enough to rush in and attempt to pin Sammy's stick received a rap on the head which discouraged any further attempts in that direction. In one game Countryman laid out an umpire behind his goal for raising his hand signifying a tally when the goal tender was satisfied the ball did not go between the poles. Sam deliberately walked through the goal posts and beaned the official with his stick. The offence was not considered very serious in those days and Countryman was only penalized with a few minutes rest on the bench. Few of the players of Countryman's day on the Brockville team are alive now, but from memory the most notable of the survivors are Alex Murray of Brockville, a fast and heady player, and Myles Bourke, the giant field captain, now customs officer at Cobalt.

Not Your Money But Your Good Will

We want the good will of every car owner in this town.

We want everyone to say what lots of folks say now—"Willard? That's where you get a square deal and value for every dollar."

We'd rather have your good will than an extra dollar or two on a repair job.

We'd rather sell you a battery that will give longer and better service than to make a living by repairing poor batteries.

Of course good repair work and good batteries cost more, but we believe they make friends and buy good will.

Let's get together.

WHY DO WE SLEEP?

There Is Much Yet to Be Known About It.

Some of the most usual things are also the most wonderful, but just because they are familiar it never occurs to us how wonderful they really are.

In all the complex arrangements and inter-workings that go to make up human life, there is, perhaps, none more remarkable than that by which at regular intervals our consciousness is blotted out, the activities of our bodies and minds cease, and sleep alone possesses us. Yet since this miracle happens in the ordinary every day of his life, the wonder of it never strikes us. We do not stop to ponder on it and to ask what is it that happens when life is thus almost completely interrupted.

Why do we sleep, and more, why do we wake again?

Like most natural phenomena that appear so simple the explanation is hidden from us. The physiologist tells us that sleep is a "synaptic dissociation of neurons." It may be, but we are not much the wiser for that, even if we know both what is a neuron and what happens to it when it is synaptically dissociated. No, we do not know just what sleep is nor why it happens.

It used to be thought that sleep happened because the circulation of blood through the brain grew so feeble that this, the seat of consciousness, could work no longer and sleep took the place. Many years ago, indeed, a surgeon studying the subject watched a failing circulation of the brain through a hole in the skull of a sleeping animal. Yet this is only effect, not cause. The brain has less blood because it sleeps; it does not sleep because it has less blood.

More recently it has been thought that during the active day we make, by the activity of our muscles, a poison which has the peculiar action of deadening mental action. This gradually accumulates in us till by the time that sleep is due at night, the brain is overpowered. This argument is supported by the familiar Starting Something.

The household was comparatively quiet when the ten-year-old son looked up from the last page of a recent issue of the News and inquired of both parents sitting near: "What's funny about this here 'Abe Martin?' 'There's never anything t' eat in a home where th' wife is on an allowance.'" "The joke, my son," his father replied, "is that instead of spending the allowance for eats, the wife blows it in for clubs, clothes, candy and conventions." "No, son," said the mother, "the fact is that the allowance is not large enough to provide a hotel menu, though the men seem to think it is. And that is no joke, either."—Indianapolis News.

Bullet In Brain Twenty Years.

After living for 20 years with a bullet in his brain, Edgar Wilgus, an insurance broker of Trenton, N. J., was killed by a 5-foot fall on the granite steps of a New York hotel. The medical examiner, discovering the bullet in the man's brain, thought at first that he had been unaccountably shot, but learned by telephoning to his home how long he had carried the bullet in his head.

The Dawn In Belgian Africa.

The time has been when news from Darkest Africa in the Congo region was dark indeed; but the present and future of the tribes that embrace, all told, something like 5,000,000 human beings, scattered over a tropical territory almost as large as Europe, looks full of promise as one reads the report of Mr. Frank, Belgian Minister of the Colonies, covering the period of the war and laying out a program for the future. During the war there has been practically no trouble in the Belgian Congo, probably as a result of the lines adopted by the administration, for any idea of forcing the natives into an uncongenial mold has been abandoned, and the country is being governed by adapting methods to local conditions. "Not only must we decentralize our administrative organization," runs the report, "but we must continue to study and make the best possible use of native institutions, respecting and developing them in all respects, even if they offend our ideas and moral conceptions, so long as they do not offend against the essential principles of humanity and justice." Economically and industrially, the Congo may reasonably become important and prosperous in accordance with those essential fundamentals. One may hope to hear far different and better things from the Congo than one has heard in the past.

Da Vinci Thought of Tank.

Italy has just celebrated the fourth centenary of Leonardo du Vinci's death. His name has often been mentioned during the war and his prophetic genius recalled. It is known that he intended to build airplanes for war purposes, but it is now claimed also that he was the first to think of the tank. In his letters to Il Moro he speaks of armored cars which could shelter the occupants and drive right amongst the enemy's masses, slaying and shattering all opposition. It is unfortunate that more is not known of Leonardo's intentions, and of the way in which he proposed to propel his craft. Horses might possibly have been intended, for if a horse could carry less weight than the armored motor, protection in those days was more easily got than now. But it is certainly very singular to read that his cars were to charge ahead while the infantry would follow behind—for this is exactly what happened four hundred years after his death.—Manchester Guardian.

The Place In Asia Where the Rugs Come From.

Turks are making vigorous protest against the mandatory intrusted to Greece over Smyrna. Smyrna, too often known only to the Western peoples, as "the place where the rugs come from," though they do not, vies with Damascus in the claim to being the oldest city of the world. One of the seven cities of the Christian Church in Asia Minor, it also is among the seven cities that claim Homer. You will recall the lines:

"Seven wealthy towns contend from Homer dead
Through which the living Homer begged his bread."

It has passed through all the cycles of the average city's history time and time again, at one period having a government which suggests that of the Russian Soviets, and it has survived earthquakes, plagues and destructive wars.

Its known history runs back to a thousand years B.C., and it may have flourished in the unrecorded ages before that remote time for all that written history connotes. The Aeolians preceded the Greeks, who made it an Eastern centre of their early culture. It had declined and all but fallen when Alexander, after taking Sardis, released it from the yoke of the Lydias and, acting upon a suggestion said to have come to him in a dream, decided to restore it. It also fell under Roman, Mongol and, finally, Turkish, dominion.

It was under the Lydians that the once proud city was split into a series of communities, which effectively tied its political and military hands, so that this dean among Grecian cities cut little figure in the golden era of Hellenic culture.

The new Smyrna, as rebuilt by Alexander, was moved about three miles south of the older site which was to the northeast of the landlocked gulf of the same name. Nestling between the "muddy green" waters of this gulf and the succession of hills behind it, Smyrna always was a city beautiful, a fact which was extolled upon coins.

Ancient coins also bore the likeness of Homer, whose identity with the older Smyrna seems fairly well founded because the Meles river, with its cave nearby that formed the Homeric "den" and "study," flowed lazily past the ancient city, though its waters since have been diverted to other and disputed channels.

To-day a thriving port, despite the Tukish disinclination to modernize its harbor facilities, Smyrna is a cosmopolitan, some say nondescript, city. The reason for the less flattering appellation is summed up by Charles Dudley Warner, who said, "One of the most ancient cities on the globe, it has no appearance of antiquity; containing all nationalities, it has no nationality; it is an Asiatic city with a European face, it produces nothing, it exchanges everything."

Among its heaviest exports, before the world war, when nearly 8,000 ships visited there yearly, were figs, tobacco, silk, raisins and carpets. The rugs known by Smyrna's name might be cited in support of Mr. Warner's last contention, for they came from the far interior districts. Smyrna is scarcely more than 200 miles southwest of Constantinople in an air line, though either a land or water journey requires a much longer and a devious route.

He Ditched the Tripod.

Passchendaele is generally admitted to have been about the hottest and toughest place the Canadian Corps was ever in. Its combination of intense and sustained shell-fire with the rain and cold and mud in which he had to live for twenty-four hours a day will never be forgotten by the soldiers.

It was during the Third Division's second trip into Passchendaele that this incident happened. Bill had just incident happened. Bill had just come out to the company as a reinforcement to replace the casualties we had suffered the first trip on this front, and I suppose it was on account of the large number of casualties that Bill, although a new man, was detailed to carry a Vickers' machine gun tripod into the line. Just imagine it. To have made the first trip in the line in a place like Passchendaele was bad enough, but in addition to that to have to carry in the heavy tripod, along those miles and miles of duckboards, with mudholes alongside them deep enough in many instances to sink a horse or a mule, was not by any means a joke.

Poor Bill, who had been told all the usual yarns in Blighty about how the fellows in France used to throw away anything they didn't want at the time as they could easily find more later on when they did want it, just stuck things for about a mile and a half of the duckwalk, and then, so fed up and disgusted was he, that without saying a word to anyone he calmly pitched the tripod off his shoulders and dumped it in a shell-hole.

The N.C.O. in charge of the crew didn't notice this and the crew went steadily on their way to the gun position, which was about four miles further. When they got there and started to set up the gun, there was no tripod to mount it on, and old Bill's surprise and disgust when he was told to go back and bring up the tripod he had ditched was great.

Bill enjoys the joke now just as much as his comrades did then, but the shock he received when he realized that he had to walk those four miles back, and then up to the position again with the tripod, must have made him feel like murdering some one.

SET THE THAMES ON FIRE.

Result Was Greatest Shock to London Known for Centuries.

There is a saying in use about "setting the Thames on fire," when anyone does anything exceptional, says Spare Moments. This actually happened on June 30, 1861, when one of the most disastrous fires in the world's history broke out in Tooley street, near London Bridge, on that (Saturday) evening. A whole street of wharves and warehouses stocked with valuable merchandise was entirely burnt out.

The fire raged for a month and the damage was estimated at many millions of pounds, thousands of chests of tea, barrels of Russian tallow, oil and saltpetre being destroyed. The flames as they crept along were carried by the wind to the river and soon many barges were blazing. The excitement was great as the falling warehouses tumbled over into the river with repeated crashes.

By midnight the scene as witnessed from London Bridge was one of the grandest and most terrible since the Great Fire of 1666, which, curiously enough, started within a stone's throw of this one. Streams of red-hot tallow poured down the river, and an army of thieves shovelled it into barrows, raced off with it and reaped a rich harvest. A score of large, well-stocked buildings were destroyed with their contents, homes were plunged into mourning, and firms ruined.

A fortnight later the fire broke out again, and burned as vigorously as previously, four weeks elapsing before the flames died down again. Hundreds of thousand of tons of water failed to extinguish the conflagration. Thousands of men lost their employment and others who were brave enough to enter the blazing warehouses were never found again.

The fire was the biggest loss to insurance companies they had ever known, and the greatest shock to London for centuries. It took years to rebuild the street, and the memory of the fire still lives.

ENGINE DRIVERS.

Men Who Have Travelled Some Millions of Miles.

The city man who journeys thirty miles a day to and from his office would probably be astonished to learn that a single year's travelling would take him as far as Calcutta, and that every three years he covers a distance greater than that around the earth at the equator, says London Answers.

And yet he is a "stay-at-home" compared with hundreds of men who seldom give a thought to their performances. Many an engine driver and guard has a mileage running into seven figures. When Benjamin Jeans stepped down for the last time from his footplate on the London and Birkenhead express, he could boast that he had travelled 4,000,000 miles, having reeled off his "world circuits" at the rate of approximately three a year for fifty-four years. Another express driver on the L. & N.W. Railway, Thomas Beck, had completed a record of 3,000,000 miles when he retired.

When that fine old skipper, Captain Greenstreet, turned his back on the sea a few years ago, he had crossed the equator 75 times and the Cape of Good Hope 95 times. He had made 92 voyages to and from Australasia and had left behind him 2,500,000 miles of sea-roaming.

And even that wonderful achievement was eclipsed by H. Stevens, a steward on board Cunard liners, whose record of Atlantic crossings reached a total of 3,400,000 miles.

Compared with such astounding feats of globe-trotting, pedestrian records seem insignificant. But there are several men living to-day whose tramping has covered hundreds of thousands of miles. Among them, W. Moore, a letter carrier, walked 270,000 miles in thirty-two years over Yorkshire roads, and Richard Williams, in six years more, placed the enormous journey of 415,000 miles to his record as a Shropshire postman.

The Webs of Spiders.

"As fine as a spider's web" is rather a misleading comparison, as all spiders' webs are not alike; nor are all the threads of which they are made. These may be dry or sticky, fine and regular, or coarse and rough, according to the will of the spider, and the use he wishes to make of it.

One kind of web is that seen on the grass on dewy mornings. This is merely a level floor on which the spider runs and catches his prey. The thread is not sticky, and the web may last, if undisturbed, a whole season. Attached to it is a tube of web, in which the spider hides.

Another web is in large meshes, but of indefinite shape. Insects get entangled in the mesh, but are not held by any glutinous nature in the thread.

Then there are some webs, in which the spider runs about to catch the insects which get entangled. In addition, there is the familiar geometrical pattern. In making these the insect first places the radiating lines in position. On these are woven the circles of sticky thread, which, however, never reach right to the centre. These are the webs which catch insects by their stickiness.

There are, in addition, many varieties of spiders which build no web at all, but catch their prey by running after it.—Tit-Bits.

Soiled
Good as New

IT certainly is exasperating to soil the cuff of a perfectly fresh shirt when attending to the furnace.

If you don't change it, you'll feel uncomfortable all day fearing some one will notice the soiled cuff—

Unless you are lucky and are wearing a W. G. & R. shirt with Double Wear Cuffs. Then, all you have to do is to turn the cuff and it's as good as new.

These new Double Wear Cuffs are a convenience men have longed for. Now that they have been invented, men are taking to them enthusiastically.

Double Wear Cuffs look equally dressy and lie perfectly flat either side out. A clever new idea in cuff designing makes this possible. Ask your dealer to show you

Fame of the Racehorses, Like That of Mankind, Often Ends in Tragedy

THE news that Wool-Winder, who won the St. Leger a dozen years ago, is to-day pulling a barge on a Bordeaux canal, recalls the fate of many another famous racehorse whose career has ended in tragedy or eclipse, says Answers.

St. Claude, winner of the Grand Steeplechase at Auteuil in 1890, ended his days at the Pasteur stables, where he was used for the production of serum; and George Frederick, after winning the Derby, proved a hopeless failure at the stud, lost his sight, and spent his closing years on a Canadian farm.

Silvio, winner of the "Blue Riband" in 1877, had the misfortune to break a leg in his sixteenth year, and a merciful bullet put him out of his misery; and Kiarikoff, for whom Lord Vincent paid £5,000, in the conviction that he would win the Derby, was returning to his training quarters at Malton when a spark from the engine set fire to his box, and he was burned to death.

Blue Gown, hero of the 1868 Derby, after changing hands for £6,000, was sold for £4,000 to an American owner, and was started on his voyage across the Atlantic. But he never reached the other side, for he died in mid-ocean—a fate which also overtook Kingcraft, winner of the Derby two years later.

Fitzroy, for a half-share in whom Sir Frederick Johnstone paid £4,000, broke down so badly in a race at Newmarket that he had to be destroyed; and the great Donovan after winning the enormous sum of £55,153 in stakes for the Duke of Portland, injured himself so seriously, by dashing into a tree while running loose in his paddock, that Mr. H. Moore ordered his destruction.

Ambush II., who won the Grand National for the Prince of Wales in 1900, dropped dead after galloping exercise at the Curragh; and Victor Wild, after a career of unexampled popularity, was attacked by paralysis, which compelled his owner to put an end to his sufferings.

But while some race horses thus reach the pinnacle of equine fame, only to end in tragedy and disgrace, there are many others who rise from obscurity to brilliant careers, and close their days with an honorable and honored old age.

Godolphin, ancestor of the famous Eclipse, spent his early years between the shafts of a Paris watercart; and Flying Childers, the finest horse of his century in the opinion of many, was rescued to fame from the shafts of a country mail-cart, in which he had been doing useful, if obscure, work for years.

Chandler, hero of the Grand National of 1848, was bought from the stable of a small farmer, who was glad to get rid of the "ugly brute" for a few pounds; and Salamander, winner in 1865, was discovered "in a wreched condition in an Irish hovel."

Deadlock, dam of the famous Isinglass, was taken by Capt. Machell from the shafts of a farmer's gig, in exchange for a cart-colt; and Throstle, who defeated Ladas so sensationally in the St. Leger, was born with a thick film over his eyes; and, after being refused as a free gift by a friend of his owner, Lord Arlington, was ordered to be shot, a sentence which happily was not carried out.

Teddington, who was destined to win the Derby, was picked up as a three months' foal in a village blacksmith's stable; and Queen of the Roses, before coming into the hands of the Duke of Beaufort, was exchanged in her early years—once for a bag of corn, and again for a rick of hay.

Salamander, who put £30,000 in Mr. Studd's pocket by winning the Grand National, was hawked about to one country fair after another, until at last a purchaser was willing to risk £35 on him; and The Widow, who romped away with the Cambridgeshire, and won £40,000 in bets for her owner, Mr. Leigh, was so little thought of by her first owner that he made a present of her to his bailiff, who was delighted when he succeeded in exchanging her for a £10-note.

He Obeyed His Wife.

An amusing story is told by a woman who was at Bourneville on the occasion of the recent visit of the King and Queen, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. It happened when Cadbury was showing them round his model village. Mr. Cadbury is not young, and the day was not a very warm one. "Put you hat on, Mr. Cadbury," said the queen, considerate as usual. "I will not, ma'am," said the manufacturer, respectfully, but firmly. Then the queen turned to the king with "Will you please command Mr. Cadbury to put on his hat?" The king at once directed Mr. Cadbury to be covered, adding: "It is a royal command." Still he would not put on his hat. With true feminine resource the queen then tackled Mrs. Cadbury. "Your husband will not obey a royal command to put on his hat," she said. "Will you tell him to?" "Put your hat on, George," said Mrs. Cadbury, and on the hat went.

A Gentleman's Game.

Two golf fiends—an Englishman and a Scot—were playing a round together. After the first hole the Englishman said: "How many did you take?" "Eight," replied the Scot. "Oh! I only took seven so it's my hole!" exclaimed the Englishman triumphantly. After the second hole the Englishman put the same question again. But the Scot smiled knowingly: "Na, na, ma man," said he. "It's ma turn tae ask first."

TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

The Trips of Columbus and the R-34 Contrasted.

They had to bribe men in the earnest and timorous days of Columbus to ship for the first Atlantic trip. Sailing towards the edge of a perfectly flat earth had no particular charms, even for criminals and "broken men" who were offered indemnity if they would go. Life imprisonment, in safety, seemed better than high adventure terminated at any moment by a sudden, cataclysmic death.

That was 427 years ago. Now there is no need to call for criminals to man the first Atlantic trips in the air. They had to turn men away from the crew of the R-34, on the first voyage by lighter-than-air machine, and even then one stowaway got himself aboard and made the trip. The idea was to keep the tremendous dirigible as light as possible. And so, with all this eagerness for flying, the R-34's crew was smaller than the crew of the Santa Maria, which consisted of 52 ignorant and fearful men, who had no idea just why they went, or where. On the three ships together, the Encyclopedia Britannica says, there were 88 men, 52 on the sailing ship Santa Maria, which Columbus commanded himself, and 18 apiece on the caravels Pinta and Nina.

It took that small, bobbing Spanish fleet just seventy days to make its trip, and the R-34 took only four and a half; and one might suppose that the longer would have been more tedious, and the shorter, flying one, more miraculous and joyful. But if the diaries of two individuals can be taken as at all representative, there was no wonder in the flight of the dirigible to compare with that which compassed about on every side the Sana Maria, the Pinta and the Nina. Columbus wrote the one diary, abstracted by Las Casas, and Lieut. J. C. Shotter, the engineer officer of the R-34 kept the other. And the impression gleaned from the latter one is that transatlantic crossings in the air will be too utterly boring to be endured unless some unusual and diverting form of recreation be thought up for blase travellers. Even the ocean itself can hardly be seen, says he, and it's a weary life above the fog and clouds. There was a wonderful sunrise one morning, though with cloud reflections of a surprising kind. "This would at least be a little distraction from the cloudy monotony for prospective passengers on transatlantic voyages," says he, with a gleam of hope.

It was different, and very wonderful, at least for Columbus himself, who had an eye out for the roundness of the earth, from August 3 to October 12, in 1492. Even the recurrent disappointments about land, even those mutineering sailors (for whom the wonder was so great as to amount to fear) could not dispel the rare magnificence of the nights and days or the almost uncanny strangeness of the things which happened. The passengers on the R-34, the trouble was, knew that the earth is round. It was not for them a theory to be proved.

In the first place there was the compass. It acted peculiarly—more peculiarly than any one had supposed it would on the simple western way to Asia. It was on September 13 that the "westerly variation of the magnetic needle" was noticed, and from then on even the stupidity of malcontents could not dull the radiance of that trip. Every day some odd and splendid thing occurred. A meteor fell on September 15 only four or five leagues away. Then there were the vast plains of seaweed known as the Sargossa Sea. And the weather was sweet and balmy, like, so Columbus said, "an Andalusian April," with only the song of the nightingale not there to make it perfect.

On the 18th there were birds and a low ridge of cloud. But the real signs of land did not come until October 11, when the Pinta picked up a cane, a pole and a stick which seemed to be wrought with iron, a board and a branch covered over with berries. "And with these signs all of them breathed and were glad."

There was a demonstration of thankfulness and joy when once they got to land which only men of Southern Europe could have staged. They wept and knelt and prayed and planted banners for the Catholic majesties of Castile and of Leon, and for themselves. The R-34 came from Northern Europe and there were no tears nor kneelings, so far as has been told. Nor were any flags planted. However, there was a reception, done in Anglo-Saxon way, to relieve the officers and crew of all the boredom which attends this flying above the fog.

How odd that men were so afraid in those timorous days to take a trip of so much wonder; so eager now to fly tediously above the clouds. Fear and wonder must be very much akin. One's only regret is that the stowaway, who seems to have lost the fear and kept the wonder, was in no circumstances to keep a diary of his own!

Air Speeds.

Every airplane has a minimum air speed at which it must be thrust through the air if it is to be maintained aloft, and a maximum air speed in excess of which it cannot safely be nose-dived, for the various components will not stand the strain beyond a certain given point.

Miss Mary Pickford, as Honorary Judge and three independent judges, having no connection whatever with this firm, will award the prizes, and the answer gaining 250 points will take first prize.

You will get 20 points for every name solved correctly, and 40 points will be given for general neatness, punctuation and spelling; 10 points for hand writing, and 100 points for fulfilling the conditions of the contest. Contestants must agree to abide by the decision of the judges. The contest will close at 5 p.m., May 31st, 1920, immediately after which the answers will be judged and prizes awarded.

Erzberger Is Assailed

REVELATIONS are the order of the day in Germany. During the last few weeks almost every major statesman of the Fatherland hurled a rhetorical or journalistic hand grenade or two right into the reputation of his neighbor, and some of them scored regular hits, with the audience wildly applauding. The fun started on July 25, when, in the National Assembly at Weimar, the Conservative representative, von Graefe, staged, as the Kolnische Zeitung puts it, a dashing cavalry charge against the Government, and in particular against its supposedly weakest defence; that is, the person of the Vice-Premier and Minister of Finances, Erzberger. He said that the forces backing the present Government were largely responsible for Germany's breakdown in the war and attacked Erzberger for ruining the German treasury. The Kolnische Zeitung reports: "All that which in the course of time had been charged against the balance sheet of the revolution was industriously collected and dished up by Graefe."

Ever since the signing of the Peace Treaty there were rumors that the Conservatives, or, as they now call themselves, German Nationals, would start a general offensive against the Government, attempting to fix the entire blame for the disastrous outcome of the war on the men who went to Versailles, and thus shielding the junker politicians and generals really responsible for the catastrophe. The objective of such a campaign was, according to the press friendly to the Government, to discredit the coalition of majority Socialists, Democrats and Centrists and pave the way for a Conservative and counter revolutionary victory at the next elections.

One of the first big shots was fired by Count Botho Wedel, the former German Ambassador at Vienna, who, in an article published in the Hamburger Nachricten, brought a series of grave charges against the Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance, Matthias Erzberger. Count Wedel's article dealt chiefly with Erzberger's famous peace visit to Vienna in 1917, and proceeded to prove, first, that the enterprise of the Centrist statesman had lacked authorization; second, that by indiscretly communicating to the Entente Count Czernin's confidential report about the desperate situation of Austria Erzberger wrecked the prospects of a favorable peace.

Count Czernin's report, Count Wedel alleges, which was forwarded to the Kaiser's headquarters at Homburg by Count Ledochowski, was intended "to shatter the German Government's confidence in a favorable outcome and to induce Germany to make a peace of concessions, thereby acknowledging defeat." Count Wedel continues:

"On a visit to Homburg the Emperor Charles and Count Czernin suggested that Germany should return Alsace-Lorraine to France. Austria, it was said, was ready to yield territory, to join Galicia, considered lost at any event, to Poland, and to cede Poland with Galicia to the German sphere of influence.

"At German General Headquarters this report did not make the impression desired by the Austrians, chiefly because of its exaggerations.

"An article published on July 3 of this year in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung spread the impression that Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg had, in April, 1917, confided the contents of Count Czernin's report to Erzberger and sent him to Vienna with the purpose of bracing up the Emperor Charles and preventing a precipitate peace action, an errand successfully executed by Herr Erzberger.

"I understand now that Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg denies that he ever communicated the contents of Czernin's report to Erzberger. Such confidence, I may add, would have been inexplicable on his part.

"Herr von Bethman-Hollweg also denies the allegation that it was he who sent Erzberger to Vienna. There was no necessity of such special mission, as the German Embassy in Vienna and the Austro-Hungarian Embassy in Berlin were at the Chancellor's disposal."

Count Wedel now turns to an exposure of Erzburger's methods. The Centrist leader, he charges, frequently undertook, during the war, trips abroad. He did so on his own initiative, but in each instance he called, before leaving Berlin, at the Chancellery or Foreign Office, with the purpose of gathering information.

Erzberger got acquainted with the contents of Count Czernin's report on a visit to Vienna, Count Wedel says, and continues:

"It was both for Berlin and Vienna a most painful surprise when one day a discussion of Count Czernin's report was published in a Rhineland newspaper. It appeared that Erzberger had made use of the report in a meeting held, if I am not mistaken, at Frankfort-on-Main."

Wedel found his match, however, in the shrewd Centrist politician who answered with a long and unusally bitter indictment of Conservative strategy and policies. "Whatever charges Graefe had made against the revolution now were hurled back by Erzberger at the German-National party," the Kolnische Zeitung says. It was the famous speech, extensively reported in the cables, in which the one-time peace mediator told about the attempt of England in 1917 to obtain peace through the good services of the Pope—attempts which foundered on the uncompromising attitude of the German war lords. Erzberger named the then Imperial Chancellor Michaelis and Gen. Ludendorff as the persons chiefly responsible for the failure of the peace move.

The entire crew of the coal steamer Homer, of Toronto, is now officially reported lost.

Be Prepared!

"NO, I have never taken out life insurance; I own a very comfortable home, and have a wife and family of seven. I am drawing a fair salary which we pretty well manage to spend each year allowing a little for illness and other emergencies.

"But I am good for thirty years yet, and in that time I hope to accumulate a nice little fortune to leave behind to wife and family. My father is eighty-two and is as hale and hearty as I am. We're a long-lived race."

Rather a rash statement, was it not, to come from an intelligent man chatting with a fellow passenger on an Eastern bound train. Two days later that man who spoke so decidedly succumbed to an attack of acute indigestion in a New York hotel. You can picture what his death would mean to his family residing in an Ontario City.

It is the unexpected that happens—your duty as a father is to be prepared.

THE FINAL VICTORY LOAN

Editorial in The Globe, Toronto, Sept. 16, 1919

Preparations for the launching of the final Victory Loan have been begun. From this time forward until the end of the campaign public interest in the financial condition of the Dominion will increase steadily. There is need for a discussion not only of the fundamentals of National Finance, but for the diffusion of information all over the country as to the purposes for which this specific loan is required. The war is over. The appeal to the win-the-war spirit—so effective in the floating of former loans—cannot be made upon this occasion. Instead, there must be an appeal to the common sense of the people and to their desire to do all that is possible to bring about the restoration of normal conditions in the Dominion.

The first thing that must be impressed upon the public mind is the fact that a large part of the money called for is required to wipe out the indebtedness of the Government to Canadian banks that have advanced great sums—almost a quarter of a billion dollars—to enable the Government to grant credits for the purchase of goods for export to Allied countries that are unable to pay cash for all the Canadian provisions and other products they require. The loan is needed also to meet the heavy expenditures attending the demobilization of the Canadian overseas army. Gratuities and back pay run into enormous sums. The credits to Great Britain to enable her to continue buying Canadian products have been very large. Greece, Roumania, and Belgium have been supplied with foodstuffs, clothing, and implements through a a loan of seventy-five million dollars made by the Canadian Government to the Governments of these countries. Sir Henry Drayton says that further credits will have to be made to finance the export of our natural products. The loans will be repaid in time, and such portions of them as are not promptly liquidated by the importation of British and continental European goods into Canada will remain to the credit of the Canadian people as an investment of capital on which interest will be drawn.

It is good to have considerable investments abroad instead of remaining—as Canada was before the war—almost exclusively a debtor nation. In pre-war days, for example, the British people had almost three billion dollars invested in Canada. They owned huge blocks of national, Provincial, and municipal securities. They held the bulk of the bonds and stock of our railways. They had much money in Western lands and in Eastern manufacturing enterprises. Large blocks of bank capital were British. It required the export of about a hundred and fifty million dollars' worth of Canadian products yearly to pay even the interest on this great investment. That fact indicates why Canadian exports to Great Britain were greater than Canada's imports from Great Britain. They had to be about a hundred and fifty million greater if we were not to keep going more deeply into debt year by year through the reinvestment of British money in Canada.

During the war the British people sold or put in pledge large amounts of Canadian securities—not less probably than half a billion dollars' worth—and Canadians have been buying these securities by means of a large surplus of exports. It is anticipated that after all the war accounts are balanced Canada will have reduced her debt to British capital by at least half a billion dollars, and that hereafter she will have to export twenty-five million dollars' worth less of her products than in pre-war years to pay her annual interest bill to Great Britain.

But it may be argued that the Canadian people as a whole will not benefit because some of them owe less to some of the British people than they did before the war. This is a mistaken view. It is true that there has been a vast increase of Canada's internal debt because of the war. For a period of years too long to estimate with any degree of certainty all the people of Canada as taxpayers will have to pay about $120,000,000 a year as interest on the war debt to the much smaller number of Canadians who hold war bonds. But when we get down to concrete cases instead of dealing in the mass the debt burden of two billions does not look so hopelessly large. The interest amounts to about $15 per year per head. Every shop girl or domestic or workingman who has been able to buy three hundred dollars' worth of Victory bonds—and their numbers run up into hundreds of thousands—will get annually in interest from the Government a little more than enough to pay his or her share of the taxation due to war debt. In other words, their savings cancel their share of the debt.

Had the country tried to finance its war expenditure by foreign instead of internal loans—supposing that to have been possible—the condition of Canada would have been vastly more serious to-day. Our debt to external creditors would have been over four and a half billion dollars, and to pay the interest at the current rate would have involved the export of about two hundred and thirty million dollars' worth of Canadian products yearly without any corresponding imports. The effect upon the manufacturers and merchants of Canada of such a drain would have been almost ruinous, for the people of the Dominion would have their buying capacity very seriously reduced by the export of their products to pay interest on the external debt. It is therefore of great importance that the Canadian people as a whole should owe some of the Canadian people the bulk of the money spent in prosecuting the war. The interest is spent in the country, and benefits in the spending all classes of the community—the debtor as well as the creditor.

If the argument here presented is a sound one, then it follows that to the very limit of our capacity we should continue to buy Victory Bonds. The new issue will have to yield at least four hundred million dollars to enable the National Treasury to discharge its obligations during the current financial year. Victory Bonds are an excellent investment, but they are more than that. They are a sign that Canadians have faith in their country, in its vast resources, in the stability of its Government, in the will and the power of the people to build up and maintain a civilization which will stand the greatest stress that can be brought to bear upon the foundations whereon the Dominion has been reared.

Chinese Caligraphy.

The Chinese, according to a Canton paper, recognize the extreme complexity of their written language. About twenty years ago, in the days of the Empress Dowager, a scholar and reformer named Wang Chao, who held the highest obtainable literary degree, conceived the idea of a simplified form of Chinese writing. He invented a phonetic system of symbols, which was promptly branded revolutionary and suppressed, while its "radical" author was banished. Lately, however, the idea has been reintroduced, and the Government has tried a system of the same kind, but more complicated, without much success. Two missionaries of Tsangchow have fared better in an effort to revive Wang Chao's phonetic script, which is based on the fact that, although the number of characters is vast, there are only three hundred and eighteen "word-sounds" in the Chinese language.—Family Herald.

Oleomargarine to Stay.

Representatives of agricultural constituencies were again to the front when the Government's proposal to permit manufacture and importation of oleomargarine until August 31, 1920, and its sale until March 1, 1921, was before the Commons. Manufacture, importation, and sale of margarine has been permitted under an order-in-Council passed under the authority of the War Measures Act. Now that the war is over, it has been proposed to continue the permission by statute for a definite period. Members for rural ridings, including Donald Sutherland, of South Oxford; S. Frank Glass, of Middlesex, and A. B. McCoig, of Kent, objected to the continuation of the right to manufacture, import and sell the butter substitute. They took the ground that to allow production and sale of margarine would be a serious blow to the dairy industry. Dr. C. A. Sheard, of South Toronto, on the other hand, urged the Government to further and foster the development of oleomargarine in Canada under proper supervision for the very purpose of keeping down the price of butter. A vote was necessary before the resolution was adopted, and the bill founded upon it was introduced.

SUITS AND COATS

Return to Strictly Straight Line Is Predicted.

Variety of Styles and Contradictions Between Paris and New York Expected to Continue.

Differing from the general opinion abroad is an American authority who is emphatic on the subject of width in suits and coats and makes the statement that a return to the strictly straight line tailored coat is certain. As this comes from one of the houses which are not at all extreme and very well known it carries weight. It is possible, notes a leading fashion correspondent, that the next season will see the same variety of styles and absolute contradictions between Paris and New York that have prevailed for the last twelve months.

Paris, quite as much as China, is a place where they do things by opposites. Having discarded as much clothing from the knee downward as possible, in the warmest of weather they are wearing velvet berets and velvet hats. It is fortunate that there is a vogue for hats of black tulle and Chantilly or the smart Parisian would be doomed to wear nothing but velvet in the warmest of days unless she resorts to the glycerined paper hat—a late innovation.

The white velvet is, of course, very much smarter than black, if one must wear velvet on a summer day. Lewis put forth some charming models in leghorn and milan, but they proved too commonplace for the Parisian, who refused to wear them.

One of Lewis' best liked models is of white velvet in a rolling brimmed sailor shape with a huge "pouf" of marabou in white also. It had the merit of looking summery, at least in color, and does not look as out of place as did some of the velvet tam-o'-shanters, which sound in description a great deal like our own Greenwich village headgear.

After-war conditions, and the telephone

Reconstruction and Telephone Service.

TELEPHONE service, like other public services, undoubtedly suffered through the war.

Hundreds of skilled telephone workers went overseas. Many trained operators sought temporary positions in munition plants. There was a world shortage of the materials that go to build a telephone system. Our reserves of plant and equipment were drawn upon until they were practically exhausted. Necessary repairs and maintenance work had to wait.

Then came the armistice. The business world sprang into intense activity. The demand for new installations all over our system was enormous.

Now comes the task of getting back to normal—restoring our reserve plant, overtaking arrears of maintenance and repairs, hurrying new construction of local and long distance equipment to meet pressing demands for service.

Our plans for this year involve an outlay for extensions and replacements of over $7,000,000. We are giving intensive training in our operators' schools to hundreds of young women to prepare them for central office positions.

Our chief concern is that our subscribers should get the best possible service under all conditions. Skilled workers, adequate equipment, a resolve to do our best, while realizing that we are all servants of the public—these are the factors which, we hope, will result in the maintenance of the pre-war standard of telephone service.

LUXURY IN EARLY TRAVEL

"Safety Barges" Instituted for Those Who Feared Hazard of Voyage on Hudson River.

The frequency with which boilers blew up on the early Hudson river boats led to the use of what were known as "safety barges," and these, in their day, were considered the utmost luxury in travel, comparable to the private cars of the magnates of today. The barges were boats with main and upper decks and were almost as large as the steamers which towed them. The rabble rode on the steamers, inhaled the smells of the kitchen and the freight holds, endured the noise of the engines, and took the chances of explosions, while on the barges behind the elite traveled in luxurious state. Food was brought from the boat kitchen to the barge saloon over a swaying bridge between the vessels and was served with great aplomb under the direction of the barge captain, who was a noble figure in the setting.

The upper decks of the barges were canopied and decked with flowers, with promenades and easy chairs from which to view the scenery. At night the interiors were transformed into sleeping accommodations much the same as a modern Pullman, except that they were more commodious. Not the least attractive feature of these barges, according to a chronicler of their excellence, was "an elegant bar, most sumptuously supplied with all that can be desired by the most fastidious and thirsty."

Recent news dispatches which tell of plans to establish floating cafes on the ocean just outside the three-mile territorial limit when the nation goes dry, indicate that luxurious floating establishments somewhat similar to these "safety barges" may again come into use.

Gets V. C. After Five Years.

The gallant behaviour which cost the late Lieut. William Archer McCrae Bruce his life nearly five years ago has just been rewarded with the bestowal of the Victoria Cross. Bruce was a young officer of the regular Indian army, 59th Scinde Rifles, which was formerly commanded by his father, and was a nephew of Edward Hay, former general manager of the Imperial Bank of Canada. The young soldier displayed great bravery at Givenchy on the night of December 19, 1914, leading a party against a German trench, and afterwards, though severely wounded, walking up and down encouraging his men to hold out against the overwhelming masses of the enemy. The onrush of the field grey hordes later swept over this little oupost of the "Old Contemptibles," and most of those not among the slain were taken prisoner. Consequently it was only lately that the story of Lieut. Bruce's gallantry became known.

Thimble Lore.

Though the thimble is claimed to be a Dutch invention, somebody who knows says that they had them all the way back in the days when Herculaneum was. Sailors formerly wore a like device on their thumbs, and they called them thumb-bells or simply thimbles. Hence the origin of the present word.

You'd never think, would you, that it takes twenty men plus a great deal of expensive machinery to make one little thimble, would you? When John Softing introduced them from Holland into England in 1695, he virtually introduced a new industry besides.

AN INTERESTING WAR RECORD

The latest addition to the great fleet of C. P. O. S. Steamships which ply between Canada and practically all the important ports of call in the world is the "Empress of France," before the war popularly known as the S.S. "Alsatian" and one of the ocean grey hounds between Canada and Liverpool. The vessel has been reconditioned since the war ceased and recently completed her maiden trip to Quebec under her new name. The photographs here reproduced give an adequate description of her interior arrangements and fittings, and will compare favorably with the great Leviathans in this respect. The "Empress of France" has a length of 600 ft.; beam 72 ft.; depth (to D. deck) 54 ft. 6 in.; and a tonnage of 18,000 gross. A striking peculiarity is the cruiser's stern, which imparts a warlike appearance to the vessel. Her war record is one to be proud of.

The "Empress of France" as the S.S. "Alsatian" was requisitioned for war purposes under Royal Proclamation immediately on her arrival at the Port of Liverpool, midnight on the 6th August 1914. After completion of discharge, the entire removal of all passenger accommodation and other woodwork, she was armed with 8-6 in. guns, commissioned and manned by a naval crew under the command of Captain V. Phillimore, D.S.O., and was attached to the 10th Cruiser Squadron on northern patrol duty, sailing from Liverpool on August 15th, at which port she has been based during the entire period of her Commission.

From August to December 1914, she remained as above stated, but in December she was made Flag Ship of the Squadron to which she was attached, and Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley R. S. De Chair, K.C.B., M.V.O., hoisted his flag, which flew up to March 1916, when he was succeeded by Admiral Sir Reginald G. Tupper, K.C.B., C.V.O., who was succeeded in November 1918 by Rear-Admiral C. W. Keighley Peach, under whose flag she terminated her commission as an Armed Cruiser.

The Squadron to which she was attached, and later became Flagship of, consisted of 24 vessels, the majority of which were Armed Mercantile Cruisers. The duties of the Squadron consisted of the stopping of vessels, boarding them and examining their papers, and should on examination they prove to be at all of a suspicious nature, a Naval Officer was placed in charge and they were taken into a United Kingdom port for closer examination. This similarly applied to any members of the passengers or crew, as each and everyone had to give a satisfactory explanation as to their nationality and business. Available records show that in all the Squadron intercepted some 16,000 vessels, but it is impossible to state how many of these proved to be engaged in work hostile to the Allies interests.

In the early part of 1918, circumstances permitted of the 10th Cruiser Squadron being considerably reduced in numbers, and vessels so engaged being allocated to Convoy Protection Duty, the "Alsatian" figuring amongst the number and being stationed on the North Atlantic route in such capacity. While so engaged she escorted nine convoys of about 20 vessels each, carrying an estimated number of troops per convoy of 30,000, principally Americans.

While engaged on Convoy Escort duties the "Alsatian" also carried troops and cargo, the number of former per voyage being about 600, and the weight of cargo per voyage between 2,000 and 3,000 tons. She made her last voyage on Government Service in November 1918, sailing from Liverpool on the 14th, and redocked at that port on December 11th 1918, having steamed a total distance on Government Service of 266,741 miles and consumed 170,571 tons of coal.

On January 17th 1919, she left for Glasgow, having been placed in the hands of her Builders—Messrs. Beardmore & Co.—by the Admiralty for reconditioning, being redelivered to the C. P. O. S. at the Port of Liverpool on Thursday, September 25th, and sailed for Quebec on Friday, September 26th.

Captain Outram her Captain when War broke out, was given the rank of Commander R.N.R., and acted in that capacity, which was of an advisory nature, under both Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley R. S. De Chair, K.C.B., M.V.O., and Admiral Sir Reginald G. Tupper, K.C.B., C.V.O., and was granted the D.S.O. for services rendered, being succeeded by Captain Cook at the same time as Admiral Tupper was succeeded by Rear-Admiral C. W. Keighley Peach. Captain Cook was appointed Flag Captain, and granted a commission as Captain R.N.R., and now commands the vessel.

Belleville And Trenton Wage Battle For Best Loan Result

SATURDAY'S BIG RETURNS FROM NEIGHBORING TOWN INCITE HEATED CONTEST — CAMPAIGN SITUATION MUCH IMPROVED.

Belleville and Trenton are in the throes of a great battle for the best Victory Loan results. All last week the Trentonites lay low, but were apparently mobilizing their forces. Gleefully taking opportunity of the lull, Belleville canvassers launched great attacks and took considerable ground from their supposedly unsuspecting opponents. On Saturday, however, feeling themselves fully prepared, Trenton broke off diplomatic relations and commenced their campaign proper with a tremendous attack, using heavy artillery, gas, flammenwerfer, airplanes and anything else they could lay their hands on.

Results were disastrous for Belleville. All lost ground was regained and even more. With a total of $54,500 for the day's work, Trenton now has 34.98 per cent. of its objective and Belleville 30.62. At first gloom and then grim determination shrouded the faces of Belleville canvassers as despatches came in. A meeting was called to make new plans. The air is charged with electricity at local G. H.Q. Somewhat battered, but very game, the Belleville stalwarts are reorganizing their forces and are determined to win out. Like the Allies in the critical days of war, they are appealing to the civilian population to back them up again in that splendid way they did in former campaigns.

Improvement in Returns.

The expected turn for the better as to returns is believed to have arrived. Canvassers everywhere report great improvement in the local situation. This resulted in $131,700 for the day's total on Saturday, a good increase on the same day last year, which brings the county total to $533,000 or 26.88 per cent. of the objective.

The north country, which took longer to arouse, has commenced to show the splendid results of former years. In Faraday and Dungannon, Dr. A. T. Embury and Mr. D. H. Morrison have brought in 51.50 per cent and are the highest in the county for Saturday's canvass. This splendid showing also applies to other northern districts.

Messrs. J. F. Hinchey and G. N. Spafford, Tyendinaga, have wrested first place in the Prince of Wales' flag race from Deloro. They now have 59.86 per cent. and say they expect to win the flag this week, having some choice morsels in the way of expected large subscriptions still untouched. The Faraday and Dungannon team, which made such a quick rise, are in second place not far behind them and also hope to be first to win the flag.

There are now four teams above the percentage of time gone, now up to 33.33. They are Tyendinaga, Faraday and Dungannon, Deloro and Trenton.

Yesterday in Churches.

Perhaps not since the 1919 Loan has been announced have the Belleville people had it explained to them so forcefully as in the city churches yesterday that this issue is a national obligation as urgent as any war measure and not simply a government loan in the ordinary sense. Prominent local men, including Col. W. N. Ponton, Messrs. F. E. O'Flynn, F. S. Deacon, Judge Deroche, J. Elliott and County Organizer W. B. Evans, together with the clergy, set forth the need for this loan by our country as practically a religious obligation. It was Victory Loan Sunday throughout Canada and the appeal from this side of the national life will no doubt stir many people to a realization which could never have been attained from another direction.

Many Bolshevik Soldiers Captured

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Russian General Denikine's current communique received by wireless claims the capture of Bobrev, southeast of Boronezh, towards the right flank of his line. He concedes the abandonment of Kromy in the Orel region in the Archadinsky district. General Denikine's troops, he reports, surrounded a Bolshevik division and took numerous prisoners.

Allied Warships Bombard Bolhies

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 3.—Reports that Bolshevik batteries in and around Kronstadt and Krasnia-Gorka, on the Gulf of Finland, have been silenced by the bombardment by allied warships lasting several days are contained in despatches to the National Tidende today from Reval. Heavy explosions are said to have occurred in both places named, presumably being due to ammunition dumps blowing up.

Train Struck Load Of Masqueraders

Fourteen Persons Killed and Thirteen Injured in Party of Hallowe'en Celebrators.

WOODBURY, N.J., Nov. 3.—Fourteen persons were killed and thirteen injured, some of them seriously, in the grade crossing accident at Clarksboro, eight miles from here, late last night, when a Pennsylvania R. R. train struck an automobile truck-load of masqueraders. Twelve of the victims were killed instantly and two others died at the Cooper Hospital, Camden. Two of them were women. Ten of the injured are still in the hospital, and it is feared some of them cannot recover. All of the dead and injured were from the Kensington Mill district of Philadelphia.

There were 32 persons in the truck. They were returning home after attending a Hallowe'en party at Billingsport.

The accident occurred in a driving rain, and it is believed the driver failed to see the approaching train until it was too late to stop.

Provincial Conservatives Will Hold Convention

Conservative members-elect and defeated candidates to the number of almost one hundred, met in the reception room of the Parliament Buildings on Friday and for over three hours threshed out the political situation. They issued no statement at the close of the conference, but the results of the heart to heart talk may be summed up as follows:

Convention After Session

1—A provincial convention to be held some time after the next session of the Legislature.

2—The selection of a permanent leader to be left in abeyance until the convention is held; in the meantime Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, as senior member of the Conservative group, to "carry on."

3—A general expression of sentiment favorable to giving the new Farmer-Labor Government a fair chance to administer affairs, free from "opposition's sake."

4—A definite announcement from Sir William Hearst that he will retire from public life, although several seats have been placed at his disposal.

The demand for a provincial convention to table stock of the position of the Conservative party in Ontario was a general one. Opinion differed regarding the best time for holding the convention, but the bulk of the members and defeated candidates considered it better policy to wait until a session had given the party a line upon the course the U.F.O.-Labor coalition would pursue. Details will be settled at a later date, probably during the next session of the Legislature.

Marking Time In Coal Mining Strike

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Developments today in the strike of more than 425,000 soft coal miners throughout the country were expected to clarify the situation to the extent of determining whether production was to be stopped indefinitely in a large part of the bituminous zone or whether any considerable number of workers were willing to return to work. No plans have been made for opening any of the mines with imported labor, but old men who return to work are to be treated as though they had never laid down their tools, according to Thomas T. Brewster, chairman of the coal operators committee. No mine will be discriminated against, he said. Reports from large mining centres indicated that while a large number of mines would be in shape for the miners to resume work, operators did not expect many union men to re-enter the workings today.

Synod Pension Plan For Aged Ministers

A Co-operative Insurance Society for ministers and their dependents was a proposal presented in the form of an overture by Mr. Donald McGregor Campbell of Preston at the Presbyterian Synod of Toronto and Kingston.

Mr. Campbell proposed that the present Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund and the Widows' and Orphans' Fund be discontinued as such, and the accumulated funds be set aside as a nucleus for the establishment of a Co-operative Insurance Society of which all ministers who are now paying rates should be members.

Thus would be formed a nucleus for a society conforming to the rules and regulations of the Insurance Act, under the supervision of the General Assembly. Any minister is to be allowed to join this society by paying the proper assessments. Further that a measure be enacted to enable the General Assembly to assess each congregation on a pro rata basis, so as to make it possible for each minister when he reaches a period in life that through age or infirmity he must retire, he may receive an annuity of at least $1,200, widows and orphans to receive a similar amount.

$500 Quite Inadequate.

In the discussion which followed the introduction of this overture there was a unanimous opinion that the present allowance of $500 was inadequate, and that the General Assembly's objective of $1,000 for ministers' pensions was not impossible of attainment. The overture was sent on to the General Assembly.

The Synod's special committee presented an overture urging that investigation be made and all possible plans be carried out for securing annuities of $1000 for retired ministers and $600 for widows.

Liberal Candidate Says He Was Imposed Upon

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—Lieut.-Col. O'Flynn, Liberal candidate in Belleville at the recent provincial elections, was here today and called on J. Harry Flynn, president of the United Veterans League, with regard to a man impersonating Flynn, who caused a lot of trouble in Belleville and left unpaid bills. This Flynn promised to swing the soldier vote towards the Colonel. Today Colonel O'Flynn decided that the impostor had no resemblance to the real J. Harry Flynn, and Mr. Flynn declares that he will search from here to Halifax for the man who impersonated him.

A man representing himself as J. Harry Flynn was in Belleville on election day, Oct. 20, and called a meeting of returned soldiers in regard to the proposed Government gratuity. Incidentally he urged local soldiers to vote for Col. O'Flynn, the Liberal candidate, saying that he was in favor of the gratuity as proposed by Flynn's organization.

Earnest Charles Drury Will Form A Cabinet

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—Responsibility for the formation of the new Cabinet to carry on the government of the Province of Ontario was accepted today during a short interview with the Lieut.-Governor, Sir John Hendrie, by Ernest Charles Drury, leader of the U. F. O. Labor-Coalition, in its newly elected provincial legislature. It was a matter of only a few minutes. Mr. Drury was accompanied by J. J. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers Organization. They drove up in an auto to the Government House precisely at eleven o'clock this morning and were admitted to the Lieut.-Governor's office immediately. It is understood that in reply to Sir John's questions, Mr. Drury stated that he was ready to form a cabinet that would command a majority of the House, but that he would not be ready to name his colleagues for a few days, possibly a week. An understanding has been reached with the outgoing Conservative Government of Sir Wm. Hearst to carry on in the meantime.

FOOLISH HALLOWE'EN PRANK COSTS LITTLE BOY HIS LIFE

Vancouver, Nov. 3.—Little Dick Tieken lies dead in the city morgue, the victim of a foolish Hallowe'en prank. His lifeless body was found last night on the pavement huddled beneath a lowered street lamp. The police have ascertained that a number of youths lowered the lamp and left it. Apparently the little victim came in contact with it and was electrocuted. His identity was unknown until the morning.

KILLED BY DERRICK

KINGSTON, Nov. 2.—Luke McDonald, aged sixty, unmarried, while working at the Nurses's Home, Rockwood Hospital, yesterday about noon, was killed as a result of being struck by a derrick which collapsed. An inquest was opened on Saturday night, but was adjourned till Monday night.

LYING UNDER HIS ENGINE, ENGINEER BADLY HURT

Toronto, Nov. 1.—While lying underneath his engine at work, Frank Bignell, 389 Clendenan avenue, a C. P. R. engineer, was badly injured when the engine started up in some unknown manner in the Stock Yards at West Toronto at 11.05 this morning.

According to C. P. R. officials, there was nobody in the engine cab at the time, and they cannot give any theory how the engine would start up without the throttle being opened. They are conducting an investigation. Bignell was working underneath the engine and was lying flat on the track when it started up. The brake rigging or the ashpan caught Bignell and he was dragged some distance before one of the crew climbed into the engine and stopped the engine. Bignell was badly injured and was rushed to the Western Hospital.

Drury To Receive 'Call' To-day If His Cabinet Is in Shape

IT IS LIKELY, HOWEVER, THAT THE PREMIER-TO-BE WILL ASK FOR A FEW DAYS' TIME—SIR WM. HEARST AND HIS MINISTERS ARE READY TO VACATE AT ONCE.

TORONTO, Nov. 3.—This morning E. C. Drury, leader of the United Farmer-Labor coalition, will call upon his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor to discuss with him his plans for the formation of a Government for Ontario. The message to the new leader reached him via telegraph and telephone at his home at Crown Hill on Saturday, some time after the resignation of Sir William Hearst and his Ministers had been officially announced. Mr. Drury is expected to come to Toronto on an early train and will proceed at once to Government House

Although the call to Mr. Drury to form a Government is a foregone conclusion, the formal invitation may not be given to-day. Much depends upon the progress the coalition leader has made in shaping his Cabinet and in securing assurances of support. If he is ready there will be no reason for delay, but it is likely that Mr. Drury will ask for a few days' time. The change in Government, however, will be made as quickly as possible. Sir William Hearst and his Ministers are ready to vacate at once and they naturally have little desire to carry on in offices that no longer mean anything to them.

It was announced by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson on Saturday that plans for the calling of a Provincial convention of Conservatives had been left in the hands of a committee of which he was chairman, the other members being: Brig-Gen. Hon. A. E. Ross, M. P. P.; Lieut.-Col. W. H. Price, M.P.P.; Capt. Joseph E. Thompson, M.P.P.; Capt. Buckland, M.P.P.; Charles McCrae, M.P.P.; Dr. Forbes Godfrey, M. P.P.; W. C. Chambers, William Woollatt, John Joynt, M.P.P., and Peter Gardiner.

Reports of the gathering referred to an understanding that Mr. Ferguson, pending the election of a permanent leader at the Provincial election, would, as senior member, act as nominal leader in the House. In this connection Mr. Ferguson said::

No Leader Selected

"I was not selected as leader or even temporarily leader at the caucus on Friday. The question of choosing a leader was left in abeyance. Some provision will undoubtedly be made for a temporary leader, but the question of selecting a permanent leader will have to be decided by a convention of the Liberal-Conservative party of Ontario along with all other matters of policy."

Consolidated School Plans Are Announced

The Department of Education has announced regulations and courses of study for consolidated schools in rural Ontario. Half a dozen schools have already been established and several more consolidations will be proceeded with immediately.

A liberal monetary assistance will be given. The grants are on a sliding scale, based on the equalized assessment of the school districts. At the last session $100,000 was set aside to be devoted to the establishment of consolidated schools. A fixed grant to each consolidated school in actual operation before December 22, 1921, is to be paid upon the certificate of the chief inspector of Public and Separate schools. This provision, it is hoped, will hasten the consolidation in many districts where procrastination might otherwise occur.

EQUIPMENT ALLOWANCE

There is also to be an equipment grant for the first year of 40 per cent. of the value of such equipment to $400 maximum, and for each of the three years following 20 per cent., to a total maximum of $200. An initial equipment grant of 25 per cent. on the value of approved equipment not included in above will be paid, the amount not to exceed $200.

Consolidated schools will also receive fixed grants for compliance with regulations the same as other Public schools on teachers' salaries, on grade teachers' certificates, etc., and special grants will be made on art, music, manual training, household science, physical culture, agriculture ad horticulture, school libraries and kinderusual grants to continuation schools. will also receive their share of the usual grants ti continuation schools. They will also be entitled to grants as provided under the Community Hall legislation passed at the last session.

In connection with the selection of a school site, it is provided that it shall consist of at least five acres and shall be ample to provide separate play grounds for the sexes ornamental lawn garden plots, an area for experimental agriculture, and a small forestry lot containing specimens of trees and shrubbery native to the locality.

TRANSPORTATION OF PUPILS

Specific and detailed regulations are given as to the transportation of pupils A sufficient number if vans must be provided in each district for the conveyance of all children of school age subject to certain limitations. These limitations include where children reside off the routes of the vans the pupils must be sent to the junction point of the roads and under certain conditions special arrangement can be made by the parents to pay for transportation of children who live within a mile of the school. Contracts for vans must be let by tender.

Belleville H. School Wins Rifle Prize

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The National Rifle Association has issued the 1919 results of the Imperial challenge shield competitions, which have been held annually throughout the Empire since 1910, each team shooting with a miniature rifle on its own range.

In the senior divisions for boys over 15 years, 775 teams entered and 554 teams competed in the junior division, representing a total of nearly 14,000 boys. The challenge shield, medals and prizes are presented by Lieut.-Col. Raymond W. Fennell of South Africa.

A feature of the results in the senior competition is that most of the leading prizes are won by Australians. The excellence of the musketry training of the Australian cadets is very marked.

Canada wins, in all, six prizes out of a total of 223, namely:

Senior competition—17th, Colchester County Academy; 44th, Smith's Falls Collegiate; 58th, Belleville High School; 62nd, Victoria High School; 67th, No. 1 Platoon, A. Company, Kingston Collegiate Institute.

Junior competition—33rd, Smith's Falls Collegiate.

Of the remaining prizes Great Britain takes forty-five, including junior shields, Australia fort-nine, including the senior shield; New Zealand nine and South Africa ten.

The 1920 conditions will be issued shortly, and will remain almost the same as in 1919, with the exception that the age limit is reduced from 20 to 18 years in the senior competition.

It is hoped that Canada will enter more teams.

Late Telegraph Briets

Sixty-one trains will be discontinued on the New York Central to conserve the coal supply.

Famine in Petrograd becoming terrible. Forty thousand have died of starvation within the last month.

Liberty Loan reached nearly ninety million the first week drive in Ontario.

There will be no discrimination against Canada from United States in coal supply.

Demand will be made on Germany that all violations of the armistice terms be made good. She must deliver cruisers and destroyers for those sunk at Scapa Flow.

Laborites won nearly all of the seats in the elections throughout Great Britain.

It is considered probable that the Prince of Wales may visit Spain officially during the coming year.

Wedding Bells

GIBSON—MONTGOMERY.

At Clifton Springs an autumn wedding was attended by the department of the nurses of the Clifton Springs Sanitarium, with the faculty and their wives, to witness the marriage of Miss Harriet Bloomfield Montgomery and Dr. George Franklin Gibson, of Picton, Ontario. Rev. Dr. Richardson, chaplain, officiated and conducted a brief service. Miss Schultz presided at the organ and Miss Brabner sang. A reception was held in the parlor of the sanitarium and the wedding luncheon was served in the prettily decorated dining-room. Mrs. Gibson is a graduate nurse and has served efficiently in several departments of the sanitarium. Dr. and Mrs. Gibson left later for their home at Picton, Ont.

GILLESPIE—YULE.

At Pleasant Valley farm, Campbellford, recently, the marriage was solemnized of Rache, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Yule, to Mr. William Allan, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gillespie, of Hastings, Rev. Mr. Thomson, Hastings, officiating. The bride wore a grey taffeta dress and carried a sheaf of pink carnations and maiden hair fern. Little Miss Mary Darkins, Cobourg, was flower girl for her cousin, carrying a basket of white carnations and maiden-hair fern, and was the only attendant. After the signing of the register, a reception was held. Later Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie motored to Cobourg, the bride's going-away costume being of navy blue serge, with hat to match.

LEWIS—DONALDSON.

A military wedding was solemnized at St. George's Church, Trenton, when Pearl, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Donaldson, of Trenton, was married to Lieut. Frederick Lewis, R.A.F., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Lewis, Toronto. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Canon Armstrong, and took place under a flag rescued from the wreck of the Lusitania. The bride, in her wedding gown of ivory satin with pearl and silver trimmings, with court train and veil, and wearing the groom's gift, a heart of pearls, came in with her father. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Mae Potter, of Kingston, wore pale pink satin and Georgette, with pearl trimmings, black picture hat with ostrich feathers, and wore the gift of the groom, a sunburst of pearls. She carried sweetheart roses. Miss Katherine Alzea, Trenton, was maid of honor. Her gown was pink taffeta with silver trimmings, and she wore the groom's gift, an onyx bar-pin, black picture hat, and carried pink roses. Lieut. Walter Keeler, R.A.F., Toronto, was best man. Mrs. Gains played the wedding music, and Miss Clara McGorman sang. Lieut. Frederick Passmore and Charles Gamble of Toronto were the ushers, and with the best man received from the groom fountain pens with engraved initials. The guests' seats were designated by white chrysanthemums and true lovers' knots. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents after the ceremony, where the rooms were decorated with evergreen and pink and white chrysanthemums. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis left for a motor trip to Buffalo and other points, the bride wearing a taupe velour suit with beaver collar, and hat to match, with ospreys. They will reside at 18 Close Avenue, Toronto.

TWIGG—MASSON

Woodshire Cottage, Seymour, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding when May Grace, youngest daughter of Mr. Norman Masson, was married to Mr. Walter Rutherford Twigg of Campbellford, Rev. J. J. Black of Burnbrae officiated. The bride wore white crepe de chine and carried a sheaf of white roses. Miss B. Twigg, sister of the groom, played the wedding march. The bride was given away by her father and attended by her niece, Miss Gertrude Nelson. The best man was the groom's brother, Mr. J. W. Twigg of Campbellford. A buffet luncheon was served in the dining-room after which Mr. and Mrs. Twigg left for a motor trip through the Adirondacks, the bride wearing a suit of brown velour with seal trimmings and hat to match. They will reside at St. John, N.B.

Board Of Trade Objects To Increase

In connection with the proposed increase in telegraph charges the Belleville Board of Trade is on record as follows:

Belleville, Oct. 30, 1919.

Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, Ottawa.

Dear Sirs:—Your notice of meetings to consider application for increased tolls is received. There will be no necessity for our representative being present if you will be good enough to enter our Board as unalterably opposed to such a retrograde step as is sought by the Telegraph Companies to be taken. The Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario are on our motion, uniting to ask that rates of business and commercial telegraphs and cables should be reduced so that the interchange of trade and commerce may be facilitated and accelerated. The high cost of telephones, especially at night since the recent increase, has rendered that method of communication prohibitive and we trust that you may not further shackle industry and commerce by permitting these public utilities who enjoy our franchise, to further impede the progress of Canada at this critical time of re-construction and re-establishment. Telegraphs and telephones are, or rather ought to be, the veins and arteries of the circulation of Canada's life. We should not short-circuit the electric current.

Yours truly,
W. N. PONTON,
Sec. Belleville Board of Trade.

WIN FOR BELLEVILLE

At Peterboro on Saturday 25th, ulto Peterboro High School rugby team defeated Belleville High School team by a score of 6 to 5. The return match was played here on Saturday afternoon at the Albert College campus and our boys came very close to administering a coat of whitewash to the visiting team. With two minutes to spare the score was 7 to 0 in favor of the Belleville team, when the visitor secured their only point. A number of spectators were present at the game and were naturally well pleased at the result. It was a well contested game, despite the fact that the score was rather one sided, namely 7 to 1. All members of the Belleville team played their positions well, demonstrating that they were by far the superior team. Owing to the heavy rain of Friday, the ground was by no means in the best condition but was an improvement over the wet grounds at Peterboro. Mr. Bullock was umpire for the Belleville boys whilst Mr Brown fulfilled that position for the Peterboro team. The line up of the teams were as follows:

Belleville—Wrightmeyer, Maidens, Kerr; scrimmage.

Hagerman, Vanderwater; inside wing.

Wensley, Cole; middle wing.

McWilliams, Marshal; outside wing

Deacon; quarter.

Diamond, Weir, McGie, Dies; half backs.

Peterboro — Fanning, McBrien, Mason; scrimmage.

Huff, Sloan; inside wing.

Rischer, Bleecker; middle wing.

Pogue, Carmichael; outside wing.

Stevenson; quarter.

Green, Mowat, Brooks, Hunter; half backs.

Shirley and Young spares for Peterboro; McMillan spare for Belleville.

COMPRESSED AIR FOR LOCOMOTIVES

ROME, Nov. 1.—Experts of the Italian State Railways are experimenting with an invention which may revolutionize railway motive power.

The principle, it was said, was substitution of compressed air for steam and electricity. This could be accomplished with only minor changes in present locomotives, according to the inventor's claims. Storage tanks would replace the present coal tenders and would carry enough compressed air to drive a train several hundred miles without recharging.

The name of the inventor, a young Italian engineer, is withheld.

JAPAN'S INCREASING TRADE.

Speaking optimistically on the prospects of British trade, Sir Auckland Geddes has declared that Germany cannot hope to rank among the great manufacturing nations of the world for months, and perhaps for years to come. He also contended that owing to the high cost of living and increased costs of production, Japan will not be able to compete successfully with Great Britain in those superior articles of manufacture which have given British products such an international reputation. It is a striking fact, however, that the value of Japanese imports into India have tremendously increased until today they represent practically one-fifth of India's import trade. The official figures for 1918-19 show Japanese imports into that country of $111,666,665, as compared to $61,666,665 in 1917-18, and $44,166,665 in 1916-17.

POISONED BY FLATTERY.

Leader Drury of the U. F. O. will develop a very large pain if he reads all the gush slobbered over him by the Grit press, his ability, his family and his home. He will find it difficult to live up to the high standard of ability fixed for him by this lickspittle brigade seeking to make party and personal capital out of a peculiar situation. Truth is they would like to bury Drury rather than praise him, but prefer to destroy him by the slow poison of fulsome flattery. It is not strange that the rabid Grit press rejoiced in the downfall of the decent and efficient Hearst Government regardless of what this defeat might entail; in fact they acted as if even chaos would be welcomed rather than have the hated Tories in control in Queen's Park. When partizanship becomes so chronic and virulent the one affected should see a surgeon and have a poultice of common sense placed in the vacancy which their brains should occupy.

Give Drury a chance to make good in his own way, but for the love-o'-Mike don't handicap the poor man with recommendations that no man could possibly live up to. Thus far he has been likened to Lincoln, Cincinnatus, Demosthenes, Gladstone, Roosevelt and a few other ancient and modern celebrities to such an extent that his own wife would not recognize the picture. As a matter of fact Mr. Drury is just a plain, ever-day farmer, with a clear head, well read and well versed on the topics of the day and with a gift of the blarney to translate his thoughts into words publicly. Give him a fair start and if he fails to make good he will not have so far to fall.

GOOD BUSINESS.

Four million dollars were spent in this city last year by tourists, and there will be hearty commendation of the plan outlined by the Automobile Club of Canada, of establishing in this city a well-equipped bureau whose work it will be to spread information of Montreal and this province generally, says the Montreal Star.

This plan is now quite common both in America and Europe, and has brought in golden returns. The Canadian Pacific Railway estimates that if Canada can secure ten per cent. of Europe's tourist travel—and her beauties warrant this—five hundred million dollars annually would come to this country. In this connection it is interesting to note that a strong petition has recently been sent to the Dominion authorities praying for the creation of a National Bureau of Tourist Travel. Here is a project that should be acted upon at once at Ottawa so that some of the great harvest can be reaped next year.

Owing to wise legislation the United States Government in 1915 succeeded in attracting to the National Parks, tourists who left behind them one hundred million dollars. The interesting feature was that formerly these self-same tourists went to Europe.

The French Government has brought into being a new portfolio known as the National Office of Touring. Most elaborate plans have been completed for the entertaining and housing of tourists.

Certain countries ravished by the war believe that the tourist trade will be so valuable it will in time extinguish their war debt.

Canada, stretching as it does from ocean to ocean, has in its mountains, rivers, lakes and forests indescribable beauties, which are too little known to tourists. Each tourist is invaluable as an advertising medium —and free advertising at that. Oral recommendation spreads rapidly and is invaluable.

.·. CRISP COMMENT ·.

The Mail and Empire does not approve of the new U.F.O. leader, and as soon as the Telegram blisters the hide off him with one of those two-column tirades for which it is famous, he will realize a few of the penalties of greatness.—Toronto Star.

The first trouble the new U.F.O.-Labor Government will experience will be in electing Cabinet Ministers, which may develop a strenuous battle of the ballots between town and country without the presence of a third candidate.

Government House denies absolutely a Toronto evening paper story that Drury was called by mail to form a government. Drury being a farmer, the city paper no doubt thought he would be in the mail order class, but the Lieut.-Gov. does not generally pick his premiers in the mail order department.

The U.F.O.-Labor coalition is peculiar in more ways than one. For instance, the U.F.O. is bone-dry, while the Labor party favor gentle showers of beer and wine. Then the Labor party stands for a short working week and a shorter working day, beginning at eight hours and scaling down. The farmers want a long day and a long week and are not at all friendly to the short day-short week agitation which sows unrest in the breast of the farm laborer and seduces him from the pleasures of farm life to the attractions of the bright lights of Broadway.

When The Day Is Over

When the household cares and the worries of everyday life have dragged you down, made you unhappy, and there is nothing in life but headache, backache and worry, turn to the right prescription, one gotten up by Dr. Pierce fifty years ago.

Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, irregularities, inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root and Oregon grape root. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it, in liquid or tablet form.

"Come on, let's finish the work," is the soldiers' slogan as applied to the Victory Loan campaign. Only the successful flotation of the Victory Loan will accomplish this gigantic task.

The Hearst Premiership.

Toronto Star (Lib.)

The Government headed by Sir William Hearst has been defeated at the polls, but the reputation of the Premier remains untarnished. He brought good capacity, honesty of purpose, fine ideals, and splendid courage to the task of administration, and gave of his best. He left nothing undone that might be of service to the soldiers overseas. It speaks much for Sir William's poise and manliness that he accepts the verdict of the people without berating them for ingratitude or lack of ordinary appreciation of good work. It is one of the ironies of political history that the temperance measure, on which Sir William staked his political existence and which was responsible for his retirement to private life met with the overwhelming endorsation of the electorate. We cannot help feeling that had the temperance people of this Province known of the extent of the risk taken by Sir William when he imposed war-time prohibition on his own Cabinet, of the determined efforts of some of his supporters in the House to supplant him in the leadership, and of the general intention of the "wet" Conservatives to punish him for his temerity, they would have rallied to his support.

"How can you say such a thing?" she exclaimed. "You know we've never been able to keep one long enough to get familiar with her!"

Mistaken Identity.

"I've no doubt about this case," said the lawyer's clerk to his chief. "One look at the fellow over there convinces me that he is guilty."

"Hush!" said the lawyer, nervously. "That's the counsel for the defence."

Pretty Girl's Definition.

Said the professor: "A kiss is a noun,
But is it proper or common, Miss Lee?"
With cheeks like roses and eyes cast down,
"I think it is both," answered she.

THE DYING OF PERE PIERRE.

• • • With two other priests, the same night he died, and was buried by the shores of the lake that bears his name.—Chronicle.

Nay, grieve not that you can no honor give
To these poor bones that presently must be
But carrion; since I have sought to live
Upon God's earth, as He hath guided me,
I shall not lack! Where would ye have me lie?
High heaven is higher than cathedral nave.
Do men print chancels fairer than the sky?
Beside the darkened lake they made his grave,
Below the altar of the hills; and night
Swung incense clouds of mist in creeping lines
That twisted through the tree trunks, where the light
Groped through the arches of the silent pines;
And he, beside the lowly path he trod,
Lay tombed in splendor, in the house of God.

—John McCrea.

THE LAST SONG.

"Violin, you must sing tonight as you never sang before,
Now the wedding guests assemble and are knocking at her door,
From the garden of lost dreams, in the starlight, you and I,
We will seek for Lethe's streams when the happy bride goes by."

(Sing, O bitter voice of pain.)

"Sing, and let your tones awake her sleeping soul that will forsake her,
Her who chose the lesser part,
Her, who had the moonlight, starlight and the glamor of Love's firelight,
High priestess of Mammon's art."

(Sing, O sing the Love that's slain.)

One who tarried at the casement, bowed her head in deep abasement,
Listened to the music long:
Ah, faint-hearted never, never, will those tones from memory sever,
For you music died forever with the closing of his song.

—Kate Colquhoun.

IF YOU HAVE DOUBT ASK YOUR BANK MAN

He Will Advise You What to do in Regard to Your Savings Account.

If you have any doubts as to the advisability of taking your money out of the savings bank and investing it in Victory Bonds, ask your friend in the bank. Your money will be earning more for you instead of for the bank. That is all the difference, for there cannot be any doubt as to the Nation's promise to pay being as good as that of the bank.

If your money is left in the bank it will be lazily earning three per cent for you. If you put it into Victory Bonds it will be placed in circulation where it will earn you five and one half per cent, as well as maintaining for you whatever benefits you are receiving from the prosperous conditions prevailing from coast to coast. The latter fact is of great moment. Unless the Victory Loan 1919 proves to be a bumper, the prosperity of the country will be placed in jeopardy and you might soon find it necessary to withdraw your savings from the bank for a less pleasing purpose than that of buying Victory Bonds.

Familiarity with danger is apt to breed contempt for it.

What The Ontario Labour Party Says

Platform of Workers' Organization Has Some Radical Planks.

In view of the prominence of the Labor group of members of the legislature in forming a government in alliance with the U. F. O., it formally declared political faith acquires a new interest.

This is the platform of the Independent Labor party of Ontario organized less than three years ago, and under whose auspices all but one of the newly elected Labor members were candidates

"The object of the Independent Labor party of Ontario is to promote the political, economic and social interests of people who live by their labor, mental or manual, as distinguished from those who live by profit upon the labor of others.

"Therefore, we have established a permanent provincial organization in order that we may act in co-operation, as far as possible with independent political organizations of the farmers and the producing class, for the purpose of electing men or women who will stand by the democratic principle of a working class movement with all that the term implies.

The public ownership of all public utilities and natural sources of wealth.

Nationalization of the banking and credit systems; direct legislation through the initiative referendum and recall; gradual elimination of unearned increment through a tax on land values; equal pay for equal work; abolition of property qualifications for all municipal offices abolition of all election deposits.

Proportional representation with grouped constituencies; no court to be legally competent to declare as unconstitutional any act of the Parliament of Canada; amending the British North America Act, in order that the decisions of the highest court of appeal in Canada shall be final in all matters, civil and political.

That adequate equal pensions be granted to all disabled soldiers, either officers or men, or their widows and dependents; pensions for mothers with dependent children; old age pensions; creation of national reserves of coal and lumber; government control of cold storage; national health and unemployment insurance; maternity benefits and free hospital service, equality of opportunity for men and women, politically, socially and industrially.

The eight hour work day; the democratic control of industry; abolition of the Canadian Senate; free and compulsory education, including text books; free education in all institutions controlled by the Government.

Every child to be guaranteed from its birth until it becomes a self-supporting member of society, the material necessities of life, medical supervision and an unlimited education.

U. F. O. HOPE TO BEAT KING IN NORTH YORK

NEWMARKET, Nov. 3.—Farmers of North York say they are preparing to make Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King sorry that he accepted the Liberal nomination for that riding. Next Saturday they meet in Newmarket to discuss the advisability of opposing the Leader of the Liberals. They will likely nominate their candidate.

Instead of being disheartened at their failure to elect a farmer in the Provincial elections, the farmers are jubilant at the prospect of defeating the Liberal Leader in his own riding.

Two men are mentioned as the probable choice of the United Farmers. R. W. E. Burnaby, the Holstein king, President of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, is reported to be the most likely choice, but Cameron Curry, a Newmarket farmer is also said to be in the field Both these men were nominated for the Provincial contest, but retired in favor of S. P. Foote.

LEONARD MERRICK

'It always is,' she said. 'The agreements are always drawn up, and signed, and written in invisible ink. I don't seem to remember the time when that young man wasnt' coming out "next spring," and I knew him in his cradle. He was an affected horror then.'

Kent laughed to himself in walking home; he had suspected the accuracy of the proud parents' statements before, just as he suspected when he had been invited to meet an operatic celebrity at dinner at The Hawthorns who sent the telegram of excuse which was shown him to explain the non-arrival of the star. He wondered how much the Walfords' foolishness and his pupil's vanity had been worth to the Italian singing-master, who gesticulated about the drawing and foretold such triumphs.

When he re-entered No. 64, he was relieved to find the company quite cheerful again; they even seemed to be in high spirits, and the cause was promptly ascertained. Cynthia pointed radiantly to a letter that was lying on the table.

'For you,' she cried, 'from "Cousins." Read it quickly; we're all dying of impatience, but I wouldn't open it. How did you leave Aunt Emily?'

'She is going to bed,' he said, tearing the envelope apart.

His heart had leapt, and he only trusted he was not destined to be damped by the suggested price. The others sat eagerly regarding him, waiting for him to speak. Cynthia tried to guess the amount by his expression.

'Well,' said Mrs. Walford at last—'well? What do they say?'

Kent put the note down slowly with a face from which all the color had gone. His lips snook, and his voice was not under control as he answered.

'They haven't accepted it,' he said huskily; 'they are returning it to me. They don't think it's good.'

'What?' she ejaculated

'Oh. Humphrey!' she heard Cynthia gasp; and then there was some seconds in which he was conscious that everyone was staring at him, and would have given a five-pound note to be in the room alone. That Messrs. Cousins might refuse the book after such reviews as had been written upon his last was a calamity that he had never contemplated, and he felt absolutely paralyzed and speechless. When he had been despondent he had imagined the publishers, proposing to pay a couple of hundred pounds for it; when he had been gloomier still, he had fancied the sum would be a hundred and fifty; in moments of profound depression he had even groaned, 'I shan't obtain a shilling more for it than I did for the other one.' But to be rejected, 'declined with thanks,' was a shock for which he was totally unprepared. It almost dazed him.

'What do you mean?'' demanded Sam Walford, breaking the silence angrily. 'Not accepting it? But—but this is a fine sort of thing! It takes you a year to write, and then they don't accept it. A dam good business you're in upon my word!'

'Hush, Sam!' said Mrs. Walford. 'What do they say? What reason do they give? Let me look.'

Kent handed her the letter mutely, his wife watching him with startled compassionate eyes, and she read it aloud:

' "Dear Sir,

" 'We are obliged for the kind offer of your MS., to which our most careful consideration has been given.'

'Been better if they'd considered it a little less,' remarked Walford).

' "We regret to say, however, that, in view of our reader's report, we are deluctantly forced to decide that the construction of the story precludes any hope of its succeeding. The faults seem inherent to the story, and irremediable, and ~~we are~~ therefore returning the MS. to you today with our compliment and thanks.' "

"Ha, ha!" said Kent, wildly: "they return it with their compliments!"

"I don't see anything to laugh at," said his mother-in-law with temper; "I call it dreadful! Anything but funny, I'm sure."

"Do you think so?" he asked. "I call it very funny. There's a touch of humor about their 'compliments' that would be hard to beat."

"Ah," said Walford disagreeably, "your mother-in-law's sense of humor isn't so keen and "literary" as yours. She only sees that your year's work isn't worth a tinker's curse!"

"Papa!" murmured Cynthia, wincing.

Kent's mouth closed viciously.

"Against your judgment on such a matter, sir," he said, "of course there can be no appeal.

"It ain't my judgment," answered Walford; "it's your own publishers'. It's no good putting on the sarcastic, my boy. Here"—he caught up the letter as he spoke, and slapped it—"here you've got the opinion of a practical man, and he tells you the thing's valueless. There's no getting away from facts."

"And I say the thing's strong, sound work," exclaimed Kent "and the reader's an ass! Oh, what's the use of arguing with you! You see it rejected and so to you it's rubbish; and when you see it paid for, to you it will be very good. I want some whiskey—has "Aunt Emily" drunk it all?" He helped himself liberally, and invited his father-in-law to follow his example. Walford shook his head with a grunt. "You won't have a drink? I will; I want to return thanks for Messrs. Cousins' compliments. It's very flattering to receive compliments from one's publishers. I'm afraid you none of you appreciate it as much as you ought. We are having a very jolly evening, aren't we, with hysterics and rejections? And whiskey's good for both. Well, sir, what have you got to say next?"

"I think we'll say 'good-night' " said Mrs. Walford coldly; "I will be round in the morning, Cynthia. Come Sam, it's past ten."

She rose and put on her cape, Kent assisting her. The stock-jobber took leave of him with a scowl; and when the last adieu had been exchanged, Cynthia and the unfortunate author stood on the hearth vis-a-vis. The girl was relieved that her parents were gone. The atmosphere had been electric, and made her nervous of what might happen next. She had been looking forward, besides to consoling him when the door closed—to his lying in her arms under her kisses, while she smoothed away his mortification. She could enter into his mood to-night better than she had entered into any of them, yet, and she ached with pity for him. To turn to his wife on any matters connected with his work, however never entered his head any more, so that when she murmured deprecatingly "Papa didn't mean anything by what he said, darling. I know; you mustn't be vexed with him" all he did was to reply, "Oh, he hasn't made an enemy for life, my dear! If you are going up to your room, now, I think I'll take a stroll."

She said, "Do, and—and cheer up;" but her heart sank miserably. He dropped a kiss on her cheek with a response as feeble as her own, and went out.

Cynthia did not go up to her room at once. She sat down beside the dying fire and ruminated. She asked herself—in the hour in which she had come mentally nearest to him—if, after all, Humphrey and she were united so closely as she had supposed.

Daughters of Canada

The mother, the nurse, the women with the needle, the ambulance driver, the canteen worker, the "farmerette" and the daughters of industry in factory, office and store—all—inspired the manhood and ennobled the womanhood of Canada by their labours of love and sacrifice in the days of the nation's anguish—now happily past.

And their response, to give and to lend of their money time and time again—was beyond all praise.

And—Canada—being mindful of their past example—and conscious of their all-pervading influence again asks her Countrywomen to buy Victory Bonds. Yes, she asks them to buy them, even at the sacrifice of some cherished longed-for purchase.

It is self denial to do without something that will lend background to ones charm, but the time is not long and the debts of honour must be paid.

There is another thought, too, that wives and mothers will appreciate. The success of the Victory Loan makes for Prosperity. Steady employment is dependent upon prosperity. Without prosperity uncertainty will follow.

Hence Canada sounds a clarion call to her daughters for their aid in making an abundant success of the Victory Loan 1919.

POKER LEGAL IF NO RAKE-OFF

Renfrew, Nov. 3.—Renfrew Town Council finds that it cannot stop male citizens from playing poker. A crusade against poker in Renfrew has fallen down because of a technicality in the law.

Women complained to Mayor Bolan that their husbands were losing money through indulging in the game. A detective was brought to town, and the Council was supplied with names, dates and places. Everything was ready for arrests when the Town Solicitor advised against court proceedings unless it could be shown that the persons on whose premises the gambling occurred were taking a "rake-off".

The detective found that nobody was thus profiting. Now the Council finds itself just where it began, but with considerable information as to how poker is played in Ontario communities.

BRINGING UP FATHER

A new Gus Hill production is always a welcome adjunct to the concern of the public. This season, Mr. Hill will present an entirely new version of "Bringing Up Father" series which will be seen at Griffin's next Friday night with the usual matinees. It is in three acts and entitled "Bringing Up Father In Society' 'and as universally known is based on the popular cartoons of George McManus. The latest attraction is said to provide unusual entertainment of the kind that lingers and at the same time supplying a much needed novelty in the way of modern theatricals. The offering is replete with numerous unique features vaudeville specialties, surprises lilting jingling, and catchy melodies, pert and snappy comedy and besides embraces a large cast of thirty odd people who have been engaged for their special talents and experience. Of course, "Mother" and the other favorite characters will be on hand to enliven the proceedings.

TOM MIX AT PALACE TO-NIGHT

Belleville admirers of Tom Mix, the famous screen star, who have been thrilled by his daring horsemanship, will be pleased to learn that this sterling actor will be seen here at the Palace to-night to Wednesday, matinee daily in "Fame and Fortune," which is described as one of the most stirring and breath-taking dramas that he has yet enacted. In "Fame and Fortune" Mix portrays the role of a young man, who, about to be cheated out of his inheritance, fights an organized conspiracy and wins. A new Luke comedy and a thrilling and interesting chapter of Vitagraph's thrilled packed serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain" are also announced for exhibition.

ONE MORE AMERICAN

"One More American" is the title of George Beban's latest filmplay which is being exhibited at Griffin's to-night to Wednesday. Mr. Beban will be remembered by local photoplay lovers through his splendid Italian characterizations in "An Alien," and "The Sign of a Rose" etc. In his latest play he again portrays an Italian character, that of Pietro Tenute and critics everywhere are a unit in acknowledging it to be his masterpiece. A funny 2-act Mack Sennett comedy "The Dentist," Pathe Review and a 2-act dramatic whirlwind of the great West are also being presented.

KEEPING IN TRIM

Keeping in trim for stunts before the camera is the hardest part of a picture star's life, according to Charles Hutchinson, co-star with Anne Luther in the new thrilling "stunt" serial which starts at the Palace this Thursday to Saturday. The gymnasium is the "stunt," star's school and Hutch never misses a day there. If he is to climb a rope in the picture, he spends considerable time climbing ropes in the gymnasium. For his work in "The Great Gamble" he practised underwater swimming until he could remain under three minutes; he practised mounting a horse until he could put himself in a saddle with one leap and in addition he mastered automobile and motorcycle driving and riding until he could make either type of machine do almost as many stunts as he can do himself.

TARZAN OF THE APES

That superman 'Tarzan of the Apes' again makes his appearance this time on the film at Griffin's this Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday Readers of the novel of the same title by Edgar Rice Burroughs, will recall that Tarzan, infant son of white parents is stolen by a trible of apes, raised as one of the trible, lived in trees, fought and conquered lions, tigers, apes and cannibals and in short, lived as a beast. The pictured version follows closely the plot of the book and is one of the weirdest and most interesting pictures that will be shown in Belleville in some time. Elmo Lincoln plays Tarzan and Enid Bennett is the girl in the case.

AIRPLANES TO SUBDUE TRIBESMEN

Simla, India, Nov. 3.—Owing to the hostility of Waziris and Mahsuds during and since the Afghanistan trouble, it has become necessary to adopt measures to prevent continued attacks on British posts and convoys, and raids into British territory.

Representatives of these tribes are being summoned to hear the British terms. In the event of their non-compliance with the terms they will be given time to remove women and children, and will then be subjected to a period of intense aerial bombardment, which will be followed by other punitive measures against sections of the tribes implicated in the recent outrages.

Six infantry brigades, as well as cavalry and artillery, commanded by Major-Gen. Climo, are being employed.

The warlike activities of the Waziri and Mahsud tribesmen along the Northwest Indian frontier, which has drawn an ultimatum from the British, are an outgrowth of the warfare in Afghanistan. As a result of the Afghan attacks last spring, the British were forced to withdraw their military posts from Waziristan, tribal territory between British India and Afghanistan. These posts were never reoccupied, and the savage tribesmen, who had been kept in order by the presence of the British, have carried out raids into British territory. The Indian Government therefore proposes to take punitive measures unless the tribesmen submit to the terms of the ultimatum.

Col. H.T. Dawson For Distrist No.3

Colnel H. J. Dawson, C.M.G., D. S. O., and bar, Crois de Guerre Belgium, and associate professor of mathematics at the Royal Military College, has been appointed General Staff Officer, M.D. No. 3, succeeding Brigadier-General H. J. S. Maunsell.

Colonel Dawson was born in England. In 1901 he became associate professor of mathematics at the Royal Military College. When the war broke out in 1914, he was Lieut.-Colonel of the 14th Regiment P.W.O.R. He immediately volunteered for service over seas, but was placed in command at Fort Henry, where he served from August 1914 till May 1915, when he relinquished his command to organize the 59th Battalion, C. E. F. He took the battalion to England and went to France, where he was placed in command of the 46th battalion, serving as commander for two and a half years with distinction and taking part in many engagements, including the Ypres Sallent 1916, the Somme battles of 1916, the capture of the Regina Trench system. He held the line on Vimy Ridge in the winter of 1916-17, took part in the capture of Hill No. 145, the Pimplo and the Vimy battle in April 1917.

In recognition of his services he was created a C. M. G. and awarded the D. S. O. with bar and the Belgium Croix de Guerre. Col. Dawson returned to Canada upon the withdrawal of the army of occupation and the general demobilization of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and received a very warm reception upon his arrival home. His record was one of which his friends and the citizens of Kingston generally are proud, and his appointment to the District Headquarters' Staff is a very popular one.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (6)

E. C. Drury, leader of the United Farmers, will call on the Lieut.-Governor today if his coalition cabinet has been arranged for.

FORWARD MOVEMENT

Rev. Canon Bedford-Jones, of Brockville, addressed large congregations yesterday at St. Thomas Church in the morning and Christ Church in the evening. Rev. Canon Bedford-Jones is Diocesan Organizer of the Forward Movement, and is awakening much interest in the work of the church through his earnestness and vivid portrayal of the needs and opportunities of Christian work at home and abroad. Canon Jones is the popular Rector of St. Peter's Church, Brockville, but has recently resigned to accept the Principalship of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, much to the regret of his parishioners and the citizens of Brockville generally.

ONTARIO EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

The Trades & Labor Branch of the Ontario Government reports that in the past week its Public Empolyment Bureaus have received applications for work from 1002 soldiers and 1362 civilians. During the week they have placed in positions 717 soldiers and 1018 civilians.

The demand for workers is largest in general labouring and lumbering though there is a steady call for help in the building trades, metal trades and wood-working. The number of applications for farm work is far behind the number of orders for men on the books.

The situation in the women's department remains largely unchanged. Applications for commercial positions number 94 of whom 20 were placed; for domestic work 106 applied and 56 were placed. There are large numbers of good openings for women and girls in factories, especially in the manufacture of food, metal, paper and textiles.

STUDENTS HALLOWE'EN

Queen's sudents celebrated Hallowe'en in real old time fashion and had a serious clash with the police. A large number of them are nursing sore heads as a result of coming in contact with clubs in the hands of the police and employees of the Grand Opera House, where the students endeavored to rush the house. A crowd of several hundred made an attempt to get into the playhouse but Manager D. P. Branigan was ready for them and had employes lined up to prevent the students from getting in. A battle royal ensued and a call was sent to the police. Mr. Branigan got a crack on the head but was not knocked out and continued in his work of routing the students and with the aid of the police managed to keep them out. Many of the students were in gay costume for the occasion. They paraded the streets and even though eggs are selling at seventy cents per dozen they had a goodly supply and paid their compliments to many of the store fronts. Some of the policemen received pretty rough treatment.

New ties and steel were laid together with trainload of ballast. The work was in charge of Supervisors of Track Frank Giffin and W. Bibby of Brockville.

BRAKEMAN LOSES LEG

Mr. Allan Johnson, residing on Bleecker Avenue, this city, and who is a spare brakeman in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway, was at an early hour on Sunday morning the victim of a distressing accident. At about 5 o'clock he was in discharge of his duties and was walking in the railway yard here when an engine hauling some cars hove in sight. The engine was emitting steam to a considerable extent and it is apparent that Johnson thought he was clear of the track, but such was not the case. He was knocked down and a wheel passed over his right leg mangling it in such a manner that it had to be amputated above the ankle. The unfortunate man was as soon as possible conveyed to the hospital by the ambulance, where his injuries were attended to.

Values It More Than A Fortune

Power Gains Eighteen Pounds—Rheumatism Disappears After Taking Tanlac.

"I consider what Tanlac has done for me to be worth more than a fortune," said George Power of Halifax, N.S., while talking to the Tanlac representative a few days ago. Mr. Power lives at 20½ Rottenberg St., Halifax, has lived in Nova Scotia all his life and is a well known employee of the Nova Scotia Tram and Power Co.

"I've actually gained eighteen pounds since taking Tanlac, and I feel better in every way than I have in twenty-eight long years, and what's more I have spent hundreds and hundred of dollars on medicines and never got a particle of good until I found Tanlac," continued Mr. Power.

"I had rheumatism in both my legs from the knees down, and in damp weather I just had to stay at home from work. My ankles bothered me too, and I don't believe anybody in the world ever suffered from rheumatism as bad as I did for it was just a sharp shooting pain that would go through my knees, down my legs and into my ankles like somebody was sticking a knife through me, and I would be in such agony that I would turn as white as a sheet. When these attacks came on me I wouldn't be able to sleep a wink but would roll and tumble all night long, and my joints would swell and my knees would be as stiff as a board and I couldn't walk a step for two or three days at a time and would be laid up at home flat on my back with my knees so stiff I couldn't bend them at all.

"I noticed where Tandac was being highly recommended by people right here in Halifax, so I decided to try it. And I wouldn't take anything in the world for the good it has done me. If anybody don't believe that I am a well man, and that the rheumatism has left me entirely and that I never feel even a trace of it, just tell them to see me. My appetite has picked up and I have gained in weight and feel better in every way and can sleep fine at night. Tanlac is the greatest thing I have ever seen, and I want you to publish this statement for I want everybody to know what this medicine will do."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vance, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

Fixed Assessment Granted By City Council To New Industry

GAS MANAGER GARDINER'S RESIGNATION ACCEPTED ON VOTE OF 6 TO 4—CHAIRMAN OF GAS COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS RETENTION OF MR. GARDINER —OVER-RULED.

At the City Council meeting last evening a recommendation that the resignation of Mr. Gardiner, gas manager, be accepted, was adopted after some discussion during which Ald. Simmons, as Chairman of the Gas Committee threatened to resign his seat if he was overruled in the matter.

A resolution was adopted to grant for 10 years an annual assessment of $10,000 to the H. A. Wood Manufacturing Company which company have acquired the old cannrey building on Pinnacle street for an industry. Other business of a general character was transacted during the session.

Members present were Mayor Platt, Aldermen Woodley, Hunter, Bone, Hanna, Treverton, Simmons, Ostrom, Riggs and White.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

Reports of committees, communications, etc., wer laid on the table and on motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on reports, etc. Ald. Ostrom in the chair.

The accounts passed by the various committees were passed and the following recommendations were disposed of:

That the tender of Diamond & Hyde be accepted for 500 feet of 3-4 incch wrought iron at the price of $61.00.—Adopted.

That the quotation of N. Allen be accepted for 50 tons of 3-4 lump coal at $7.40 per ton, delivered in the shed at the pump house.—Adopted.

That Miss Farley be paid $200 per year as assistant tax collector, said salary to date from January 1st, 1918, and an extra $50 for extra work during 1918.—Adopted.

That the salary of the City Clerk be nicreased $200 per year from November 1st, and that he be appointed secretary of the housing committee under the provincial housing scheme. —Adopted.

That an amount of $6 for City Hall rent be refunded to the High School as the concert given was for the purpose of raising funds for a Great War Memorial Scholarship Fund.—Adopted.

Gas Manager's Resignation

The recommendation that the resignation of Mr. Thos. Gardiner as manager of the gas department be accepted.

Mayor Platt desired this matter to be discussed and not rushed through too hurriedly.

Ald. Woodley said it was apparent that Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Cook could not get along together, although at one time it looked as if the matter had been satisfactorily arranged. If we cannot get them to agree sack them both. The Council had not asked Mr. Gardiner for his resignation.

Ald. Simmons thought that the city would make a sacrifice if it allowed Mr. Gardiner to go. If the Council intended to overide him (the speaker) as chairman he would resign.

Mayor Platt—This matter should be seriously considered before the resignation of Mr. Gardiner is acted upon.

Ald. Simmons—Mr. Gardiner should be retained in the position he has always been in. If there is friction between Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Cook it should be removed.

Ald. Hanna—Mr. Gardiner approved of the Bylaw that appointed Mr. Cook as gas maker.

Ald. Hunter—Was not the Bylaw appointing Mr. Cook as gas maker changed to some extent.

Ald. Bone—We have evidently reached the point where either Mr. Gardiner or Mr. Cook has to go. If Mr. Gardiner's resignation is accepted Ald. Simmons should not resign.

Ald. Simmons—It appears to me that as chairman of the gas department, I am being overrun by members of the Council. I have not been consulted once by Mr. Cook.

Ald. Riggs—The Council instead of strengthening Mr. Gardiner's hands had weakened them. A manager should have control over the gas plant.

Ald. Woodley moved that the resignation be accepted.

Ald. Riggs moved in amendment that the resignation be not accepted.

Upon a vote being taken the amendment was defeated 4 voting for it, and 6 against it.

The yeas and nays on the motion were called for, resulting as follows:

Yeas—Bone, Hanna, Ostrom, Treverton, White and Woodley.—6.

Nays—Mayor Platt Aldermen Hunter, Riggs and Simmons.

City Hall Rental

Mr. Forhan addressed the Council in refernce to the City Hall being rented for certain theatrical attractions. He considered that it was not fair to the Griffin opera house management which was forced to pay vey high taxes.

Ald. Hunter—Should the Griffin's Company have a monopoly of the show business?

The matter was referred to the Market and City Property Committee.

Want a Concession

Mr. Geo. A. Bennett addressed the Council stating that he proposed to build a residence on Coleman street, but desired to use it for a carpenter shop temporarily, but could not do so under the residential building bylaw.

The matter was referred to the city engineer and Chairman of Public Works with power to act.

Want Water

Mr. A. Skinner said he desired to erect two houses on Ellis Street, east Belleville, but there was no water within 104 feet. He asked the Council to put in a service.

The matter was left in the hands of the Chairman of Water Works.

Mrs. Naylor who resides outside the eastern city limits addressed the members of the Council asking that body to try and do something for the children who live on the street just outside the city. The Board of Education of the city want $25 per year for each pupil which attend the city school and this was too much of a burden. The only other place the children could attend school was near Albert College, a long distance.

Mayor Platt—The Council cannot override the School Board. We can speak to them in reference to the matter.

Ald. oBne—Could we not extend the city to take in this street??

The matter was left in abeyance for a motion to be introduced.

Sewer Wanted

A petition was presented for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Everett Street. Referred to the City Engineer, City Assessor and City Clerk to see if properly signed.

Bakeries Inspected

A report was presented by Messrs. B. R. Quincey and T. F. Mills relative to the inspection of bake shops in the city, all of which were found to be in a sanitary condition.—Ordered to be filed.

Ald. Bone reported that the Heaton Agency would go on with a publicity campaign in this city. This was the result of a conference with the Board of Trade and the Special Committee of the Council.

Building Wanted

Mr. E. D. Finkle on behalf of the G. W. V. A. asked about the old Pinnacle Street School building and if the War Veterans could get it.

Ald. Woodley—The matter will be definitely decided in a few days and the G.W.V.A. would be notified.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Enquiries

Ald. Simmons—Is Mr. Post the only inspector of seeing that sewer and other pipes are properly laid?

Mr. Henderson—He has been about 3 weeks on the job on Cedar Street. There should be an inspector or all such work done.

Ald. Simmons asked why the granolithic walk on the south side of Catherine street between Octavia and Isabel streets had not been attended to?

City Clerk—The petition has not been properly signed.

Ald. Bone asked if a storm sewer could not be built on Bridge street east from Pinnacle street to Bleecker Avenue.

Ald. Woodley—The engineer should be consulted in the matter.

Ald. Bone—An industry is going to establish itself in the old canning factory and a sewer is necessary. Would the Public Works construct a sewer?

Ald. Woodley—He would take up the matter with the engineer.

Ald. Bone—Pinnacle street is in a deplorable condition in front of the canning factory building. Cannot something be done to repair the street.

Ald. Woodley—I will see.

Ald. Bone asked the City Clerk if there had been anything from Picton and Ameliasburg Township about the Bay Bridge.

City Clerk—No reply.

Ald. Bone—What about the site for the Oakoal Company which proposes to locate here?

Ald. Woodley—We have a site in view which we think will do, situated near the gas works.

Ald. Simmons asked if anything was going to be done to Murney's Hill.

Ald. Woodley—We are waiting for a reply from the Ontario Municipal Board. Something will be done.

Motions

Ald. Hunter moved, seconded by Ald Hanna, that as there appears to be some mistake in regard to the methods pursued in the housing committee, that the Mayor, Secretary of the Board and Building Inspector be a deputation to wait on Mr. Ellis the chief architect, tomorrow with a view of straightening out the apparent tangle

Moved by Ald. Bone, seconded by Ald. Hanna, that the H. A. Wood Manufacturing Company, Ltd., be granted a fixed assessment on the property known as the Dominion Canners building, at $10,000 for a period of 10 years, commencing with the year 1920, provided the company continue to operate.—Carried.

Ald. Bone moved, seconded by Ald. White, that the City Clerk write the School Board asking if they can do anything to relieve the situation on Bull Street, whereby residents there could have their children's school fee reduced from $25 to $15.—Carried.

Ald. Simmons moved, seconded by Ald. Ostrom thta a committee consisting of Aldermen Riggs, White, Ostrom and Hunter be appointed to investigate a suitable location for the Oakoal Company.—Carried.

Council adjourned.

Unemployment Is Up Before Labor Session

Commission Suggested When Eucador Got Ready to Force Issue.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The question of unemployment occupied the attention of the delegates to the International Labor Conference yesterday. The steering committee moved the appointment of a commission to study the problem when it became known that the delegates from Equador were ready to introduce a resolution providing compulsory employment in all countries.

Consideration by the commission of the "economic social and legal points of view" of the unemployment question was suggested by Viscount De Eza, Spanish Government delegate. He was supported by Francsk Sokal, of Poland.

Boy Shoots Chum Then Himself

Accidentally Kills His Companion and Ends His Own Life.

SARNIA, Nov. 4.—Laboring under the apprehension that he might have to fact trial for the death of his chum, Joseph R. Barnes, aged 16, who was accidentally killed while on a hunting expedition in the woods near the town of Alvinston on Saturday afterroon, it is believed that John A. Horspool, also aged 16, turned the rifle on himself, death resulting almost instantaneously.

According to information received in this city, Barnes and Horspool, who reside a short distance from the town of Alvinston, accompanied by several other boy chums, started out on a to face trial for the death of his chum, distance in the woods they sighted a squirrel, and armed with .32 calibre rifles stood one on each side of the tree awaiting its descent. When the squirrel descended, Horspool fired, but instead of snuffing out the life of the furry creature, the bullet found lodgment in Barnes' brain, causing almost instant death.

As Barnes fell, Horspool ran away, stating he was going for medical assistance. His last words were: "I've killed him, I've killed him." A minute later his companions heard another shot, quite near by. An investigation was held and the body of Horspool was found with a gaping wound through his head. His body was but hunting trip. After journeying a short companion, accidentally killed by the same gun.

The funerals of both youths were held yesterday, but the whole countryside has been stirred up over the tragedy as both boys were well known throughout the county.

Boy Found After 5 Years Search

Parents Had Given Up, Hope When Son is Found With American Forces.

To suddenly disappear from home as if the earth had opened and swallowed him, and to turn up five years later, after his relatives had given him up for dead, is the experience of James Kenneth Duval of Simcoe, Ont., who left his home December 3, 1914, when his request was refused by his parents.

Duval was a second form student at the Simcoe high school, tipping the scales at 145 pounds, and well over the average size for a youth of his years, when he endeavored to gain his parents consent to serve his country overseas. He left without any warning, and for five long years the search was continued without avail. His relatives finally concluded he had gone to France and there made the supreme sacrifice.

Fate, however, was kinder to Kenneth Duval. A few days ago his mother received a letter written by her boy to a chum, from Germany, where he is now with the American army of occupation. The letter stated that the runaway was in the best of health and thoroughly enjoying his job with Uncle Sam.

Mrs. Duval has written to the unit commander of her son's regiment, and hopes soon to be in direct communication with the missing lad.

Vets Serve Warning On Dominion Members

Mean Business on the Gratuity Question—Held Rally in Massey Hall.

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—Veterans of Toronto packed Massey Hall yesterday afternoon to hear Colonel John A. Currie, M.P., and others discuss political issues affecting returned soldiers, prominent among which was the gratuity question and the actions of the Parliamentary Committee. The meeting was held under the auspices of the United Veterans League and open to all veterans and their dependents.

Two resolutions were passed, one that the meeting pledge itself to compass the defeat of the Government and every member of Parliament who speaks or votes in favor of the report presented by the Parliamentary Committee, and the other that it was opposed to the best interest of good government to have any coalition between the United Farmers of Ontario and the defeated Government party or any individual members of it. It also tendered its congratulation to members successful in the election, who had been endorsed by the United Veterans' League and expressly to Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., to whom the resolution declared, the defeat of Hearst was specially due. It was ordered that the first resolution be forwarded to all the Toronto and country members.

There was a long list of speakers in addition to Colonel Currie, including the Rev. Bertram Nelles, the local pastor, Sergt. S. Andrews, who holds the record for the number of recruits obtained for the C. E. F., H. Capewell, W. J. Carmichael and J. Harry Flynn. All touched on the necessity of unity among the veterans and of the vast possibilities of a political power rightly directed. Rev. Bertram Nelles opened the meeting by leading the crowd in the Lord's Prayer and stating his opinion that behind the movement of the soldiers, which was a just one, was the belief that there was a God and that right would triumph.

FARMERS' VIEW OF LABOR CALL UNIONS PROFITEERS

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 4.—The short workday and the ever-increasing wages demanded by industrial labor were declared to be "allies off the profiteer in keeping up the high cost of living" in a resolution adopted today by the Farmers' National Congress at its final session. The congress also went on record as opposed to "all strikes."

The resolution expressing opposition to organized labor's methods was adopted over the protests of a small minority of wrought-up farmers, who withdrew from the congress after the vote on the resolution. Speakers for this minority raised a furore in the convention hall during consideration of the resolution and asserted that all organized labor was engaged in a struggle for its just rights and should have the full sympathy and support of the farmers of America.

"We know that the forty-four hour week cannot feed the world and we proclaim that it cannot clothe it," the resolution adopted further declares, "Those who advocate the short day in industry should not expect the farmer to work 'six hours before dinner and six hours after' with before-breakfast and after-supper hours thrown in."

While pledging a helping hand to 'honest organized labor,' the resolution condemned the 'treason of false leaders who for pay and price would scuttle the ship of State and rear the red age of Bolshevism over the ranks of an outraged and fallen Republic.'

In declaring opposition to 'all strikes' the congress went on record as favoring a Federal board of arbitration that would give both capital and labor a 'square deal.'

Canada To Share In Coal Output

Will Be No Discrimination Against Canada by United States.

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—There will be no discrimination against Canada in the matter of coal supply from the United States, the Government has been informed, and Canada will have her share of the output the same as before.

Considerable uneasiness is felt in many quarters, however, if the strike a few yards from that of his dead supplies already on hand, in which United States would be materially

New Belleville Industry Takes Over Cannery Building

H. A. WOOD MFG. CO., LIMITED, CAPITALIZED AT ONE MILLION DOLLARS, WILL OCCUPY CANNERY BUILDING ON PINNACLE STREET FOR MANUFACTURE OF HIGH PRESSURE VALVES—LOCAL AND OUTSIDE CAPITAL INTERESTED.

Arrangements have just been completed whereby the H. A. Wood Mfg. Co., Ltd., secures possession of the Cannery building on South Pinnacle St. This is quite a large three-storey building and the above company will immediately commence installing machinery for the manufacture of automobile valves and other valves for high pressure work. This company owns the Canadian rights of the Wood Airtight Valve Co., Ltd., and is capitalized at $1,000,000. The American rights have just been disposed of to a very strong group of capitalists in New York and the American company will be capitalized at $10,000,000.

The principal men interested in the Belleville company are Dr. I. G. Bogart, of Kingston, who is well known in Belleville; Mr. Henry Hangrove, also of Kingston; Mr. S. W. Jenckes, manufacturer, of Sherbrooke, Que., and St. Catharines, Ont.; Mr. Jas. R. Ness, grain merchant, Toronto; Mr. M. G. Hunt, barrister, Toronto; Mr. L. E. Denyes, of Toronto, and Mr. R. J. Graham, of Belleville.

It is expected that when the factory gets going to full capacity during the next year probably about 300 men will be employed. For the present the company will not require all the room that is available in their new building and it is likely that arrangements will be concluded to rent some space to another manufacturing concern.

Mysterious "Mr. Flynn" Being Sought By Col. E.D. O'Flynn

STRANGER WHO IMPERSONATED J. HARRY FLYNN, SOLDIERS GRATUITY CHAMPION, DURING RECENT ELECTION IN BELLEVILLE, IS WANTED—CHECK TO EXPLAIN AND UNPAID BILLS.

An echo of the recent election campaign in West Hastings came in a Canadian Press Limited despatch from Toronto yesterday to The Intelligencer, stating that J. Harry Flynn, President of the United Veterans Association, had denied that he was the man who appeared in Belleville during the last days of the campaign, ostensibly to line the local soldiers up in favor of the proposed Flynn gratuity, but in reality to assist the Liberal candidate in his campaign.

A man representing himself as J. Harry Flynn, the noted advocate of gratuities for soldiers, came to Belleville the Saturday preceding the election and stayed until Monday. He was enthusiastically received by a number of returned soldiers and advertised a meeting for Monday evening, which it is said was never held. He met a number of returned soldiers and told them that the Liberal candidate was in favor of the Flynn gratuity plan, and not against it as it was supposed.

Newspaper advertising and posters were used to inform the returned soldiers that J. Harry Flynn was here and would hold a meeting. After the departure of the supposed Flynn complaint was made that he had passed a check upon a returned soldier for $25 which was returned, there not being funds to meet it. It is alleged that the stranger used his connection with the Liberal candidates campaign to secure the cash on the check, also credit at a local printing office, and a hotel bill. The alleged Flynn was a young man, short sharp and smooth shaven, neatly dressed and a good talker. He complained very bitterly of his treatment at Ottawa in connection with the gratuity. He had also in his possession a letter written by a Belleville lady to the real J. Harry Flynn in Toronto.

The police were notified in connection with the check transaction and Toronto was communicated with. J. Harry Flynn denied that he had been in Belleville, and established an alibi to the satisfaction of the Toronto police. Col. E. D. O'Flynn visited Toronto yesterday and after looking over the real J. Harry Flynn decided that he was not the man who was in Belleville.

Returned soldiers in Belleville are indignant at the deception practised upon them, and the fact that a returned soldier will have to make good the stranger's check for twenty-five dollars. There are rumors of other incidents in connection with the visit of the mysterious stranger but as yet they lack confirmation.

There are some questions which the general public would like to have answered, including the following:

Whence came the stranger and what were his credentials??

Was he one of a set of Flynn duplicates sent out from some political organization to assist returned soldier candidates?

How much was he paid for his election work here and who paid him?

If he was working for the local Liberal organization, why did that organization not pay his bills? If they accepted him at his face value and accepted his services, why not pay the entire cost of his brief sojourn?

A full statement of the presence and activities of the alleged J. Harry Flynn in Belleville on election day and the two preceding days would seem to be in order.

The following advertisement was inserted in The Intelligencer on Monday, October 20, by the alleged J. Harry Flynn:

> GRATUITY MEETING
> A meeting will be held tonight at Col. O'Flynn's committee rooms Front Street, of all returned soldiers to hear Sergt. J. Flynn discuss the Gratuity question. Col. E. D. O'Flynn is not against the Gratuity question as has been announced. The meeting is open to the public.
> Sergt. J. Flynn.

Toronto papers yesterday referred to the Flynn incident as follows:

Toronto Telegram—Personating J. Harry Flynn, president of the United Veterans League, an unknown man, or whom the police of Ontario and Quebec are now searching, created no little excitement in Belleville, Ont., on election day, where he circularized the city on credit calling a "gratuity meeting" and obtained $25 on a worthless cheque.

The stranger told Lt.-Col. O'Flynn the Liberal candidate, "If you come out and speak for the gratuity I will swing every soldier vote for you."

At Morton and Herity's he had 1000 circulars and 500 cards printed and the bill sent to Toronto. But there was no meeting.

"If I have to go to Halifax, I will do so to have him convicted," says Mr. Flynn who met Lt.-Col. O'Flynn and was freed from any responsibility of the Belleville incident.

Toronto Star—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of an unknown man who is impersonating Harry J. Flynn, president of the United Veterans League. Mr. Flynn has received two bills from Morton and Herity, printers, of Belleville, for printing which Mr. Flynn never ordered.

Maddened by the death of his ape Mother—at the hands of the cannibal chief—TARZAN races through the jungle. Leaping from tree to tree with the speed of a bird—he overtakes the fear stricken black—grasps him in his great hands—and when life has flown, flings him far out into the soggy alligator infested lagoon.. Then TARZAN returns and mourns over his wild ape-Mother as he would over Lady Alice, his real Mother.. Then calling his friend, the elephant, raids the cannibal village and destroys it.. One of the 219 thrills in 'Tarzan of the Apes' at Griffin's this Thursday and Saturday. The strange picture of jungle life and romance is beyond the frontiers of imagination.' Victory Loan Going Strong

The expected has happened.

The Victory Loan campaign proper is on.

Splendid returns, even exceeding those of last year, are rolling into Victory Loan headquarters, yesterday totalling $168,050 and bringing up the county total to $703,950.

Following a week of only indifferent results, the enthusiasm of the people everywhere has at last been aroused, as was expected, and the path looks rosy for the last two weeks of the campaign. We are now only a little more than 2 per cent. below our percentage of time gone and if the present rate is kept up Hastings County has a good chance of beating its last year's record. Canvassers who were pessimistic last week are jubilant now. Teams are working with might and main to bring up their districts in the county standing.

Congratulatory telegrams arrived from Ontario headquarters. News comes that all over the country the sudden change for the better is felt and team members' subscriptions have shown splendid increases. Up to the present Ontario's high total has been kept up by special subscriptions, an unpleasant fact, which caused some depression as to final results. At last the hoped for is happening.

Contest Rages.

The contest between Belleville and Trenton rages. The neighboring town has managed to hold its lead but with difficulty, and the local men hope to get ahead of them within the next few days and hold it. Trenton now has 43.90 per cent. of its objective and Belleville 38.51. Progress for the day for both teams was practically the same with Trenton ahead by a small margin, Belleville with 8.49 and Trenton 8.97. Great interest is being taken in the contest by the canvassers on both sides and it looks like a long drawn out fight.

Flag Race.

In spite of the fact that they brought in the highest day's returns, 22.22 per cent., Messrs. Norman Laing and Arthur Yates, Deloro, are still unable to wrest first place in the Prince o' Wales' Flag race away from Tyendinaga. Messrs. J. F. Hinchey and G. N. Spafford, Tyendinaga, have no less than 74.53 per cent. of its objective, with Deloro close upon them with 70.66.

An indication of the growing interest in the loan in the more isolated districts is the splendid rise of Wellaston, Mr. C. S. Rollins having brought in 9.60 per cent. yesterday. Messrs. Thos. Montgomery, T. F. Thompson and Dr. J. D. Bissonette also made a great showing in Rawdon. They were only slightly below Deloro on the day's returns with 21.14 per cent.

Messrs. Hinchey and Spafford yesterday secured application for $11,500 from the Mohawk Indian Reserve. This is the first time in any loan campaign that such a large amount has come from this locality.

While most canvassing districts are making wonderful showings in comparison with last year there are a few who are not having the same good fortune. Notable among these is Madoc, 15.50 per cent.; Sidney, 17.69 per cent.; and Deseronto, 22.46 per cent. This does not always represent the true effort of the canvassers and it is hoped that they will improve soon, as the others have done.

City Will Not Lose G.T.R. Taxes

The City Council in view of the proposed action of the Dominion Government in taking over the Grand Trunk Railway, was apprehensive that when the railway became Government property it would be subject to exemption from taxation as such, which would mean a large loss of revenue for Belleville. The following telegram sent to the parliamentary representative for West Hastings and his reply thereto indicates that the G.T.R. taxes will still be available even under Government ownership:

To E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P.,
Parliament Buildings, Ottawa.

City Council strongly opposed to Grand Trunk Bill if it does not contain assurance regarding municipal taxation.

J. W. Holmes,
City Clerk.

House of Commons,
Ottawa, Oct. 28, 1919.

J. Wilfred Holmes, Esq.,
City Clerk, Belleville, Ont.
Re Grand Trunk Purchase and Municipal Taxation.

Dear Sir,—Replying to your letter of the 25th herein, and supplementing my telegram of the day before, I beg to advise that the position taken by the Government in this matter is that it is wholly unnecessary to insert any clause in the Bill now before the House for securing the Grand Trunk in regard to the question of taxation.

The physical property of the railway and the title will remain in the Grand Trunk; the Government acquiring the stock and all voting powers. The bill simply gives them the control and operation of the road, and taking the road over in this way does not in any manner affect the right of the municipality to tax the physical property of the railway.

The House has agreed that this interpretation of the Act of the Government is the correct one, and that municipalities need not be alarmed at any change in regard to taxation that may take place.

Yours truly,
E. GUSS PORTER.

Amalgamation Of Cheese Factories

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 3.—The success of the United Farmers in the recent provincial elections has increased the interest in the proposal, which has been under way for some months to form a big dairy company to take over and operate on a co-operative basis many of the cheese factories in Peterboro, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. A meeting of the representatives of the cheese factories in Peterboro County is to be held on Tuesday, November 11, to receive reports from the committee that has been at work upon it. It is likely that steps will then be decided upon to form the company and that a couple of provisional directors will be appointed. As shortly after that as possible it is proposed to hold meetings of the representatives of the cheese factories in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, at which similar reports will be presented and an opportunity will be given to those present to decide if they are in favor of proceeding with the organization of the company.

Arrangements are in the hands of a committee composed of representatives of the United Farmers of Ontario and of the Eastern and Western Ontario Dairymen's time to take over a considerable number of the factories before spring in order that operations may be commenced on a large scale in the spring. The action of the British Ministry of Food in setting the price of cheese last spring without consulting the dairy farmers has given a decided impetus to the formation of this company, as many dairy farmers have become convinced that not until they become organized and look after the marketing of their products themselves will they receive the consideration at the hands of the Government and the buyers that they feel they are entitled to and which was given to the grain growers of the West when the price of grain was fixed both last year and this year. The meetings are being called by Mr. H. B. Cowan of Peterboro, who is the chairman of the committee that has been handling negotiations so far.

New Feature Films At Local Theatres

George Beban in New Italian Play—Tom Mix in Fame and Fortune—Sennett Comedy.

FAME AND FORTUNE

Tom Mix, the sensational portrayer of Western roles, added to his dramatic reputation yesterday, when he was seen in "Fame and Fortune" at the Palace theatre. "Fame and Fortune" is about the most exciting photo play of its kind seen on a local silver sheet in some time and tells of a town that has driven out certain men because they are too good for it. These men gather in a new place and only await a leader to take vengeance on their prosecutors. About this time Tom Mix, as a young man returning home after an absence of years, comes to the town and finds that every effort has been made to cheat him out of his inheritance. He becomes the leader of the discontented element of the new town, and when a girl whom he loves is stolen by the leader of the old town action begins to pile up. "Look Out Below," a funny Luke comedy, British Canadian Pathe News and a thrilling and interesting chapter of the "Perils of Thunder Mountain" are also being shown on the same program.

GRIPPING STORY AT GRIFFIN'S

George Bebau, who has made many friends in Belleville by his wonderful and anteral characterizations, appeared at Griffin's last night in an extremely interest and thrilling picture "One More American" which is easily the best thing Mr. Beban has yet done. The story shows the inner workings of a grafting ward boss and his gang on New York's east side, how he secretly endeavors to stop an honest and industrious Italian from getting his naturalization papers, even going so far as to get one of the members of his "system" who is on the medical board at Ellis Island Immigration Bureau to stop the Italian's wife and child from landing in America from Italy. How his efforts are thwarted in a novel manner by a shrewd cub reporter ably portrayed by Jack Holt proves of unusual interest. The play is one that will hold the attention rivetted to the last inch. "The Dentist" another of those always funny Sennett comedies. Gaumont News, revealing a budget of important events from everywhere and 'Roped In" a peppery Bison 101 ranch picture with Neal Hart in the stellar role completes a splendid varied bill all of which will be repeated again to-night and Wednesday night.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" AT GRIFFIN'S FRIDAY

Those popular comics, "Bringing Up Father," created by George McManus and brought to the realm of the stage by that astute and far-seeing manager Gus Hill, will be the attraction at Griffin's next Friday night. It bears the happy title of "Bringing Up Father In Society" and from all accounts will more than help to ingratiate the popular characters of "Jiggs" "Mahoney", "Mother" and the rest of the Mahoney clan into the hearts of the public. The new play—and it is brand new in every respect, from the scenery to the very pauses to the melodious score—is in three acts and three scenes. As no doubt anticipated it serves to humorously recount the side splitting adventures of "Father" "Mother" "Dinty" et al to "butt" their way into the sacred portals of exclusive society. The seat sale opens at Griffin's next Thursday morning at 10 a.m.

TARZAN OF THE APES

Darwin was right, all right, but he never graded the degree of descent. Edgar Rice Burroughs made some attempt at grading in his "Tarzan of the Apes" which is now in motion pictures and is to be shown at Griffin's this Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. He runs the gamut this way—drunken sailors, brutal ship officers slave traders and finally aristocrats. The apes really rank highest. Even the boy brought up by the apes ranks head and shoulders above his aristocrat relative. There are no class lines no national lines, no mutual exploitation among our ancestors. "Tarzan of the Apes" will be found bully adventure. Wild beasts roam through the scenes; a kindly elephant takes the wild man upon his back; in short, mix Stevenson's "Treasure Island" wih Capain Baker's African stories and the happy combination is struck. The joy of the film lies in its kindly wild life rather than in its civilized beauty. The program is augmented by the exhibition of five reels of comedy and topicals. Regular prices will prevail during the exhibition of "Tarzan of the Apes."

DIFFICULT ROLE

Anne Luther, the titian-haired screen beauty who is co-starred with Charles Hutchinson in the Pathe photoplay "stunt" serial "The Great Gamble," the first episode of which is to be shown at the Palace this Thursday to Saturday, matinee daily essays the most difficult work of her career in the dual role of Nell and Arline Morton. As Nell, Miss Luther portrays a girl who comes of excellent family but who since babyhood has been reared by a master criminal. She has been taught all the tricks of this shadowy trade and is the perfect type of female "dip" cabaret habitue and companion of crooks. In the other role as Arline, Miss Luther is the highly bred gentle and refined daughter of a millionaire mine owner. She has lived a life of ease and comfort and knows nothing of the world and its ways. Miss Luther does remarkable work in contrasting the two characters.

Private Secretary Made Big Hit

Albert College Presents Charming Old Comedy for Second Time in Clever Manner.

Under the auspices of the Dramatic Club in connection with the Albert College a delightful entertainment was given in the City Hall last evening before an audience which filled the spacious hall to overflowing. The well known drama 'The Private Secretary' was presented for the second time, it having been put on in the City Hall by the same club on March 28, 1919. Between the second and third acts, Mr Harold Barrett delighted the audience with some favorite solos, and Mr. Sparling Beach gave a piano solo which won the applause of all being present.

The drama was well staged and was presented in a manner that was pleasing to all present. Each member took their part in a manner that showed considerable training and talent. The leading characters were Miss Jesse Tuite as Miss Watson given to spiritualism, Professor R. J. Staples as Mr. Cattermole, a rich uncle from India, Mr. S. A. Anglin as Rev. Robert Spalding, the real secretary, and, Mr. Blackford as Mr. Sidney Gibson, a tailor of Bond street. They had an excellent conception of their parts and portrayed them in no small degree of perfection. The other members of the cast were by no means poor but presented their parts in a manner as to appeal to the audience which was not slow to recognize merit. The play was in three acts and was appropriately staged. The cast of characters was as follows:

Mrs. Stead, (Douglas Cattermole's Landlady)—Miss M. Copeland.
Edith Marsland (Daughter to Mr Marsland)—Miss M. Young.

ALL RISK ELIMINATED

While at the time the Victory Loan of 1917 and 1918 were floated, the bonds constituted the best secured investment on the market, there is no denying the fact that their purchasers shouldered a certain measure of temporary risk. This was especially true of the first Victory Loan of 1917. No one then knew how long the war would last. Generally speaking, events had gone badly with the Allies throughout the year. Canadians were then asked to back their country and provide her with means to avert defeat. The risk involved in the 1918 loan took a different form. Victory was in sight, and the armistice was signed in the midst of the drive. But no one knew what the next few months held in store for Canada. There was good reason for theorists to predict a period of depression caused by the cessation of war industries and war exports, and a condition of unemployment in the cities which would reduce the spending power of the public and hit the producer hard.

By a seeming miracle no depression occurred. The farmer and the manufacturer, and all the myriad branches of the community who depend on them, are going strong. It was the gr at success of the 1918 Victory Loan, more than one-third of which was employed in financing credits for goods purchased in Canada, that averted a slump and kept us prosperous.

The 1919 Victory Loan will have the same happy effect. There is no adverse cloud hanging in the sky; no fear of trade collapse as in 1918. Risk is eliminated; but this happy situation is conditional on one thing, the success of the present loan. On that depends everything.

CHARACTER EDUCATION AND CITIZENSHIP.

The first National Conference on Character Education in Relation to Canadian Citizenship was held at Winnipeg recently, and fifteen hundred delegates attended. The conference was unique but timely, for the development of good citizenship must necessarily depend a great deal upon the schools and the teachers. Gordon F. Reeves, of Port Arthur, a delegate from Thunder Bay District to the conference, summarizes the result of the deliberations for The Intelligencer as follows:

"In attendance, in speakers, in interest and in achievement the Educational Conference looking towards Canadian citizenship may consider itself as epoch-making in its success. Delegates are gathered from every province in the Dominion to the number of fifteen hundred. There was represented not one creed, but all the principal religious bodies, yet the meeting was in no sense of clerical flavor. Financed by business men—the Rotarians—there was no attempt whatever to dictate a commercial policy. Men's organizations, women's organizations, urban and rural teachers, farmers' associations, all were distinctly present but none predominated and none ought to do so. The conference in personnel and in spirit was a triumph of the sort of socialism where individuality cooperates.

"The speakers were prominent among the doers of things in the Anglo-Saxon world. The inclusion of prominent men from Britain and United States added a spice of variation on topics that know no boundary lines. But it is a matter of gratification that speeches delivered from Canadians were as wise and inspirational as any delivered.

"The primary purpose of our schools is to make children able to provide for themselves in the way of reading and thinking. It is not to make them think as this or that set of fellows want them to think. Medical men, socialists and moralists of all kinds are invading the peoples' schools and if we are not careful a lopsided generation will be produced and then we will learn that even our school system can be made the centre of too many propagandas.

" 'Teachers' salaries' was the question of the hour. No profession (except that of the church) requires such a high standard, and if the best men and women of our country are to be secured for this profession this matter of remuneration must be dealt with in a fair broad-minded way.

"As for achievement of the conference there is now a National Council with under it a national bureau whose business it will be to keep watch and ward over Canada's educational policies.

"But of the 'substance of things not seen' there has been lighted a new candle on the national altar, from which shines understanding, sympathy and consecration of Canada as a star for the leading of humanity. Canada's potential wealth lies in her youth and in this period of reconstruction she must utilize and fully develop all the latent forces at her command. The best trained and most capable teachers that a country can produce should be secured in times like these no matter what the cost may be, for the only efficient instrument that a country can use and apply readily to all its youth is its system of education."

.·. CRISP COMMENT ·.

Sir William Hearst and his colleagues will stick to the ship of state until Capt. Drury selects his officers. There is no thought of a strike or walkout at Queen's Park.

Leader Drury is said to be in favor of calling the U. F. O. legislative group the People's Party. Second the motion; we can all get in on that—government of the people, for the people, by the people.

Farmer Drury's fall plowing was interrupted by the call to assume the Premiership of Ontario, but it is hoped that his brow will not become unduly furrowed with the cares of state.

San Francisco cop used an airplane to make an arrest and brought his prisoner back in the plane. This will direct the attention of crooks to the possibilities of the plane for their business in affording a quick get-away without leaving a trail other than a gasoline smell. If the cops can use airplanes so can the crooks, who have made such a success of depredations by automobile.

Of all the cants that are canted in this canting world, though the cant of hypocrisy may be the worst, the cant of criticism is the most tormenting.—Laurence Steele.

Victory Loan subscriptions will provide funds to meet the various obligations of the war in pensions and re-establishment of soldiers in civil life. The Great War Veterans associations appreciate Victory Loan bonds as an investment and as necessary to the welfare of the returned soldier and are investing all their surplus funds in Canada's last war loan.

CHAPTER XII

She loved him. When they married perhaps neither had literally loved the other, but the girl had aroused much stronger feelings in the man than the man had awakened in the girl; to-day the position was reversed, and it was the inception of a struggle to render herself a companion to him, this perception that he did not find her so companionable as she had dreamed.

If she had been a woman of keener intuitions, she must have perceived it long ago, but her intuitions were not keen. She was not so dull as he thought her nor was she so dull as when she became his wife, but a woman of the rapid intelligence she would never be. Her heart was greater than her mind—much greater; her heart entitled her to a devotion she was far from receiving. To her mind marriage had made a trifling difference; her sensibilities it had developed enormously. Her husband overlooked the latter and chafed at the former. Fortunately for her peace, her tardy perception of their relations did not embrace quite so much as that.

She stayed in Bournemouth a fortnight, and when she came home her efforts to acquire the quickness that she lacked, to talk in the safe strain as Kent, to utter the kind of extravagance which seemed to be his idea of wit, were labored and pathetic. Especially as he did not notice them. She read the books he admired, and was bored by them more frequently than she was moved. She attempted in fact to mould herself upon him, and she attempted it with such scanty encouragement and with so little apparent result that, if her imitation had not become instinctive by degrees, she would have been destined to formally renounce it in despair.

CANADIAN [illegible]

"Fifty Years of Canadian Art" was the subject of a very interesting talk illustrated with screen pictures of Canadian artists and their paintings, by Mr. F. M. Bell-Smith, the well known artist of Toronto, before the Women's Canadian Club last evening in the High School Assembly Room. Mr. Bell-Smith does not pretend to be a lecturer, but in an easy conversational way described the growth of art in Canada and the organization and development of artists' societies. His screen pictures, reproductions of the work of well-known Canadian artists, are all hand-colored by himself and give a good representation of the subject in each case, as far as it is possible to do so by this method. The speaker's reminiscences of art and artists in Canada for the past fifty years were very interesting and plentifully sprinkled with humor. The audience was very large and the evening was full of charm and of real educational value in its revelation of the commanding position attained by Canada in the world of art. The work of Canadian artists, both men and women, is known far and wide for its excellence. This morning in the Y.M.C.A. parlors Belleville citizens were privileged to see a number of paintings and miniatures from the brush of Mr. Bell-Smith.

WORK OF A SNEAK THIEF

The apartments of Mrs. A. R. Walker in the Corby Library building in this city were a few days ago entered by a sneak thief who stole one solid gold hunting case watch, number 70151, movement number 28208. On dial below figure 12 is "All Seeing Eye" "square and compass, and name W. B. Walker, and above second hand Belleville, Ont., one gold chain rope pattern with I.O.F. on locket, and one gold ring with one large pearl set therein.

He was accompanied by upwards of 100 members of the craft in Belleville. At the conclusion of the business of the lodge the visiting brethren and members of Lake Lodge repaired to the banquet hall where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. Worshipful Bro. B. J. Anderson, W.M., of the lodge, presided over the gathering with marked ability. After supper had been partaken of speech making interspersed with vocal selections was the order of the evening. The speakers from this city were Wor. Bros. H. F. Ketcheson, J. Newton, Wm. Cook, Dr. M. Day, A. E. Thrasher, P. C. McLaurin and Rev. Rural Dean Swayne. Bros. J. McIntosh and F. Sprague gave vocal selections, which were much appreciated.

DELEGATE TO TORONTO.

Mr. George Walton, who was at a recent meeting of the City Council appointed inspector of the Housing Commission scheme, went to Toronto today to consult Mr. Ellis, the head architect in reference to matters appertaining to the scheme.

DIVISION COURT

Judge Wills presided over a busy Division Court yesterday, the chief feature of which was a wage and damage case from the Township of Sidney which took up nearly the whole day with many witnesses and stringent cross examinations. Verdict for plaintiff for $93.90, no witness fees were allowed. W. N. Ponton, K.C., for plaintiff; F. E. O'Flynn for defendant.

G. W. V. A. NOTES

The regular weekly meeting of the Belleville Branch, Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, was held in the association rooms on Monday evening. The meeting was well attended and new applications were received. Owing to the absence of the President, Comrade R. D. Ponton, on association business in Toronto, Comrade C. W. Carter, 2nd Vice President occupied the chair. The cases of four comrades who through medical disabilities are unable to follow their former occupations were again taken up with the D.S.C.R., and the association intend to fight their cases to the limit. A committee of three were appointed to wait upon the City Council, relative to the "Memorial Home." An invitation from the 3rd Annual Town Planning Convention of South-Western Ontario to be held in Hamilton Nov. 27th, 28th, was received; considerable discussion took place, relative to housing conditions in Belleville and the meeting decided to send Comrade E. D. Finkle as delegate to the convention. This association heartily commends the action of the executive in being the first to subscribe to Victory Bonds in Belleville.

SUCCESSFUL AT HOME

Last evening at St. Michael's Academy a very successful At Home was held under the auspices of the young ladies' sodality. The large hall was filled and all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The cards were the chief attraction of the evening—euchre, five hundred and bridge being played. The winners were as follows: Euchre—Miss Lawlor, Miss Dryden and A. Fitzgerald and Mr. Ellier; five hundred—Mrs. Ed. O'Rourke and Jas. St. Charles; while Mrs. J. V. Jenkins and ~~Mr. J. A.~~ Whelan were successful in the bridge. Dainty refreshments were served after which a pleasant social hour was spent.

FAMILY NEARLY ASPHYXIATED

Police Officer John Truaisch, his wife and six children last night had a narrow escape from asphyxiation owing to coal gas escaping from a coal stove at the family residence, 170 Church street, this city. At an early hour this morning Officer Truaisch was awakened by the crying of one of the children. When he arose he was suffering from dizziness and soon realized that all the members of his family were more or less in a condition of stupor. Neighbors were aroused and Dr. Yeomans was summoned. Mrs. Truaisch and two of the children, Helen and Norah, were severely affected by the gas, but by prompt attention were soon out of danger, although it will be a few days before they are entirely free from the effects of the gas. Had not Mr. Truaisch been awakened there is no doubt but that some or all members of the family would soon have succumbed to the gas, which was stifling.

Obsequies

S. A. LAZIER

Many citizens were yesterday afternoon in attendance at the obsequies of the late Mr. S. A. Lazier, of this city, which was an evidence of the esteem in which deceased was held. A number of those present were also from the surrounding country. At the family residence, Bridge Street east, Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, conducted an impressive service and also officiated at the interment at the family plot, Belleville cemetery. Despite the fact that a request was made to omit flowers, a number of beautiful floral designs were contributed by friends. The bearers were six immediate relatives of the deceased.

JOHN C. HARRIS.

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Mr. John C. Harris took place from the residence of his brother, Mr. S. T. Harris, College Hill, and a number of relatives and friends were present. Rev. Mr. Marshall, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, conducted services at the house and the committal services at the grave. Upon the casket were placed a number of floral designs. The bearers were Messrs. J. Mather, A. Martin, A. C. Dafoe, J. Gay, J. Donaldson and H. Redner.

All railway, passenger and traffic service throughout Germany will cease for ten days beginning November 5, in an effort to save coal.

Not Your Money But Your Good Will

We want the good will of every car owner in this town.

We want everyone to say what lots of folks say now—"Willard? That's where you get a square deal and value for every dollar."

We'd rather have your good will than an extra dollar or two on a repair job.

We'd rather sell you a battery that will give longer and better service than to make a living by repairing poor batteries.

Of course good repair work and good batteries cost more, but we believe they make friends and buy good will.

Let's get together.

LARGEST PLANT UNDER ONE ROOF

Columbia Graphophone Company to Cover Ten Acres of Ground.

GROWING DEMAND

Taking Advantage of Munition Kilns to Increase Their Output.

A ten-acre plant, comprising ten large buildings, and covering more than 235,000 feet of factory space right in Toronto, is to be devoted to the manufacture of Columbia Grafonolas and Records. The Columbia Graphophone Company has bought from the Imperial Munitions Board the plant of Canadian Aeroplanes, Limited, on Dufferin street, north of Lappin avenue. With one exception, this is the largest plant under one roof in Toronto. It occupies twelve acres of ground, and consists of eight large, permanent buildings and three smaller frame buildings, together with the railroad sidings, which run directly into the largest structure.

This purchase was made, according to officials of the Columbia Graphophone Company, to take care of the rapidly expanding demand in Canada for their product. Both Grafonolas and records are to be made under the same roof, and the company will take advantage of the drying kilns installed for the manufacture of aeroplanes to make their own cabinets for the Grafonolas. The company officials state that the support of the trade in Canada has justified this big development and made it possible.

Canada Loves Music.

As an index of Canada's love for good music and appreciation of the aesthetic side of life, this new factory development is significant. The rapidly growing population of Canada and her high standards of art are earnest of the success of the enterprise.

The construction of this modern plant was begun in February, 1917. It began operations in May of that year, and continued under high pressure until the close of 1918. The exterior walls of the eight large buildings are faced with red pressed brick, and their frames are of steel. The windows all have steel sashes, and the buildings are protected by means of an automatic sprinkler system, fire signal systems, etc.

The Largest Structure.

The largest structure of the plant is that lying along the south boundary of the property, formerly used as the fusilage building. It is 680 feet long, and has a total floor area of 42,570 square feet. The next largest structure, formerly the mill building, lies along the north boundary of the property. It is 420 feet long, and has an available floor space of 39,180 square feet. Between these two rises the former wing building, 380 feet long, with a floor area of 35,200 square feet.

The two-storey structure at the east end of the property has a total available floor space of 44,360 square feet, and the storage building just behind it, 27,600 square feet. The former propeller building, between this and the mill building, has two floors, and an area of 18,880 square feet. In addition to these buildings, there are the boiler house and the kilns, the garage with storage space for twelve cars, and a repair shop large enough to hold three motor trucks, a lumber shed, an experimental building, and a time office.

Two Thousand Employes.

The time office building, in which the employment office is located, was designed to handle more than 2000 employes, out and in, and did so successfully during the war. This factory, conducted by the Columbia Graphophone Company, will offer employment to at least an equal number. The question of welfare work amongst the employes will have consideration.

A. E. Landon, formerly assistant Canadian branch manager of the Columbia Graphophone Company, has been made Canadian branch manager, succeeding Mr. J. P. Bradt, resigned. Mr. Landon was formerly general sales manager of a big business operating in the United States and Canada. His experience with the Columbia Graphophone Company covers selling in country and city territory, assistant branch manager of Philadelphia and assistant Canadian branch manager, Toronto.

This plant will give Columbia increased yearly capacity of 500 per cent. in records and 400 per cent. in Grafonolas. This will not take care of increase in Grafonola business, and will necessitate an increased output from their present Canadian cabinet manufacturers.

A ROUND MILLION FROM THE LINERS

Halifax, Nov. 4.—A new record in Victory Loan campaigning was made when J. C. Stredder raised the total subscriptions from the Cunarder Mauretania to $315,000, giving the liner eight crests on her Prince of Wales' flag, one more than the Adriatic carried away from Halifax on Thursday. This brings the aggregate subscribed by passengers, mostly Americans and British on transatlantic liners in Halifax during the week up to $624,000.

Mr. Stredder, who is a local insurance Manager, conceived the idea of canvassing the liners coming to Halifax. His first adventure on the Adriatic met with a fine response and whewhen he brought the Lieutenant-Governor aboard to present the Prince of Wales' flag, Mr. Stredder started a new drive, backed by British M.P.'s and enthusiastic Americans, which brought the Adriatic's total to $275,000 before she sailed.

The Lapland came next and Mr. Stredder and his aide, A. S. Carten, extracted $32,000 from her passegers. Two days on the Mauretania have yielded $317,000 with the prospect of more to come.

GUELPH O.A.C. WAITRESSES STRIKE FOR HIGHER SALARY

Guelph, Nov. 4.—Another strike materialized at the O.A.C. when the waitresses in the big student's dining hall refused to serve the meals unless their demands for an increase in salary were met. The result is that a number of the freshmen had to be called upon to perform the duties of waiters. They did the job in good style too. It is understood that the waitresses have been receiving a monthly wage of twenty dollars with board and room included but they claim that with the prevailing high prices they cannot properly clothe themselves on this, and at the same time have a little for a rainy day.

The matter was put up to President Creelman, but he was powerless, especially in view of the fact that the Hearst Government has resigned and the department is at present without an authoritative head.

MAKING CORN SILAGE

Fill the Silo So as to Avoid Silage Fermentation.

Much Depends Upon the Stage of Growth—The First Two Weeks In the Silo Largely Decides the Matter of Fermentation—The Use of Lactic Acid Recommended.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE quality and preservation of silage is largely dependent upon the character of the fermentation which takes place mostly during the first ten days or two weeks after the corn is filled into the silo. In order to control the character of the fermentation so as to get the best results several factors have to be taken into consideration.

1st. The silo should be well constructed and have no air leaks. Wherever air penetrates it will cause rot in the silage.

2nd. The corn should be well developed with the cobs at least in the dough stage. If the corn is immature the resultant silage is liable to be too high in moisture, poor in consistency and sour. Its feeding value will be much less than that of mature corn.

3rd. In filling the silo the corn should be well scattered around and evenly packed. If steps are not taken to ensure this the heavier parts of the corn, such as the cobs and stalks, will be liable to settle in one place and the lighter leaves be blown around to the outer edges, thus causing the development of a hard core where the heavier pieces settle, and a soft, spongy, air-infiltrated area where the lighter pieces fall. Such a condition will ruin the fermentation and induce rot.

The fermentation commences practically as soon as the silage is in the silo, and will be good or bad according to the prevailing conditions as described above.

The fermentation is induced by plant enzymes, which are within the plant tissues, and various species of bacteria and yeasts which are present on the corn when it is filled in.

These bacteria, yeasts and plant enzymes act on some of the starch and sugar that is present in the corn changing the starch first to sugar and then to acids, alcohol and carbon di-oxide, and various other products of fermentation of somewhat minor significance.

The acids, more particularly the lactic acid thus produced, constitute the preservative substance ensuring good silage. It is desirable to get the maximum amount of lactic acid produced quickly with the minimum amount of alcohol and carbon dioxide as these two latter pass off as gas and thus mean loss of the sugar content as they, as well as the lactic acid, are made from the sugar.

Lactic acid bacteria are responsible for the production of the lactic acid and yeasts are mostly responsible for the production of the alcohol and much of the carbon di-oxide. Lactic acid bacteria and yeasts as some undesirable kinds of bacteria and molds are usually present in considerable numbers on the corn at the time it is filled into the silo. The problem is to induce the lactic acid bacteria to get ahead of the other kinds of bacteria and yeasts that are present, as when sufficient lactic acid is produced it prevents the other kinds of bacteria and yeasts from developing, otherwise they would cause loss through undesirable type of fermentation.

The lactic acid bacteria which cause the desirable fermentation in silage are the same as those which cause the souring of milk. Consequently, if freshly well-soured milk, which will have millions of the lactic acid bacteria present, is scattered evenly over the cut corn from time to time in the silo as it is being filled, this will ensure the presence of an abundance of lactic acid bacteria ready to act right at once so that the requisite lactic acid will be rapidly produced.

During the fermentation the silage gradually settles and the air that was present in the mass gradually gets used up in the fermentation processes. If more air penetrates into the mass through defective silo walls it will enable various molds to grow and these use up the lactic acid and develop, thus causing the silage to rot.—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. C., Guelph.

When to Cut Corn for the Silo.

Corn cut when the grains have reached the glazed stage contain almost twice as much digestible matter as corn cut at tasseling time; corn cut at glazing time, therefore, is best for silage.

These statements, says Andrew Boss, vice-director of the Minnesota Experimental Station, are based on analyses made by chemists of the Dominion of Canada at Ottawa, which show that the corn from an average acre cut at the glazing period contains 7.308 pounds of digestible matter as against 4.220 pounds when the corn is cut at tasseling time.

"Samples of corn were analyzed," says Mr. Boss, "that had been taken at all stages from tasseling to silking, early milk and late milk, and glazing. These analyses show strongly in favor of allowing the corn to reach that stage of maturity when the kernels are well dented or glazed before it is cut. At that time the lower leaves are usually beginning to turn yellow. The figures show that while there is a larger amount of green corn on the acre when the corn is in the tasseling stage, the total amount of dry matter is not nearly so great then as when the corn has glazed.

"The dry matter per ton amounts to 285 pounds at the tasseling stage, 323 at the silking stage, 389 in the early milk, 444 at the late milk, and 422 pounds at the glazing stage."

Bears Kill Trees.

Hundreds of trees in the Northwest, including Douglas fir, white fir and western white pine—the wood of all of which is used more or less in airplane construction—have been seriously damaged by bears peeling the bark. About 100 trees to the square mile have been peeled.

NEW SIDELIGHT ON GLAND OPERATION

New York, Nov. 4.—The prospect of prolonging human life through the interstitial gland operation discovered by Dr. Serge Voronoff has caused the big life insurance companies to consider the possibility of revising their rates for annuities, it was learned.

While insurance underwriters have not accepted Voronoff's discovery as an established fact—as regards producig longevity—they admit they are 'interested' and will meet any changes that may be necessary if the operation proves generally successful. They point out, however, that it will be several years before the success of the operation can be determined.

"The Voronoff discovery has interested our company, the same as it has others," John K. Gore, vice-president and actuary of the Prudential Life Insurance Company and former president of the Actuarial Society of America, said today.

"A mistaken impression as to the discovery seems prevalent, however. Dr. Voronoff has at no time, so far as I can learn, made the claim that his discovery will prolong life, but rather that its application will add vigor to the remaining years of life.

"In any case, it's adoption will be gradual and life insurance companies will in the same gradual way meet any such changes in annuities as may be necessary.

BOYS MURDER FATHER

Said to Have Confessed Crime Without Compunctions

WINNIPEG, Nov. 4.—Two brothers, one fourteen years old and the other eleven, murdered their father, Alexander Karolyk, in cold blood at the Karolyk home, near Poplar Plains, Man., early early last Tuesday morning, according to an alleged confession made to the Constable and Coroner B. J. McConnell, in which they declared they laid their plans deliberately and executed them at 3 o'clock in the morning while their father slep with his face turned toward the wall. "We are not sorry, either," said Antoine, who admits he pointed and discharged the gun. Antoine, the elder, will be charged with the crime, Constable Bain declared.

In confessing, the boys said they killed their father because he had been cruel to them, forcing them to work evry hard.

LEFT TO GUARD HOUSE BOY SHOOTS ANOTHER

Guelph, Nov. 4.—Taking seriously the suggestions that he should protect his house on Hallowe'en, the younger son of William Milton shot a boy named Kokejeski.

The boy's parents left their two sons in charge of the house. The elder going out himself, asked his brother "to protect the house." Young Milton armed himself with a small shotgun. A number of boys, out for the usual pranks approached and young Milton fired the gun at them. Kokejeski, who lives at 36 Manitoba street, received the charge in the leg. On examination it was found that the boy's leg was broken.

G. H. Kilmer, K.C., Crown counsel threatened to place Col. Dinnick in jail, today if he again failed to appear at the Standard Reliance Mortgage Company investigation at Toronto.

Lord Charles Beresford Was an Energetic Fighter For His Naval Proposals

BARON BERESFORD, better known as Lord Charles Beresford, was a doughty fighter in the navy and a doughty fighter for the navy. In command of the Condor he showed himself ready to take chances, and in command of the Channel Squadron, the Channel Fleet and the Mediterranean Squadron he was an untiring worker for naval efficiency. In the House of Commons, as well as later in the House of Lords, he gladly contended on all occasions that presented themselves for what he deemed the welfare of the navy. And with his pen he was as ready as with his tongue to promote that cause. In 1912 he published his "Great Betrayal," which was a plain-spoken work, but less sensational in its contents than in its title, the most explosive matter in it having previously appeared as a letter to the London Times. Its influence was less than might have been expected from a man of his reputation as a naval authority.

Before this book appeared Lord Fisher, the First Sea Lord, had retired. Of his policy Lord Charles Beresford was an unsparing critic. Lord Charles was opposed to the keeping of the navy concentrated in the North Sea, leaving the stations in other parts of the Empire abandoned and open to attack by any power that should suddenly become an enemy. The event has proved that Lord Fisher was right. Had not the greater part of Britain's naval strength been collected in the North Sea and had not that navy been mobilized ready for action when war was declared, the German navy might have done some mischief at the outset. Fortunately Prince Louis of Battenberg, who was then First Sea Lord, wisely refrained from dispersing the navy to its several bases after the naval manoeuvres for which the ships had been assembled. Lord Charles Beresford had also his own ideas about the dreadnoughts. His view was that mobility counted for more than fortress-like strength afloat. He maintained that the great essential was the keeping of the sea routes open by means of fast cruisers armed with long-range guns.

Another British admiral who had sharply criticized an order of Beresford's in the manoeuvres, so much so indeed as to lead to talk of a breach of friendly relations between the two men, was Sir Percy Scott. Sir Percy was also a doubter as to the value of the dreadnoughts. A few months before the war he wrote a letter to the London Times in which he said in effect that the dreadnoughts were rendered obsolete by the development of the submarine. When the war began, Lord Fisher was recalled to office as First Sea Lord. As the man who had carried out the scheme for concentrating the navy where the danger seemed greatest, and as the strong advocate of great battleships, his selection by Mr. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, seemed to be natural. Admiral Fisher was largely the author and promoter of the policies of the Government then in office.

In office Lord Fisher was not given to polemics, though he himself was the target for unsparing attacks, especially on the part of Lord Charles Beresford in the Commons, where Mr. Winston Churchill often winced under the genial-mannered but none the less blistering criticism from the same quarter. But just when Lord Beresford's [illegible] career closes Lord Fisher [illegible] to fling about him as a critic of the navy, half of which he believes to be now ripe for scrapping. Ships quickly become old in these times of rapid advance in scientific construction and armament. Readers of Lord Fisher's remarks on the subject and of his survey of his own career as a seaman cannot but be struck with his leaning to a Billy Sunday way of expressing himself. He seems to have as much delight in iconoclastic criticism as had Lord Beresford himself.

Personal prowess is a quality for which not only Lord Beresford himself but his family as a whole is distinguished. But bravery in the British navy is common to all. Lord Charles had the bent for dash and heroic action. He was considerate of the men under him. [illegible] thorough disciplinarian [illegible] not so much of a martinet [illegible] other famous seamen.

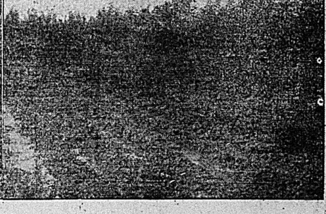
WINDSOR STATION ILLUMINATED FOR PRINCE'S VISIT.

The electrical illumination of the C.P.R. Windsor Station at Montreal in honor of the Royal visit, on which electrical engineers and decorators were at work for over a month, evoked favorable comment, and Mr. J. W. Bell, the superintendent of the building, who designed and supervised the erection of this elaborate decoration, was congratulated on the result of his effort. No fewer than 7,752 individual lights were used in this display, which follows the general outlines of the huge edifice, including the two towers. In order to connect the lamps with the seventeen switches, there is a mile and a quarter of wire. In the Prince of Wales' Feathers, which are 18 feet 6 inches in height, there are 242 lights, while the [illegible] maple leaves on St. Antoine street and Osborne street, each 12 feet high, have each [illegible] lights, while there are 55 lights in each of the four illuminated crowns. The electrical decoration is supplemented with a display of flags, 450 in number, twelve long streamers 31 feet each in length, and 69 shields each 4 feet high.



PRINCE PRESENTED WITH STRAWBERRIES PICKED ON OCTOBER 2.

If His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had any preconceived idea that Southern Alberta had grown nothing this year owing to the drought, he probably has reason to change his mind after being presented at Lethbridge with a four-pound box of most luscious strawberries packed on Thursday morning from his own garden by John Hamilton, who owns one of the farms on the C. P. R. Ready-made Farms Colony, 18 miles east of the city. The fruit was the ever-bearing variety and as fine in color, texture and flavor as any grown in the middle of the season. It remained for the Coaldale district to supply the royal table with fresh strawberries picked in October.

Wild West Hold-Up In Chinese Restaurant

TWO YOUNG MEN FROM TORONTO ARMED WITH REVOLVERS AND KNIVES STICK UP BELLEVILLE RESTAURANT WAITER IN EARLY MORNING HOURS, ROB TILL AND STEAL CIGARETTES AND OVERCOAT—CUT TELEPHONE WIRE—ONE ARRESTED.

One of the most daring hold-ups which have ever occurred in this city took place at 2.35 this morning at the Royal Cafe, east side of Front Street, conducted by J. S. Tom.

The restaurant had been closed up for the night and two men came to the rear, and as one of the Celestials came out of the rear door the two men bolted in and one of them quickly covered the four waiters with a gun and demanded money. The waiters threw up their hands and the one with the gun went through their pockets, obtaining from Tom Deep $14 and about $3 from the remaining three.. While this was taking place the second man, with a large dirk, cut the telephone wire, but fortunately there was an extension cord at the front of the premises and this was used to warn the police. The two men, however, succeeded in securing a sum of money, a large box of Players cigarettes and a new overcoat belonging to one of the waiters at the cafe. Sergt. Naphin and P. C. Deshane, as soon as possible after the call was sent to the station, hurried to the scene, but the two hold-ups had made their exit. The officers went to the C.N.R. station and were fortunate in capturing one of the men who had just purchased two single first-class tickets for Toronto. He was placed under arrest and taken to the police station where he gave his name as Cecil Simpson and also stated that sometimes he went by the name of Thomas Tanner. He also gave his address as 313 Church St., Toronto. On his person was a dirk in a leather case and he wore about his waist a leather belt which contained 25 rounds of .38 calibre revolver cartridges. He was placed in a cell and the officers made a diligent search for his companion, an excellent description of whom was obtained, but his whereabouts could not be ascertained. At the C. N. R. station the stolen overcoat and the box of cigarettes were recovered. Simpson, alias Tanner, gave his age as sixteen years, but in appearance he looks to be about nineteen or twenty years of age. At the time of the hold-up preparations were being made to leave the place of business, which would have been effected in five minutes more time. Naturally those about the cafe were much alarmed at the intruders and their actions.

Before Police Magistrate Masson this morning Simpson was arraigned and charged that "he did at the city of Belleville on November 5th, 1919, unlawfully commit robbery from the person of Tom Deep." To the charge the accused pleaded guilty and at the request of Mr. Carnew, County Attorney, sentence was deferred for a week, Simpson being remanded to jail.

In answer to an enquiry Simpson stated that he was a resident of Toronto, residing at 313 Church Street. His mother had been married twice, her first husband being named Tanner, and that was why he gave the names of Simpson and Tanner, as he went by both names. His companion's name was Brown and lived on Jarvis street, Toronto.. The belt containing the cartridges belonged to Brown, also the revolver. The dirk was the property of Simpson. Every effort will be made to locate Brown. Simpson is young, being only 16 years of age. He stated that he was born at Lunenburg, N.S., and had resided in Toronto for some time, working at Christie & Brown's biscuit factory.

Britain Favors Bond Lottery

Sentiment About Gambling Feature of Flotation Shows Reversal.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The change in British psychology, with particular respect to lottery loans, referred to previously in despatches, is crystallizing rapidly, in Parliamentary moves to compel the Government to issue such a loan.

The main reason for this is that members believe the French lottery loan will cause a heavy drain of British funds, due to the purchase in France of these bonds containing a sporting chance.. The only way to prevent such an outflow of capital, it is argued, is to give the British public an opportunity to make such an investment at home.

The fact that France expects, with the help of prizes, to float her big loan with an interest charge of only three per cent. annually also is an incentive for a similar British loan. Although the investment market at the moment is not considered as exactly favorable to a Government loan, it is believed that improvement will come soon, especially if the forecast made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer is borne out.

It is announced that $50,000,000 of the loan from Japan will be paid off at maturity, December 15, without reborrowing. Great Britain is reducing her indebtedness on the continent also, and by March 31 next the external indebtedness will be cut down greatly. Practically the only outside loans then will be those of the United States and Canada.

This will improve the home situation and no difficulty is expected in floating a post-war loan. A hundred members of Parliament have signed a petition for the issue at once of prize bonds. This raises a delicate question on the stock exchange, where dealing in prize bonds is prohibited.

Big subscriptions to the French lottery loan already have been made here through foreign banking houses. This has caused a protest by local bankers with stock exchange connections, who say they are discriminated against in favor of foreign bankers. Since it appears likely that England herself will issue prize bonds it is probable that the stock exchange will abolish the restrictions on dealings in such bonds.

The size of the loan to be floated has not been determined, but it must be considerably more than $3,000,000 to take care of the year's deficit and the floating debt. However, the public is very keen on the new kind of loan and already every one is discussing "try your luck bonds."

Conduct Of Raid Open To Criticism

But Royal Commission's Report Exonerates the Ministers.

OTTAWA, Nov. 5.—Hon Martin Burrell, Secretary of State, in the Commons tabled the report of the Royal Commission, which enquired into the Guelph Novitiate charges. The report is signed by Mr. Justice W. R. Middleton, of Toronto, and Mr. Justice J. A. Chisholm, of Nova Scotia, the two commissioners. As anticipated, the report exonerates Hon. C. J. Doherty, the Minister of Justice, and Major-Gen. Mewburn, Minister of Militia, and declares that, "Upon the evidence before us we think that the conduct of this raid (the raid on the Guelph Novitiate conducted by Capt. MacAulay) was open to all the adverse criticism found in the memorandum of the Adjutant-General.

'We are further of opinion," says the report, "that the Minister of Militia acted with entire propriety in apologizing for the incidents which took place, by reason of a series of bungles on the part of a subordinate official."

First Prince Of Wales' Flag Is Won By Delora Loan Team

TUDOR, LIMERICK AND CASHEL AWARDED SECOND FLAG—TRENTON GAINS SLIGHTLY ON US IN HEATED CONTEST.

Prince of Wales' Flag, the first to be awarded in Hastings County, were won yesterday afternoon by Messrs. Norman Laing and Arthur Yates, Deloro, and Mr. W. A. McMurray of Gilmour, canvassing for Tudor, Limerick and Cashel. These honors are given to districts when they attain their objective in the Victory Loan Campaign.

The first to win the flag was the Deloro team. Their returns have been well up since the start of the campaign and they have exerted every effort to be the first to win this coveted honor. The winning of the second flag by Mr. McMurray came as a great surprise. Up till yesterday he had made no returns and his first telephone message to headquarters announced that he had got an even 100 per cent of his objective. Several teams have been in the race for the first flag and the contest has never been certain. Splendid returns which commenced to come in this last week end are continuing.] Yesterday $88,500 brought centage is now 40.75 and Trenton's the fine weather today together with several returns which came in too late for last night's report are expected to pile up a big total. Enthusiasm has at last been aroused and the most optimistic reports come from everywhere. Everyone is trying hard to win a German Field Gun for the County which will be awarded if we win the highest percentage of all Counties throughout Ontario.

Trenton gained slightly on Belleville in the heated contest which is going on between the two. Belleville's percetage is now 40.75 and Trenton's 50.61. The utmost efforts are being exerted on both sides and it looks as if Belleville may possibly gain on their rivals soon.

Hastings County is climbing high in comparison with other counties. We are now only slightly behind Prince Edward as highest in the Division and our showing compares very favorably elsewhere.

New York, Nov. 5.—Indications early today were that the Republicans had gained several seats in New York State Assembly as the result of the election yesterday. Ohio Voted Dry.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 5.—Ohio yesterday voted to remain in the dry column by a majority which may reach three times the size of that by which it voted for prohibition a year ago, according to incomplete official returns received early today. Partial returns from half of the counties in the state indicated a dry majority on all four prohibition proposals of approximately 75,000. In addition to defeating the proposed repeal of state-wide prohibition, Ohio yesterday apparently voted by a big majority to uphold the action of the Legislature in ratifying the federal prohibition amendment to kill the proposal for the manufacture and sale of beer, containing as high as 2.75 per cent, alcohol and to put into effect the Crabbe prohibition enforcement bill passed by the legislature last Spring. All of the prohibition proposals were initiated by the wets.

Loses Arm Through Discharge of Gun

Edward Pope, a young man residing in this city, was yesterday afternoon the victim of an accident which cost him his left arm. In company with two companions he was duck shooting on the bay near Nigger Island, when the unfortunate affair took place. It appears that Pope reached for his gun which was upon the ground and was in the act of drawing it towards him muzzle first, when by some means it was discharged. Pope received in the forearm the contents of a shell loaded with buckshot usually used in shooting ducks. The result was that not only was the bone broken but the arm was lacerated in a terrible manner. As soon as possible the victim was brought to the hospital here, where upon examination it was ascertained that the injuries were of such a nature that amputation was necessary. The operation was performed, the arm being taken off near the shoulder. Pope today was doing as well as could be expected. One of the companions with Pope with considerable foresight bound up the injured arm and succeeded to a large extent in stopping the flow of blood.

Ontario's Premier Elect Sounds Note Of Warning

SEES FALL IN PRICE OF WHEAT AND LOWERING OF THE STANDARD OF WAGES — PERIOD OF FINANCIAL DEFLATION AND BUSINESS DEPRESSION PREDICTED.

BARRIE, Nov. 5.—E. C. Drury, Premier-elect of Ontario, made his first public appearance since his appointment to office when at the Opera House here he delivered an address in support of the Victory Loan. His remarks, which extended over a period of fifteen minutes only, were confided entirely to the loan campaign, no reference in any particular being made to the political situation or to the policy which will be pursued by his party during the coming session of the Legislature. When he appeared on the platform after the meeting had commenced he having just arrived on the eight o'clock train from Toronto, he was given a magnificent reception by the large audience which filled the auditorium and when he rose to speak so great was the ovation which he received that it was several moments before he was able to commence his address. When he did start to speak he at once launched himself into a full hearted support of the loan, eliminating the patriotic side of the case and confiining himself to economic phases urging his audience to buy bonds from business standpoints and as a means of warding off the period of financial deflaion and business depression which he predicted through no fault of any Government, the country is about to go through. In this connection he prophesied not only a deprecation of the value of the money, but as a farmer and leader of a farmers' party a fall in the price of wheat and a lowering of the standard of wages.

At the conclusion of the meeting a vote of confidence in him as new leader of the Government was unanimously passed. The audience showing its approval by prolonged cheering, followed by the singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Replying Mr. Drury expressed his appreciation of the warmth of the greeting and promised to do his best to serve the province irrespective of party."

There his story stopped There were nine different slashes on the victim's face and a great gash in his throat. It was evident that he had been attacked from behind. The police are working on the various clues. Rowland served with the 2nd Machine Gun Battalion overseas and was wounded and gassed He was a quiet retiring man of good character

Sensational Victory For Labor In British Municipal Elections

MAKES BIG GAINS NOT ONLY IN LONDON BUT THROUGHOUT THE UNITED KINGDOM—WOMEN CANDIDATES ARE NOT SO SUCCESSFUL.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Labor has won a sensational victory in the municipal election, not only in London, but throughout Great Britain, as far as should last long enough to eat up the at hand.

"While labor polled probably quite a fair proportion of its voting strength the other parties suffered very heavily can be judged by the reports already and only in a few instances did 50 per cent of the electors take the trouble to vote.

"The women voters probably exerfrom the supineness of the supporters of the results, the discontent of the housewife no doubt finding satisfaction in a decisive pronouncement in favor of a forward policy. But the women candidates at the polls were not, on the whole, successful."

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Nov. 5.—The third reading of the Grand Trunk Railway acquisition bill was carried at 1.30 this morning by 84 to 53, being a government majority of 31, after a six months' hoist motion of James A. Robb, chief Liberal whip, had been defeated on the same division reversed. The bill now goes to the Senate and should be ready to receive royal assent by the end of this week or early next. It was a day and night of divisions, the members being called in no less than six times to record their votes. The Senate is expected to return the Grand Trunk bill to the House of Commons with an amendment asking that the guarantee shares be also submitted to arbitration, if it gets through at all. In such case it is believed the Government will accept the amendment.

Called by Death

HENRY E. ROBINSON

A former resident of Ameliasburg, well known and highly respected, died in Toronto on Wednesday, October 29, in the person of Henry E. Robinson, in his 60th year. Mr. Robinson lived in Ameliasburg since childhood, until four years ago, when the family removed to Toronto. For the past year he had been in poor health and was confined to his bed since September. He leaves his widow and one daughter, Mabel of Toronto, three sisters, Mrs. W. M. McCoy, of Belleville; Mrs. E. W. Hawkins, of Roblin; Miss Ella Robinson, at home; two brothers, George Robinson, on the homestead, and James E., also of Ameliasburg. The body was brought from Toronto and buried from the old homestead on Friday last, services being conducted by Rev. Mr. Wallace, of Sidney, an old friend of deceased. Interment was made in Simonds Burying Ground. The floral tributes were very beautiful and appropriate. Two brothers of deceased, George and James E. Robinson, and three brothers-in-law Byron Frederick, of Belleville; Eli Lent of Toronto; Frank Lent of Ameliasburg, acted as bearers together with Edward Simonds, an old friend.

Social And Personal

Rev. Mr. Hubly, of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, was in the city today calling upon friends.

Mr. Robert J. Bushell, manager of Kingston Industrial Fair, Kingston, was in the city today.

Glenn Mongold of Indianapolis, Indiana, is in the city for a few days visiting his parents on Front Street. He intends to leave for New Orleans, La, shortly, where he will probably remain for several months in the employ of a large lumber corporation as an inspector. He is taking great pleasure amid the scenes of boyhood days in company of another old Belleville boy, Arthur Crabbe, who has some time since returned from France where he served with the C. E. F. for three years. Mr. Crabbe was wounded at the battle of the Somme. The young men have taken advantage of an opportunity to visit their old home town and recall many pleasant happenings here when they were boys.

Mr. Thos. A. Gardner, late manager of the Belleville Gas Works, accompanied by Mrs. Gardner, will leave shortly for Quebec City, where Mr. Gardner has secured an excellent position as general inspector of the Gas Division with the Quebec Railway Light, Heat & Power Co., Limited, which position carries a good stipend.

Mrs. P. J. Wims and family have gone to Montreal to take up their residence. Mr. Wims will remain in Belleville for a time to settle up his business interests. Their household furniture was shipped yesterday. Mr. Wims recently sold his residence on Victoria Avenue to Mr. Elliott of the Elliott Woodworking Co., and has purchased a residence in Montreal. Upon disposing of his business here Mr. Wims will devote his entire time to his Montreal business, formerly conducted by his son, who died recently. The departure of Mr. Wims and family from Belleville is a matter for sincere regret. Mr. Wims has been a progressive, enterprising citizen, and his genial presonality has won him many warm friends. Mrs. Wims has also many friends who regret her departure.

PLENTY OF WORK AND GOOD WAGES

Steady employment at good wages is the fortunate position of most of the workers in Canada at the present time This is as it should be, and it must be kept that way. Employers and employees alike are greatly concerned in the continuance of the prosperity prevailing in Canada now. The future depends on the success of the Victory Loan 1919.

The workers are getting so used to "good times" that they are taking a lot for granted but they must not skirk their plain duty in regard to the purchase of Vicory Bonds. The proceeds of the loan will be spent entirely in Canada which means that millions of dollars, much of it now idle in the banks, will be put into circulation. It will provide work in plenty in all lines of industry and will benefit everyone in the land, directly or indirectly.

These are facts to be considered seriously by the workers. The Victory Loan 1919 has a most important bearing on their good jobs besides being an investment beyond comparison. Victory Bonds must be subscribed for most liberally if Canada's present prosperity is to continue.

Candidate Quits Before A Women

Independent Unionist in Plymouth Won't Run Against Lady Astor.

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 5.—In an address to the "electors of the Sutton division of Plymouth," appealing for their votes in the coming election, Lady Astor says:

"I come before you in all humility, fully conscious of all my limitations. If you decide that Plymouth is once again to help in making history by being the first English constituency with a woman member in Parliament, I shall do all in my power to maintain the high traditions of the borough, the ideals of my sex and the credit of Parliament. . . .

Peace, Progress and Prosperity.

"I intend to work for peace, progress and the prosperity of the country. I shall at the same time have due regard for national efficiency and economy, which women, above all, understand. During the war I worked for the soldiers and sailors, their wives and children, as well as for all others who were serving at home and abroad. I now ask them to work for me in order that I may work for them in Parliament.

"I believe I know the real Plymouth, its children and women and its social problems better than any other of the candidates. With this knowledge and with your knowledge of me, based on my past record, as a guide to the future, I ask the electors to let me represent them."

The address is signed "Nancy Astor."

Unionist Withdraws.

The Independent Unionist candidate, Lionel Jacobs, who had the support of a number of Unionists opposing Lady Astor on the ground of sex, tonight withdrew his candidacy.

DEMPSEY SIGNS FOR BECKETT

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 5.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, signed an agreement in Mobile yesterday to box Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight champion, in New Orleans next March 17, according to announcement here tonight by Dominick Tortorich, New Orleans promoter.

The bout is conditional on Beckett winning his forthcoming contest with Georges Carpentier, the French champion.

The bout will be for twenty round, and Dempsey, Tortorich announced, will receive $125,000 as his share.

The champion affixed his signature to a contract after a conference here today between Jack Kearns, his manager, and Tortorich. The conference, it was said, was brief, and Dempsey quickly assented to the conditions and purse following the agreement between Kearns and the promoter.

Beckett will meet Carpentier in December. Tortorich said that should Carpentier win, he would instruct his representative in London to attempt to sign a contract immediately for the French champion to meet Dempsey.

PIRATES SEIZE SHIP AND ROB PASSENGERS

Constantinople, Nov. 5.—Pirates concealed in the steerage of the ship Maria overpowered the crew while the vessel was bound from Novoroseysk for Batum and robbed the passengers obtaining fifty million roubles.

On arriving at Batum officers of the vessel made a report of the robbery to the British police who captured several of the pirates.

Pirates frequently land along the shores of the Black Sea and rob villages. At Trebizond recently pirates boarded a Greek schooner and sabbed or threw overboard its crew of fifteen men. They also captured the Russian steamer Constantion while the vessel the vessel was bound from Batum to Constantinople.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER.

The Shaving Service for Everyman—Everywhere.

The Psychology of a Clean Shave

(Part of an Editorial in Collier's)

Shaving as it is practiced today marks a step forward in civilization.

This statement may sound ridiculous, but it isn't. Here's proof: Each of our soldiers who went abroad took as part of his regular equipment, and by order of his government, a safety razor. *

There were two reasons, the military authorities say, why a soldier had to be clean shaven. First, it enabled the gas mask, which was worn almost constantly at the front, to fit more tightly over the face. Second, a clean shave kept up the morale of a soldier and of an army.

You know how it is yourself. You know the direct bearing a clean shave has on your personal morale. Compare the way you feel in making an important call or attending a special meeting when you are freshly shaved with the way you feel with a day's growth of stubble on your chin. There's all the difference in the world. It seems a trivial thing to have such an effect upon you, but for some psychological reason, it does have that effect—and you know it. †

* * * * *

What has brought about this change in men's habits? It's not so long ago but that we can remember the beard in all its varying degrees of opulence. Every family album shows how prevalent it was.

There are two reasons—just two:

The safety razor made shaving easy. It transformed shaving from a fairly long, decidedly unpleasant and slightly dangerous operation to one that was finished before the bath water had ceased running.

It saved time. Compared with the old style razor it saved several minutes. While individually these minutes may seem unimportant, taken in the aggregate, multiplied by the number of days in the year, and again by the millions of men won over to the use of the safety razor, the amount of time saved is enormous.¶

"Finished before the bath water had ceased running."

*In all the allied armies during the war, more Gillette Safety Razors were in use than all other razors put together.

†Keep count for one day of the number of times you stroke your chin. So many times do you develop confidence—or the reverse—according to the smoothness of your chin.

The Gillette not only makes shaving easy, but it abolishes stropping and honing—two exceedingly delicate operations in which few shavers are really successful.

¶Five dollars invested in a Gillette means ten minutes saved each day, or an ordinary day's working period saved every 48 days or so.

There is a Gillette dealer waiting to show you Gillette Safety Razor sets—today!

GERMS WORSE THAN GERMANS.

The Provincial Board of Health reports that contagious diseases are more prevalent now than at this time last year. Toronto is experiencing a mild form of smallpox and other places report similar conditions. It would be the part of wisdom to arrange for an isolation hospital here to cope with any emergency which may arise.

An outbreak of smallpox without an isolation hospital might mean semi-quarantine in homes, flats and lodging houses with disastrous consequences.

The question of coping with contagious diseases in Belleville should receive more serious attention than has been the case heretofore.

COAL STRIKE A MENACE.

The strike of the soft coal miners in the United States is the latest labor disturbance to cause concern. With over 400,000 miners idle, and the production of bituminous coal stopped at the beginning of winter, a very serious situation is created fraught with menacing possibilities. Scarcity of bituminous coal will mean a heavy demand upon anthracite coal for railroads and factories with resultant scarcity and danger of a general coal famine if the present strike continues any length of time. Already United States railways are cutting off trains in anticipation of coal scarcity and no doubt large industries will take action to curtail production while the strike is on. This will result in many wage-earners not directly concerned in the coal miners strike being thrown out of employment and much inconvenience and loss caused to the public generally. Efforts of the United States Government to cope with the coal strike situation will be watched with keen interest in the hope that the strike will be of short duration.

CITY MANAGER PLAN.

City Government by Mayor and Council has never been efficient. The system of selecting a new business administration for a municipality every year by election can not be expected to be anything but inefficient. It takes a councillor the first year to master the details of civic government, and by that time he is generally ready to step aside for some one else, rarely serving more than two years at the most. Any private business conducted upon such lines would soon go to the wall. Experiments being made with the city manager plan seem to promise better results. A business manager trained in municipal administration with all the affairs of the city under his guidance and control wou'd seem to be a long way preferable to the present system of a number of aldermen trying to run their respective departments upon different systems and in more of a spirit of rivalry with other departments than co-operation. The Kingston Whig discusses the city manager plan as follows:

> The government of cities by a mayor and council, divided into several committees, has not always worked out to advantage. There is no permanence about the plan, while the number of aldermen frequently make the administration unwieldly. In an endeavor to secure some better system a number of cities, especially in the United States, have adopted the city manager plan with what they claim as excellent results. The latest operating under this plan include Anamosa, Iowa; Terrell, Texas; Mifflinsburg, Pa.; and Gastonia and Kingston, N.C. The reported city manager charter drafted for Brantford, Ont., seems to have been a sort of freak affair and far from a commission-manager plan. It was defeated by a strong majority, and the Brantford chamber of commerce is now seeking information with a view to offering a good charter in lieu of the faulty one they helped to turn down.
> A number of cities report splendid results under the new plan. For instance, Griffin, Georgia, claims a net saving of more than $10,000 for the first five months of operation under the manager plan. Griffin's manager is trained in municapal finance. When engineering problems arise engineers are called to handle them. At present the city is laying $180,000 worth of paving and doing some $15,000 of sewer work. A remarkable record reported is that during the eight months that the manager has been employed he has not heard of a single criticism of the manager plan.
> If this plan were in operation in Kingston tens of thousands of dollars might be annually saved, and the present muddle in street paving and repairing could never occur. But public opinion needs some education along this line before such a plan could be introduced here.

CRISP COMMENT

The coal strike can not be credited as a hit.

Cape Cod cranberries will be plentiful and cheap, says a market report. That's encouraging, but how about turkeys?

With the Farmer-Labor coalition administration adopt the eight-hour day for their work in the Legislature or will it be daylight to dark? What about overtime, time and a half and double time?

All the wealth of Canada is not concentrated in the cities. The town of Oshawa has already subscribed close to a million and a half for the present issue of Victory bonds and is still going strong.—Toronto Globe.

The local Liberal organization did not seem to have bothered much as to where the bogus Flynn came from, but they are quite anxious to know where he went to. If he went where some peope consigned him he woud at least escape a hard winter.

Belleville's antiquated fire alarm system is not approved by the Police Commission, which recommends that the police relay fire alarm system be eliminated and a modern system installed. Belleville has been remarkably lucky in the matter of fires, but it is not advisable to stretch the luck too far.

It will be welcome news to householders that the price of pork products is to be reduced. The Board of Commerce has had a hard row to hoe under the bombardment of adverse criticism by the interests affected, and the difficulty in obtaining definite and correct information. Farmers have been receiving lower prices for pork for some time, but the reduction has not reached the consumer as yet to any great extent.

In the bad old days of the notorious Grit election machine in Ontario mysterious strangers were wont to appear where votes were most needed to bolster up the decrepit and corrupt Ross Government of Ontario. There were bogus ballots, bogus book agents, bogus census takers, impersonators, repeaters and even bogus ballot boxes. Mysterious strangers operating for Grit candidates at election time suggests that there may be a kick left in the old Grit election machine yet.

The Prince of Wales having bought a farm in Alberta, the United Farmers of that province have decided that he is eligible for membership in their organization. They may yet want to run the Prince for parliament as a farmers' candidate.

Troubles of a Prince.

Calgary Herald.

The Prince of Wales has sent a letter of thanks to a Calgary woman who sent him some original verses in which she calls him "sweetheart" and offers to hand over her heart to him for safe keeping. It is surely some job being a prince and especially a handsome one.

Our Mountains.

Vancouver Province.

A Brooklyn paper ran an excursion through the Canadian and United States national parks last summer and then took a vote of those in the party as to which hotels and parks they thought the most of. The overwhelming verdict was in favor of those in Canada as against those in their own country. That is very good advertising for the Canadian Pacific, which owns the hotels and for the Canadian Government, which owns and manages the Rocky Mountain parks.

Age Should Be Wise.

Edmonton Journal.

It was a very different message from Dr. Osler's that Dr. W. J. Mayo the distinguished surgeon, gave to the public this week. Dr. Osler was very much misrepresented. But even the correct version of his statement in which he emphasized the supreme value of the years of youth for fruitful work, was very depressing. It is a sad outlook if the average man's best years are over at forty. Dr. Mayo went so far as to say that elderly men are the nation's greatest asset. He was convinced that the progress which his profession had made since the Civil War had added fifteen years to the average human life, and with continued progress, aided by the elimination of the general use of liquor, he saw no reason why fifteen years more should not be added.

A Laugh or Two

Playing Safe.

"Is this the place?" she asked, as she wandered down on the barren sand, "where a young lady—a beautiful young lady—fell into the water last season and was rescued by a gallant young man, whom she afterwards married?"

He looked at her carefully, estimated her at forty-seven, with false teeth and said:

"Yes, ma'am; but I don't know how to swim."

How He Went.

"I haven't got any case," said the client; "but I have money."

"How much?" asked the lawyer.

"Ten thousand pounds," was the reply.

"Phew! You have the best case I ever heard of, I'll see that you never go to prison with that sum," said the lawyer, cheerfully.

And he didn't; he went there broke.

Poet's Corner

THREE GIFTS.

Wm. Letts, in London Spectator.

"Courage, Love and Fun."—George Wyndham's motto.

Each day a beggarwoman at the portal
Of God's high house, by urgent need emboldened,
I ask three gifts for you, my well-beloved,
Three gifts beyond the wealth of djinn or mortal:

Courage to stand now all the earth seems quaking
And wise men grow perplexed and kingdom's totter,
Now faith is sifted, old tradition tattered,
A broken world in need of each man's making:

Love that shall find your kith in friend and stranger,
Brother in man and beast, in saint and sinner,
And cleanse your heart of grudge or pride or grievance,
Bidding you seek Christ in an asses' manger:

Fun ever quick to kindly speech and laughter,
Swift with a jest the day your heart is breaking,
Fun that shall cheer dull years and send you whistling
Clear-eyed and cool to meet the brave Hereafter.

With these you shall not need men's praise or pity,
Defeat shall brace you, conquest make you humble;
So you shall fight and march and sing till moonrise
Lights up the walls of the Celestial City.

ADVERTISING EXPERTS PREFER NEWSPAPERS

W. O. Rutherford Second Vice-President of The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, announces that the B. F. Goodrich advertising will be handled by their present agency the Wm. H. Rankin Company of New York and Chicago, for 1920.

This is the seventh consecutive year the Wm. H. Rankin Company has handled the B. F. Goodrich Company business.

"Newspaperdom" recently made the following complimentary notice concerning the Goodrich newspaper advertising:

"The B. F. Goodrich Company is to be congratulated upon the excellency of its recent tire advertising—first, because it gets absolutely away from time-honored ideas in this class of publicity; second, because of the originality shown in the design and plan of using space, and third, because of the beneficial cooperative service to dealers handling the product. While we have commended favorably upon the improvement being constantly made in auto advertising we feel that the latest effort by the Goodrich people overtops all such publicity as has appeared so far in the dailies."

Mr. Wm. H. Rankin has steadily and consistently advocated the use of newspapers both as a national as well as local advertising medium, since he started in the agency business in 1908. In an interview recently he stated: "Much of the success that has come to our organizations both in New York and Chicago, has been due to the fact that years ago we recognized the value of daily newspapers for national advertising. In 1914 our daily newspaper volume was less than five hundred thousand dollars and this year it will exceed two million and a half, or more than our entire volume of business for 1916—our greatest pre-war year.

"Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., advertising in newspapers which we have handled during the past year just like the Goodrich newspaper campaign has been one of the most successful demonstrations of the value of national newspaper advertising I have ever known. Needless to say, Mr. Kellogg has renewed his contract with us for another year and will use more newspaper space in 1920 than he did in 1919 because he got results and fine co-operation and service from newspapers.

"Pelmanism baced for George Creel promises to make a bigger success in U. S. A. newspapers during the past four years. Creel's experience with the Bureau of Public Information and his association there with advertising men proved to him the great value of newspapers as an advertising medium and now he is a national newspaper advertiser. His campaign started three weeks ago and the results to date are phenominal. Inquiries have been received from all newspapers at less than one-half the cost in Great Britain. The Pelman Institute of Great Britain spent over one million dollars last year in advertising and Mr. Creel states it is his intention to exceed that amount in newspapers for 1920."

"Gee-Whiz! How it Hurts
The Pain in My Foot!"

"Sometimes it is in my arm. Merciful Heaven, how my back hurts in the morning!" It's all due to an overabundance of that poison called uric acid. The kidneys are not able to get rid of it. Such conditions you can readily overcome, and prolong life by taking the advice of Dr. Pierce, which is "keep the kidneys in good order." "Avoid too much meat, alcohol or tea. Drink plenty of pure water, preferably hot water, before meals, and drive the uric acid out of the system by taking Anuric." This can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Send a bottle of water to the chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and you will receive free medical advice as to whether the kidneys are affected. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism or gout; or sleep is disturbed two or three times a night, take heed, before too late. Get Anuric (anti-uric-acid), for it will put new life into your kidneys and your entire system. Ask your nearest druggist for it or send Dr. Pierce ten cents for trial package.

He was not at this time the most agreeable of models; he was too humiliated and anxious. Though Mr. and Mrs. Walford were superficially affable again, he felt a difference that he could not define in their manner, and was always uncomfortable in their presence. He had called the book 'The Eye of the Beholder' and submitted it to Messrs. Percival and King, but February wanned without any communication arriving from the firm and once more his wife's parents asked him almost every day if he had 'any news.' His only prop was Turquand, whom he often went to town to see now. Turquand had been genuinely dismayed by Messrs. Cousins' refusal and it was by his advice that the author had selected Percival and King to try next. Kent awaited their verdict feverishly. Not only was his humiliation bad to bear, but his pecuniary position was beginning to be serious and the Walfords' knowledge of the fact aggravated the unpleasantness of it.

Messrs. Percival sent the manuscript back at the end of April. They did not offer any criticism upon the work, as the others had done; they regretted merely that in the present state of the book they could not undertake the publication of 'The Eye of the Beholder.'

Then the novelist packed it up again and despatched it to Fendall and Green. Messrs. Fendall and Green were longer in replying and the fact of the second rejection could not be withheld from the Walfords. After they had heard of it, the change in their manner toward him was more marked. They obviously regarded him as a poor pretender in literature and her mother admitted as much to Cynthia once.

"Well mamma," said Cynthia valiantly, "I don't see how you can talk like that. It is terribly unfortunate, and he is very worried, but you know what Humphrey's reviews have been—nothing can take away the success he had had."

"Oh, 'reviews'!" said Mrs. Walford with impatience. "He mustn't talk to us about 'reviews!' Of course all those were 'worked' for him by Cousins. We are behind the scenes, you know; we are aware what such things are worth."

This convicion of hers that his publishers had paid a few pounds for various columns in praise of him in the leading London papers, was not to be shaken. Cynthia did not repeat it to him and Kent did not divine it, but Miss Wix—who had consented to remain at The Hawthorns—appeared quite a loveable person to him now in comparison with his wife's mother. Of intention Louisa did not snub him the stock-jobber was not rude to him deliberately, but both felt that their girl had done badly indeed for herself and their very tones in addressing him were new and resentful.

In secret they were passionately mortified on another score. Their prodigy, the coming bass, had once more failed to secure a debut and at last there was no help for it but to admit that the thought of a musical career for him must be abandoned. The circumstances surrounding this final failure were veiled in mystery, even from Cynthia, but the fact was sufficiently damning in itself. The wily Pincocca was paid fees no longer, and Caesar took a trip to Berlin with company-promoter his father knew an who did not speak German, while is mother invented an explanation.

Yes it was a trying time for the Walfords, their swans turning out to be ganders both together and that one of them had been acquired, not hatched, was more than they could forgive themselves or him. There were occasions, too, when Kent was more than slighted now, when there was no disguise made at all. One day in July, Walford said to him:

"I tell you what it is, Humbrey: this can't go on. You'll have to give your profession up and look for a berth my boy. How's your account now "

"Pretty low," confessed his son-in-law, feeling like a lad beig rebuked for a misdemeanor.

Walford looked at him idignantly.

"Ha!" he said. "It's a nice position 'pon my word! And no new, I suppose—nothing fresh?"

"Nothing, sir."

"You'll have to chuck it all. You'll have to chuck this folly of yours and put your shoulder to the wheel, and work."

"I thought I did work," said Kent doggedly. "Do you think literature is a game?"

"I think it is an infernal rotten game—yes!"

"Ah, well, there," said Kent "many literary men have agreed with you."

"You'll have to put your mind to something serious. If you only earn thirty bob a week, it's more than your novels bring you in. What your wife and child will do, God knows—have to come to us, I suppose. A fine thing for a girl married eighteen months!"

"She hasn't arrived at it yet," answered Kent, very white, "and I don't fancy she will. Many thanks for the invitation."

Walford stopped short—they had met in the highroad—and cocked his head a him, his legs apart.

FAITHFUL DOG LEADS WAY TO DEAD MASTER IN WOODS

New Westminster, B.C., Nov. 5.—Led by a faithful dog which had kept lonesome vigil, a searching party yesterday morning came on the remains of J. B. Coates, a prominent man of this city, who went hunting a week ago and had not been seen since. Coates apparently had lost his way and, becoming exhausted, perished in the first snowstorm of the year. His dog, after nearly a week, left the body of his master and went forth to get something to eat. Upon being fed at a house within three hundred yards of where Coates lost his life, the dog went into the bush again, being followed by searchers who were directed to where the body lay.

(What the Press Agents Say)

"BRINGING UP FATHER" AT GRIFFIN'S FRIDAY

Strike up the band, here comes "father!" Don't know "father?" Surely there must be something amiss in Denmark—we mean Arcady—if one has not met, seen or heard about the most popular newspaper comic of modern times. Manager Gus Hill was or is rather the discoverer of this funniest of cartoon heroes, originated by George McManus and transplanted to the stage through the foresight and business genius of Mr. Hill. This season "father" will be seen in an entirely new comedy concoction in three acts entitled "Bringing Up Father in Society" written by Arthur Roy with lyrics by Harold Wright and special music by Seymour Furth. Eighteen exclusive numbers have been provided along with plenty of specialties, features, situations, a distinct plot of continuity and action and a capable cast of thirty odd people including a beauty chorus of sixteen young women who add both grace, talent and dignity to the occasion. This riot of laughter, song, melody, wit and charm will be the attraction at Griffin's this Friday night, the seat sale opens to-morrow morning at 10 a.m.

MADGE KENNEDY IN "LEAVE IT TO SUSAN"

Real cowpunchers and plainsmen appear with Madge Kennedy in her new comedy "Leave it to Susan" which is to be shown at the Palace to-morrow to Saturday, matinee daily. Chief among them is Walter Cameron, at one time the youngest deputy marshal ever in the employ of the United States Government. He has been "in at the death" of more train robbers, horse thieves and boot-leggers than the majority of men in the service of Uncle Sam. He was reared in the service of the government. His father was superintendent of the Chickasaw Nation, Indian territory, and Cameron was afterwards made one of the official sons of the Ojibwas by adoption. Now he is content to be on the screen one of the bad men he has tracked all his life. The opening chapter of "The Great Gamble" in which the screen's greatest "stunt" man Charles Hutchinson co-stars with beautiful Anne Luther and other plays will also be exhibited.

GIANT PLAYS TARZAN

Millions who have read and marvelled at Tarzan as he is portrayed by Edgar Rice Burroughs and who have seen the great white giant in the film "Tarzan of the Apes" which is to be shown at Griffin's this Thursday and Saturday, do not know that at one time Elmo Lincoln, who plays the part of Tarzan, was given up by the family physician as too frail to live out the first year of his life. When Lincoln was eight months old, in his home on Knob Hill, San Francisco, he was the victim of meningitis, and it left him a weak anaemic boy. Ten years later he shipped with an uncle on board a ship bound for the South Sea Islands. Two years later Lincoln returned to the port of San Francisco, robust and happy. At the age of eighteen he was the tallest and strongest man in California. Then he adopted acting as a profession and after numerous roles essayed that of the two sword man in D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance." When the National Film Corporation was seeking a man whose ability and physique would fit him for the difficulut part of Tarzon, Lincoln was finally secured.

TOM MIX LEAVES TO-NIGHT

To-night affords admirers of Tom Mix the last time to see him at the Palace theatre in 'Fame and Fortune' as the picture's run ends to-night. The stirring drama has found great favor with the film fans, because of its rapid fire action and tense situations. A funny Luke comedy and a thrilling and interesting chapter of "The Perils of Thunder Mountain" and the British Canadian Pathe News are also being shown on the same program.

LAST CHANCE TO SEE GEORGE BEBAN

Film enthusiasts who have not seen the screen's greatest Italian delineator George Beban at Griffin's have only to-night to do so as the run of the picture which has made many friends here closes with to-night's performance "The Dentist," a good 2-act Mack Sennett comedy, Gaumont News, showing the world in motion and "Roped being exhibited on the same program. In" an amusing Western play are also being exhibited on the same program.

CAR STOLEN AT ORONO

A Chevrolet car, the property of Mr. J. A. Cooper, general merchant at Orono, was on Sunday night stolen from his garage while the family were attending church.

RESIGN CHAIRMANSHIP

Ald. Simmons has tendered to the City Council his resignation as chairman of the gas department of the city, above resignation to take effect immediately. The resignation is owing to the Council's action in accepting the resignation of Mr. Gardiner as manager of the gas department.

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Two Russian Jews who gave their names as Jack Mendelssohn and Geo. Galbery, were last night placed under arrest at a switch shanty near the G. T. R. station here. The charge preferred against them was vagrancy. Both admitted they were waiting to catch a freight train going eastward. This morning Magistrate Masson remanded them to jail for a few days.

ANNUAL BANQUET

The annual banquet tendered to members of Belleville Cheese Board and others by Mr. John Elliott, Manager of the Standard Bank here, took place this afternoon. The chief speaker was Hon. Dr. Cody of Toronto, Minister of Education.

SUNDAY HUNTING ILLEGAL

Fishery and Game Overseer George Toner, of Gananoque, while patrolling the river Sunday morning came upon a Brockville man in a decoy shelter at the foot of Chimney Island. As it is a contravention of the Lord's Day Act to hunt or fish on Sunday the inspector seized the man's paraphernalia, which consisted of a row boat, pump gun and 42 decoys, the whole valued at about $150. The property was removed by the inspector, who appeared on the scene in a launch.

WHISKEY ON TRAINS

At the Brockville Police Court Magistrate Page levied over $800 in fines and costs against four men for violations of the Ontario Temperance Act. The offenders were arrested on a Grand Trunk train between Montreal and Brockville by Inspector Taber. They hailed from different parts of Ontario, and had in their possession 38 bottles of liquor and two gallons of high wines. Pending payment of these fines the prisoners were committed to the county jail.

CONSCIENCE MONEY

A well-known Cobourg mercantile firm received through the post-office an envelope with their name pasted upon it, the address being cut from a newspaper. In the envelope was $25, rolled up in a piece of newspaper. There was no address or correspondence to indicate who the sender was, and it is thought to be conscience money sent by some person who thought they owed that amount.

FINED $200 AND COSTS

A young man who claimed Montreal as his home, was this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with having liquor in a place other than his residence. It appears that the accused was enroute from Montreal to visit friends at Campbellford and brought with him a bottle of liquor, which the police discovered upon him. A fine of $200 and costs or 3 months in jail was imposed.

EMPLOYEES GO BACK TO WORK

There are 450 former employees of the Canadian Locomotive Co., Kingston, now back at work, and contracts on hand at the time of resuming operations were expected to keep the plant employed until nearly Jan. 1. Since then orders have been received from the Jamaica Government Railway and an additional order expected. Many foreign inquiries have been received, and orders from these sources will doubtless follow the signing of peace, although it was pointed out that the requirments of Canadian Government Railways may make it impossible to undertake many foreign contracts.

The Father of the beautiful white girl and his party are beset by the enraged cannibals. Hearing the noise of firearms in the distance TARZAN leaves the girl in the crook of a tree. Off like a dove he goes. From limb to limb, leaping across great chasms, where skulking beasts growl up at his flying form, he leaps until he reaches the native village. At sight of his mighty form the women flee and soon he has glowing fire, and this he touches to the dry grass huts and soon mighty flames call the killers from their attack and "TARZAN of the Apes" has saved the whites from a terrible doom. Mild Smallpox Wave Is Visiting Toronto

Compulsory Vaccination for All Citizens Recommended by Board of Health.

TORONTO Nov. 5—Toronto's Board of Health at a special meeting recommended that Council issue a proclamation compelling vaccination of all citizens.

Dr. Hastings told how the Provincial and city authorities had gotten together and proved that the mild smallpox which is prevalent in the city is really that disease and not chickenpox becaus the virus, when applied to the mucous membrane of a rabbit's eye produced a pox that only smallpox and virus will produce. He was afraid that virulent cases would develop if the disease was allowed to spread over the city the flu a year ago having shown a tendency to become more virulent as it passed from camp to camp and from city to city.

There are fifteen smallpox patients in Toronto's smallpox hospital and nobody knows how many more not in the hospital, as the disease has been generally diagnosed as chickenpox. In one Ontario city there are 22 cases blamed on one case from Toronto. Toronto authorities, on the other hand say the disease came here from outside.

The smallpox hospital has accomodation for a little over a score of patients and it is evident that all cases cannot be hospitalized at present.

SORE ARMS FOR PUPILS

Dr. Hastings is ordering vaccination of the students in every teaching institution in Toronto, including the universities, music colleges and of course the Public and High schools.

A special meeting of the Board of Health is being called to request Council to issue a proclamation requiring everybody to be vaccinated. The law says that any member failing to endorse the issuance of such a proclamation is liable to a fine of $25.

All city nurses and other employees of the Health Department not already vaccinated are being "done" at once—a lot of them today.

While many people will wish to have their family physician do the necessary vaccinating the department will shortly issue a proclamation setting forth the district nursing centres and other points at which vaccination may be secured.

The Health Office is notifying the hospitals that they are each to provide vaccination facilities at stated hours every day.

DR. HASTINGS' THEORY

"The cases reported so far are of a mild and typical nature," explained Dr. Hastings "and we do not wish to alarm the public. At the same time, we wish to make the necessity of vaccination very clear. I am convinced that the unusual type is due to the lowest virulence of the smallpox virus owing to its prolonged absence. But it has now been spread by a number of carriers and while the type is just now mild, it is likely to become more virulent by rapid transference if it continues to be carried from one person to another. My advice and order, therefore, is to have the same precautions taken as if it were the more virulent type. In many cases where the present type of smallpox has been discovered, investigation discloses a previous chickenpox history among other members of the family."

HERE ARE THE SYMPTOMS

Dr. M. B. Whyte, Dr. Hastings' Director of Medical Services, who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on contagious disease in Torono, described the present unusual type of smallpox as follows: "The first symptoms are severe—headache, backache and naseau with aching pains all over he body. That may last for three or four days; patients may feel something as though they were getting the grippe Then they feel better and a rash comes out. It is indistinct in most cases. I saw one person who had only one mark on his body. It is smallpox, nevertheless and while we are not afraid of what it is now, w are anxious about what it may develop into."

There used to be compulsory vaccination in Toronto schools but the trustees abolished this as a permanent requirement. Dr. Hastings, however has now mandatory powers with regard to the matter.

Nurse Makes Facts Public

Was Told Operation Was Her Only Hope—"Tanlac is Wonderful," She Says.

Speaking from personal experience," said Mrs. D. L. Travis, a well known nurse, residing at 721 Seventh Ave., Peoria, Ill., in a conversation, recently. "I know Tanlac to be a most valuable medicine and I feel it my duty to give the facts to the world."

Mrs. Travis is only one of a great many in her profession who have endorsed Tanlac. She has been nursing the sick for eighteen years and her statement, coming, as it does, from one of such wide experience, will be read with interest everywhere.

"It is my honest belief," continued Mrs. Travis, "that there are millions of people who, if they only knew Tanlas as I do since using it myself, would lose no time in relieving themselves of their misery as I have done.

"The way I happened to know of Tanlac was through a noted physician. At this time I was suffering from what was said to be chronic appendicitis, which had troubled me for seven or eight years. I would become so nauseated—almost deathly sick—after eating that it was a common thing for me not to be able to retain my food. I am speaking now of the last stage of my suffering, after reaching the condition where an operation seemed unnavoidable. But, previous to this time and for several years my health had been very poor and it was an effort for me to stay on my feet and practice my profession. I did it under the strain of suffering and when I came off from a case I was always so completely tired out, exhausted and nervous that I thought each case would be the last.

"Finally, a few months ago, I gave up completely, took to my bed and arrangements were being made for an operation, as it was thought I would never recover without it. At this point my physician and friend advised me to try Tanlac for a few days. Knowing he would not advise me wrong I ordered a bottle at once and two days later my suffering was letting up. Those terrible pains began to leave, the swelling and bloating commenced to go down and in a day or two more I changed from liquid diet to some more nourishing and substantial food. From that time on I recovered in a way that was actually astonishing to those who attended me. In all I have taken about seven bottles of this medicine and to-day I am as well as one can be. My lost strength has returned, my nerves are perfectly calm and no one could get more restful sleep than I do. My appetite is fine. I enjoy all my meals and I never suffer in the slightest degree with my stomach or in any other way. Nothing would keep me from praising this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York.—Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly, and who are seemingly healthy, are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison, which when absorbed by the system slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will-power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness, or even cancer or the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud one full page from a book. If in the course of reading your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct, and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrah, and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next, in the morning before taking your usual smoke walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or snuff to quiet your nerves you are a slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In either case you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self-poisoning process, irrespective of the dangers, and suffer the consequences, or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula: Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol tablets, take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco, the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note.—When asked about Nicotol tablets one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists. (1)

Kiddies Love Music

IT is natural for the child to love music. The normal child loves nature in its many phases, and what is music if not a reproduction of nature's harmony? This love of music in the child can be turned to good account by the parent. By gratifying it who knows but that musical talent may be developed in the child? A

Not Your Money But Your Good Will

We want the good will of every car owner in this town.

We want everyone to say what lots of folks say now—"Willard? That's where you get a square deal and value for every dollar."

We'd rather have your good will than an extra dollar or two on a repair job.

We'd rather sell you a battery that will give longer and better service than to make a living by repairing poor batteries.

Of course good repair work and good batteries cost more, but we believe they make friends and buy good will.

Let's get together.

Bonnie Prince Charming Passes Through Belleville

LARGE CROWD GATHERS AT C. P. R. STATION AND BRIDGE TO SEE THE ROYAL TRAIN AND GREET GREAT BRITAIN'S FUTURE KING—HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS CHEERILY RESPONDS TO ENTHUSIASTIC CHEERS BY SMILING AND WAVING HIS HAT AS ROYAL TRAIN SLOWLY PASSED THROUGH THE LOCAL RAILWAY YARDS.

When it became known yesterday morning that the Royal train with His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, would pass through Belleville on the C. P. R., efforts were made by Aldermen Woodley and Bone to have the train stop here on its journey to Ottawa. Mayor Platt was absent on a hunting expedition, but telegrams were despatched conveying an invitation to His Royal Highness to favor Belleville with even a brief visit. The messages failed to reach the Royal party until Trenton was reached and it was then impossible to re-arrange the schedule. However, The Intelligencer bulletin board conveyed the news that the Royal train would pass through at 1.18 p.m. and would stop on the bridge. The news spread about town with lightning rapidity, with the result that when the Royal train hove in sight thousands of citizens—men, women and children—were gathered at various vantage points between the railway bridge and the passenger station. The train stopped on the bridge and then slowly proceeded amid enthusiastic cheers from many loyal throats. His Royal Highness appeared on the rear platform of the last car and smilingly acknowledged the cheers of the crowd by waving his hat and bowing. Many school children were present and various and interesting were the comments made by the little tots upon the appearance of the Prince. The unanimous verdict of the children was that the Prince was charming, that he was handsome and that he had golden hair and a golden smile.

The Royal standards upon the front of the locomotive indicated that one of the Royal Family was passing over a Canadian railway.

THE ROYAL TRAIN

The Prince of Wales travelled in Lord Shaughnessy's private car "Killarney" which the Chairman of the C. P. R. has placed at the Prince's disposal.

In addition to the "Killarney" the train had a second private car, the "Cromarty" belonging to Commander J. K. L. Ross. The "Cromarty" is finished in satinwood and fitted with every comfort imaginable. The remainder of the train consists of the compartment car "Empire" the dining car "Canada" two sleeping cars the "Carnarvon" and the "Chester" and the car "Chinook" with two baggage cars at the head of the train.

Several of the cars notably the "Chinook" the compartment and baggage cars were completed for the occasion and are specially interesting in that they are the first of a new series that have been adopted for the entire C. P. R. System and are equipped with everything that is modern in railway carriage building. After this journey the cars will be drafted into the regular service.

The train is equipped with modern devices and conveniences thus enabling the Prince and his suite to enjoy as early as possible the comforts of a stationary dwelling. Nothing has been overlooked from the handle set at the royal bedside to regulate the temperature of the stateroom, which is a standard appliance in Canadian Pacific equipment to the telephone that brings him in touch with all parts of the train.

In order to distinguish it from other cars on the line, the "Killarney" bears the coat of arms of the Prince of Wales having beneath it the inscription "Ich dien." The car is entered by means of a small observation platform at the rear, small yet large enough to accomodate several arm chairs from which the royal party viewed the wonders of the Rockies and the fascinating wheat fields of the prairies. The first compartment is also devoted to observation a compact little room fitted with a lounge, easy chairs, a table and electric fans. On rainy days or in cold weather the passing scenery may be viewed more pleasantly through the large windows on either side, than from the platform outside. A speed recorder adds interest to the constant enticement of the journey while an air pressure gauge indicates the application of the brakes by the engineer.

Next to the observation compartment comes a section devoted to the Prince's secretary, after which one reaches the bedroom occupied by His Royal Highness in person. A rich simplicity characterizes this compartment, which is finished in white mahogany inlaid with a fine line of ebony outlining the panels. Built into the walls across the end is the bedstead, finished with little ornamentation in the white mahogany of the room. Over the bed may be pulled a roller curtain to protect the occupant from the dust and draughts of the ventilators in the ceiling. The door is a full length mirror and an oval glass is set above the dressing table. The fittings of the dressing table and toilet are brass in harmony with the woodwork and a large receptacle is screwed into the wall to hold a thermos bottle for hot or cold drinks during the night. Next to the royal bedroom is a second stateroom, with two berths similar to the first assigned to the secretary. Then in a niche in the wall is a shower bath of white tiles and porcelain.

The central portion of the car is devoted to the dining room which is tastefully decorated in royal blue. Beneath the little extension table is a heavy pile carpet of blue with six chairs upholstered in tapestry to match The curtains and even the drawers of the sideboard carry out the color scheme, for the silver table service reposes between divsions of blue tapestry velvet. Between the sideboard and the window is a secretaire with pens and paper ready for many social notes that are imposed upon the Prince and his secretary. Above is a miniature bookcase just large enough for a few delightful volumes sepecially furnished and all by Canadian authors.

With steel walls finished in imitation mahogany, a kitchenette, pantry icebox, service counter, charcoal heater and chef's bedroom, have been fitted into limited space beyond the dining room.

The compartment car "Empire" is reminiscent of an English coach, for the seats are partitioned off and joined only by the narrow corridor that runs down the length of the car. At each end is a commodious drawingroom with a sofa in addition to the upper and lower berths. The color scheme of the compartment car is grey and green the grey of the marbleized wall finish

Hon. Dr. Cody's Inspiring And Eloquent Address At Cheese Board Banquet

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL BANQUET TENDERED TO MEMBERS OF BELLEVILLE CHEESE BOARD BY MR. JOHN ELLIOTT, MANAGER OF BELLEVILLE BRANCH OF THE STANDARD BANK OF CANADA, A GRAND SUCCESS—ALL PREVIOUS EFFORTS SURPASSED — ATTENDANCE FILLED LARGE DINING ROOM AND OVERFLOW SITTING HELD—HON. DR. CODY PRINCIPAL SPEAKER.

Work, Thrift and Education are the three great principles which Canadians must adopt in united effort to cope with the great after war problems, carry the burden and discharge our duty to the Empire and the world at large, said Hon. Dr. Cody in the course of his eloquent, inspiring and intensely interesting address at the thirteenth annual banquet tendered to the members of the Belleville Cheese Board by Mr. John Elliott, Manager of the Belleville Branch of teh Standard Bank of Canada at the Hotel Quinte Wednesday, November 5, 1919.

HON. DR. CODY, MINISTER OF EDUCATION
Principal Speaker at Mr. John Elliott's Annual Dinner to Belleville Cheese Board.

More than two hundred guests were in attendance and an overflow sitting had to be arranged to accommodate all who responded to the invitation to be present at this unique and interesting annual event which has grown in importance and interest since its inception thirteen years ago until now even the large dining room of the Hotel Quinte is not spacious enough to accommodate all who wish to attend. Every part of the Belleville Cheese District was represented at the gathing, in addition to prominent men in public life from a distance as well as representative citizens of Belleville. The thirteenth annual banquet arranged by Mr. Elliott can safely be said to have eclipsed all previous efforts in point of interest and attendance, and the twelve previous banquets were thought to have reached the acme of perfection.

Ovation for Hon. Dr. Cody

The outstanding feature of the banquet was the splendid address of Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education for Ontario in the Hearst Government. Dr. Cody upon rising to speak was greeted with an ovation which was a striking tribute to his popularity and the general appreciation of his ability and the value of his service to the public as Minister of Education. The large gathering, composed principally of farmers and those engaged in the production of cheese and by-products rose to their feet as one man, cheered Dr. Cody to the echo and waved handkerchiefs in such an enthusiastic and spontaneous welcome as has fallen to the lot of few public men to receive. It was a sincere and heartfelt tribute to the worth of a big, strong Canadian citizen, willing to devote his time and talents to the public service, even at the sacrifice of his own private interests. Dr. Cody's address which followed when quiet was at length restored fully justified his enthusiastic reception, and the thought uppermost in all minds at the close must have coincided with the remark made by a prominent educationalist present that "it would be a calamity to lose Hon. Dr. Cody's services as Minister of Education for Ontario."

Lucky Thirteen

For the thirteenth time the chair was ably occupied by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, solicitor for the Belleville Branch of the Standard Bank of Canada, who has so ably presided at each of these annual functions for the past thirteen years. When the good things provided by Mine Host Jenkins had received the attention merited by the excellent spread, and it must be said that splendid and satisfying as has been the record of the Hotel Quinte at all previous functions of this kind the banquet of 1919 surpassed all others in excellence of the viands and in service, the after program was initiated by Chairman O'Flynn and carried out without a hitch in his usual capable manner. As long as he lived the finest of his memories would be to look back upon the honor of presiding at these splendid gatherings, said Mr. O'Flynn, who in a brief address welcomed the guests and thanked all who had assisted in making it a success. He also emphasized the enterprise and progressiveness of Mr. John Elliott who had conceived the idea of these beneficial gatherings and carried them out with ever-increasing success. The chairman read letters of regret at inability to be present from Messrs. Coates and Boland, of the Robert Reford Steamship Lines, Montreal; Messrs. Doherty and Burke of the Canada Steamship Lines; Gene Illsey, of Hamilton, and R. B. Faith, of the Ottawa Farm Journal.

Chairman O'Flynn then proposed a toast to Mr. John Elliott, which was enthusiastically received and fittingly responded to by Mr. Elliott.

Mr. John Elliott

Mr. Elliott extended a warm welcome to all present, greeting them as friends, tried and true, which he had proven by actual experience. This was the largest and most representative gathering of the entire series, and an expression of confidence and esteem which he appreciated very highly. He was especially grateful for the kindness of Hon. Dr. Cody, Rev. Canon Fitzgerald and others who had honored the occasion with their presence. Dr. Cody was one of the greatest men in Canadian public life today and he was proud to number him among his friends. Mr. Elliott paid a tribute to the memory of the late J. W. Johnson, who had so long and so ably represented West Hastings in the Legislature, and who in his lifetime had always been an honored guest at these gatherings. There was another vacant chair at the board in the absence of Mr. Thomas Watkins, a pioneer cheeseman, to whose efforts the Belleville Cheese District owes a deep debt of gratitude. Mr. Watkins had answered the last call and passed from life since the last banquet, but his memory would always be preserved in the kindly thoughts of a host of friends.

MR. JOHN ELLIOTT,
Originator of the Famous "City and Country" Banquets.

Mr. Elliott then drew the attention of the gathering to the possibilities of Canada from a production standpoint, the growing prosperity of the nation, and the responsibilities entailed, individually and collectively as citizens of this great country. Mr. Elliott illustrated his points with the following interesting figures:

Retail Merchants Not Profiteers

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—Representatives of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada who met the Board of Commerce this morning held that there was no profiteering among retailers, that they were prepared to do all in their power to assist the board in their effort to relieve present conditions and that in their opinion lowering of prices arbitrarily would not help but would make matters worse. Mr. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Executive, said that retailers no longer wanted to be branded as thieves and scoundrels. It was no good, he insisted, on fooling the public longer about a reduction in the cost of living. Prices would only come down in natural order. Judge Robson assured the deputation that they would be consulted on any point affecting their business.

Fighting Talk In House of Commons

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—Bath Commons and Senate had morning sessions today in an effort to clean up business and secure early prorogation. The Senate discussed the Grand Trunk purchase bill and Senator Smeaton White joined other Government supporting Senators in opposing the bill as now constituted. In the Commons the debate was continued on an amendment to the report of the soldiers' re-establishment committee and developed into personalities in relation to Col. John A. Currie, who was one of the commoners who indulged in a pugilistic exhibition in the corridor yesterday. Dr. Edwards declared that Colonel Currie had all the bumptiousness and assurance of Kaiser Wilhelm with none of the latter's modesty.

Bolshevik Plot In Germany

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

BASET, Germany, Nov. 6.—Investigators for the Deutsch Allgemeine Zeitung of Berlin claim to have discovered plans for a communist uprising to depose the present German Government and to establish a new one modelled on the Russian plan which would be associated with the present Russian soviet system. The investigators assert that the proposed revolution is to be assisted and unofficered by Russian Bolshevists and that the outbreak is to have its beginning in the Ruhr coal district. This responsible newspaper publishes a warning so energetic that it is accepted in well informed quarters as of more importance than the many rumors in circulation, Munich, Brunswick and other cites are claimed to be sub-centers for the movement.

Wets Claim To Be Leading In Ohio

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 6.—Late returns today from Tuesday's prohibition election in Ohio seemed to shatter the election night prediction of Secretary of State Smith that the Drys had carried the four prohibition proposals. Fairly complete unofficial returns from 59 to 88 counties gave the Wets a lead of 14,000 on the repeal amendment, of 27,000 on beer proposal, of 48,000 on ratification and of 78,000 on the Crabbe bill.

Banquet Echoes

Before the guests sat down to the banquet tables the Rev. Canon Beamish, rector of St. Thomas Church, invoked divine blessing upon the assemblage.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Inspector for Eastern Ontario, is one of the annuals at the Cheese Board dinner and was in his place at the head table as usual yesterday.

Mr. Elliott said tha t he had one thousand people in mind whom he would like to have had at the banquet but the attendance had to be confined to the capacity of the largest dining hall in the city.

"It is a happy coincidence that our Young Prince Charming, who has learned the Canadian spirit and become a Canadian farmer, should pass through this city just at the time this unique banquet of country and city folk was due to begin."—Hon. Dr. Cody.

Despite the ascendency of the farmers in affairs of state the visitors from the rural districts did not put on any air of superiority and mingled with the city folks upon a common plane of equality. As victors they certainly carry their honors well.

It was a typical Canadian gathering said Dr. Cody, the faces denoting stability, intelligence, initiative and resourcefulness. Canadians possessed a wonderful combination of virtues with stability, solidity and adaptability.

A. M. Rankin, M.P.P., for Frontenac never likes to miss a John Elliott Cheese Board dinner, and was among the guests as usual. Mr. Rankin was one of the successful Conservative candidates ree-lected in the recent legislative election. He won out handily in a three-cornered contest.

H. K. Denyes, M.P.P., for East Hastings, who was elected on the U. F. O. ticket made his first public appearance since the election, and in a brief address seconded the vote of thanks moved by Col. W. N. Ponton. Henry was given a cordial reception which indicated his popularity with those present.

One hundred and seventy covers were laid for the banquet in the Hotel Quinte dining room and even then there was not room for all who wished to attend. An overflow banquet annex was speedily organized and after the dinner all foregathered for the speaking in the main dining hall of the Hotel Quinte.

Dr. Creelman, Principal of the Guelph Agricultural College and Commissioner of Agriculture for Ontario, two years ago; Hon. Mr. Henry, Minister of Agriculture, last year, and Hon. Dr. Cody, the best Minister of Education Ontario ever had, this year. That's three in a row which shows that John Elliott is a good picker and that his annual City and Country Dinners have attained nation-wide fame and importance.

Dr. Cody dwelt upon the necessity of thrift, gather up even the fragments, said he, but after the banquet there were no fragments to gather up as every plate was clean as a whistle, mute testimony to the excellence of the menu provided by the culinary staff of the Hotel Quinte. Chicken was the big feature and such chicken that only a southern mammy could produce, tender, toothsome and irresistible.

Robt. J. Bushell, Manager of the Kingston Industrial Fair, was a guest at the banquet. Bob was present last year and wouldn't miss John Elliott's annual reunion of city and county folk for anything. Bob is big, busy and genial, and a man of achievement, having placed Kingston on the map with a successful Fall Fair after the old style Kingston Fair had died of senile decay. Bob is a farmer and an enthusiastic member of the U. F. O., and it is on the cards that he will tackle the formidable Dr. John Wesley Edwards of Cataraqui, at the next Dominion election. If he does there will be some scrap as both are bonnie fighters..

Music and Drama

(What the Press Agents Say)

"BRINGING UP FATHER"

Comedy is the overwhelming ingredient which goes to make up the entertaining play of "Bringing Up Father in Society" which will be the offering at Griffin's to-morrow night. The piece, which is wedded to bright and snappy music, features, surprises, novelties and other diverting humorous essentials, is based on the popular comic cartoons of George McManus. As in former seasons it is sponsored by Gus Hill who first saw the possibilities of presenting cartoon plays upon the stage. As a departure from the cut and dried plays of the time-honored brand this piece should ably drive choristers who know how to sing and similar maladies without much ado. The cast is large and efficient and includes sixteen pretty and captivating the daintiest of stars surrounded by the dance cleverly and at the same time wear stunning costumes with becoming grace and modesty. Seats are now on sale at Griffin's.

COMEDY AND ADVENTURE

Madge Kennedy in the environment of the wild west. It had to happen. The laughter-provoking possibilites of the daitiest of stars surrounded by the roughest Western characters is shown in "Leave it to Susan," confidently offered by the producers as absolutely the best Madge Kennedy photoplay yet presented. She is as different in her methods as the locale is unlike any in which she has hitherto found herself. Her rapidly mounting popularity will increase by leaps and bounds when she is seen as Susan, daughter of a financier, who finds herself stranded on the American desert and seeks refuge in a shack occupied by a band of desperados. This situation verging on the tragic, becomes an episode of delight as Madge Kennedy plays it. The entire production of "Leave it to Susan" is replete with moments of wholesome and refreshing fun. Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison appear on the same program in the opening chapter of the greatest "stunt" serial ever conceived. "The Great Gamble". New comedies and topical plays are also announced for exhibition on the same program.

THRILLS OF "TARZAN" FILM

"Tarzan of the Apes" which excited considerable comment among the readers of adventure fiction a few years ago, is being shown in film form at Griffin's to-night and Saturday matinee and night. Being the story of a primeval man—or rather, of a man brought up among apes and endowed with many of their abilities—it presents not a few difficulties to the movie maker. All of these have been overcome and apes swing realistically from bough to bough in the jungle while lions and leopards seek their prey on the ground below. Intertwined with the jungle story is a domestic narrative which will prove of unusual interest. The filmplay is augmented by the exhibition of many stirring scenes of the jungle. A majority of these were photographed in Brazil with the assistance of a large cast of natives the picture in addition to being novel and interesting also has a touch of educational value. The role of Tarzan is in the capable hands of Elmo Lincoln who meets the difficult requirements of the hero satisfactorily. Besides the above offering, five other comedy and topicals will also be exhibited.

Work, Thrift And Education

due to the manufacture of cheese and its byproducts, particularly the hog industry. There is a bright future for the Canadian farmer in the markets of Great Britain and Europe, the essentials being quality and increased production.

Spirit of Cooperation

The object of these annual dinners, where all classes are represented is to bring about a helpful spirit of cooperation, said the speaker. One way to promote this would be for the producers to join with the Belleville Board of Trade in seeking to advance the interests of the entire district, city and country. Each factory and farmers' club should have a representative on the Belleville Board of Trade, which was the first organization of the kind to introduce a farmers' section and have a representative at the annual meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade for the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Elliott reviewed the local cheese situation, the delegation to Ottawa to see the Government, and his own personal interview with Hon. Dr. Tolmie, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, in company with Mr. E. Guss Porter, M. P., when he urged upon the Minister the necessity of an open market for cheese, a fair field, no favors and no fixed price. He was glad to say that conditions in the trade had improved since his interview with the Minister, whether his own efforts had had any influence or not.

In conclusion Mr. Elliott said that city and country should get together if the best results are to be obtained and urged all present to co-operate with this idea in mind:

"We invite you to help us promote the welfare and prosperity of the City of Belleville and request you to give us the opportunity of assisting you in developing and increasing the wealth and reputation of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. By united action we can do our part as loyal citizens of the Dominion of Canada, a part of the great British Empire and be more worthy of the sacrifices made by Canada's sons on the battlefields of Europe."

Chairman O'Flynn in introducing Hon. Dr. Cody, said that their distinguished guest was too big a man to let any spirit of partizanship interfere with a just recognition of his merits. No better man could have been obtained for the important office of Minister of Education, and it would be in the best interest of the Province to keep Dr. Cody there as the true Canadian he is and not as a partizan. (Applause.)

Hon. Dr. Cody

It was some minutes before Hon. Dr. Cody could begin his address so enthusiastic was his reception. He said that it was one of the greatest delights of his life to number among his friends John Elliott, one of Canada's finest citizens, the more so, perhaps, because he was born in Ireland, a man who devoted his time, energy and talents to building up a Greater Canada. Dr. Cody expressed his appreciation of the benefits inculcated by these annual gatherings in the spirit of cooperation engendered in the bringing together of city and country in a successful effort to bind together in one common interest different groups of people in the upbuilding of Canada. No group can possibly confine their efforts to their own interests, but all must join together in the work of building up a greater Canada with due regard to the interests of others. The spirit of comradeship learned in the war must be the guiding spirit to ensure success in time of peace.

Secrets of Success

There were four great secrets in the success of the Canadian army overseas.

Mutual confidence—the men trusted the officers and the officers trusted the men.

Wonderful co-operation—The infantry, artillery, air service and commissariat, worked together as one.

Wonderful mastery—Each branch of the service aimed at perfection.

Iron discipline—The Canadian army was noted for its discipline which all cheerfully assented to.

The principles which had gained Canada such wonderful success in war should be applied to the problems of peace time and the results would be beneficial to all.

Canada was now in mid-stream of world life, one of the smaller nations, but still part of the Empire. World competition must now be faced with the best quality of goods, and knowledge, skill and science must be applied to all departments of public life.

Soldiers Love of Canada

Dr. Cody related some of his experiences overseas in war time with especial reference to the love of Canada which animated our soldiers. We must try to make Canada as good and worthy and true as our boys over there thought it was, and it will keep us busy, said the speaker in an eloquet appeal for love of country and appreciation of the opportunities and resources of this great land of the second chance. The golden leaves of autumn are symbolical of the golden lives laid down on the battlefields for the freedom of Canada, and the leaves of scarlet significant of the red blood of our heroes which had enriched the soil of France and Belgium that Canada might be kept free. It was a challenge worthy of the best efforts to live up to that their deaths shall not have been in vain.

Wealth of Canada

Canada's natural wealth and untold resources were eloquently described in detail by the speaker, who predicted even greater progress and prosperity in the future as the result of faith, hope, confidence and an energetic policy of development. After war problems were many and difficult but Dr. Cody believes that Canada will more speedily and more safely re-establish itself on a peace footing than any other country. The Canadian people stand for an orderly liberty and no lawless elements can ever obtain the mastery here. There is no cause for uneasiness over the war burdens, the field and farm products alone in one year would more than pay off the whole national debt. Contrasting Canada with the Motherland and Europe Dr. Cody said that over there they know the extent of their resources to a nicety, and there could be no happy surprises as here. Canadians haven't begun to view the limit of even the touched resources, much less the untouched resources.

A Wonderful Motherland

The Motherland was a wonderful place, absolutely undaunted by the great burdens imposed by the war, which would be resolutely shouldered and discharged in good time. Sir Charles Hanson, former Lord Mayor of London, said to the speaker: "I have no doubt whatever that we will speedily recover our position of financial supremacy in the world."

Work, save and learn should be a pledge taken by all Canadians. It had been well said that happiness was based upon a useful and congenial job well done. Work was not a curse as some would try to make it appear, but a blessing as God meant it to be when not carried beyond the point of fatigue.

The danger was in extremes. A four-hour work-day would produce miserable men who would get into more mischief than all the policemen and legislation in the world could get them out of. An American had said that the men who sought to be protected from being obliged to work more than five hours a day were too delicate to wear trousers.

Production means wealth and the less production the less wealth for distribution.

No Room For Loafers

There is no room in Canada for idlers, loafers and parasites, and few die from overwork.

Referring to education, Dr. Cody said that he would like to say one final word as his swan song. Much sheer nonsense had been talked about home work for school children. While it was true that some unwise teachers had overloaded pupils with home work, particularly mathematics, there were more children's eyes ruined and impaired by movie shows and motoritis than by too much home work.

Mistaken Economy

Work, thrift and education must go hand in hand in building up the Greater Canada; economy was necessary, but some economy is not true economy. Don't attempt to economize on education, said Dr. Cody. Education is too profitable to be restricted through a mistaken idea of economy. In particular it would be the height of folly to try to economize on the salaries of teachers. The influence of education on the progress and prosperity of various nations was shown by the speaker, and he related an instance of a school which he visited in Fort William where he was presented to a class of twenty-three pupils representing twenty-three different nationalities. They sang for him such songs as "O Canada," "We'll Never let the Old Flag Fall," and one little Assyrian girl sang a solo, "O Britain, our dear Motherland." This was an illustration of the uniting power of education through the schools.

In the next ten years if present plans reach fruition Canada will lead the world in technical and industrial education.

While the world must be made safe for democracy it was necessary that the world be made safe under democracy, and as an Italian philosopher has said, only spirtiual democracy will save the world, a democracy, intelligent, honest and spiritualized.

It should be the aim of Canada to educate the boys and girls as individuals, as workers and as citizens, moulding their bodies and minds to fit their life work. Education is as necessary for business life as for professions, practical education as advocated by Leland Stanford which will make men and women good company for themselves.

Education For Citizenship

Dr. Cody closed with an eloquent appeal for united support of practical educational facilities to fit the youth of the land for the duties and responsibilities of the highest type of citizenship, a duty you owe yourself, your neighbor and your God, facing the future of Canada with hope and faith as the best of comrades, a hope dauntless and unafraid, as he saw strikingly illustrated by a notice lettered in red on a barn near the firing line in France during the darkest days of the German drive, "Pessimists will be shot on sight." True hope is based on faith in ourselves, our splendid past, our high destiny, and faith in God, in right, in truth and in mercy. The outstretched arm of God had delivered us in the dark days of the past and had given us the victory, that we might use that victory not for selfish interests but for the glory of world service.

Dr. Cody's address was listened to with close interest and punctuated with appreciative applause. His genial personality, radiating enthusiastic earnestness and his kindly admonitions and eloquent word grouping cannot be adequately conveyed in the condensed report of his address rendered necessary by the limits of newspaper space, which can only convey a faint conception of the intense interest compelled by the charm, forcefulness and eloquence of Dr. Cody.

"Paddy, The Piper"

Rev. Canon Fitzgerald, M.A., of Kingston, after a short address entertained the gathering with a recitation which was altogether delightful, given in the rich full brogue of the Emerald Isle with which the reverend gentleman is so familiar. The strange adventures of "Paddy the Piper and the Cow" were told by Canon Fitzgerald in a manner which kept the gathering in one long joyous laugh, their appreciation being manifested by vociferous applause.

A vote of thanks to Hon. Dr. Cody was moved by Col. W. N. Ponton with an eloquent tribute to the sterling ability and valuable public services of Ontario's Minister of Education. The motion was seconded by Mr. H. K. Denyes, M.P.P., and carried enthusiastically by a standing vote.

Prof. Hunt, organist of Bridge Street Methodist Church, presided at the piano and assisted materially in the success of the occasion with appropriate musical numbers. Solos by Messrs. John McIntosh and W. H. Wrightmeyer were grealy enjoyed, and a number of patriotic choruses were sung by the gathering between courses.

John Elliott's thirteenth annual banquet will long be remembered as an occasion of exceptional interest and enjoyment for all present, and the best of a series of interesting and helpful functions.

Comic Opera Politics In Newfoundland

The political developments in Newfoundland leading up to the general election have been somewhat Gilbertian in their character. For instance in he Legislature last spring when the decision was reached to disrupt the Lloyd Ministry through the agency of a vote of confidence, this motion was made by Sir Michael Cashin, who was at the time Finance Minister in the Administration, and was seconded by the Premier himself, Sir William Lloyd, he, unlike his lieutenant, being apparently, satisfied that the period of usefulness of his Government had ceased. This was followed by all the members of the Government as it then existed, except the Fishermen's Union representatives, remaining on the Government side, and those who had previously been sitting in Opposition crossing to join them while the Fishermen's Union Party withdrew from the Government, and crossed the floor thereby constituting themselves the Opposition. The resultant controversies disclosed the fact that Mr. Coaker ,the head of the F. P. U. had in the previous December sent a message to Sir William Lloyd, who had just arrived in London from St. John's to attend the Peace Conference notifying him that it was proposed to break up the Government then and giving him six weeks to return explaining that it would be postponed for this period if he wished to come back, but implying that if he did not the destruction of the Government would be accomplished without him.

Sectarianism too, is playing its part in the contest. Sir Michael Cashin, the present Premier, being a Roman Catholic as was Sir Edward Morris, though this denomination numbers but about a third of the entire population. One of the amusing revelations of the closing days of the election campaign is the exposure of the fact that the Grand Master of the Orange Association, was a recipient for several years past of a free ticket by the Catholic Premiers to enable him to traverse the Island railroad on his way to Canada for the annual meetings of this organization. It is hardly needful to say that after this exposure the theory that these people are at each others throats is not taken very seriously by the electorate.

Two More Prince Of Wales Flags Won By Townships

Hastings county climbed over to the right side of the fence yesterday with a day's canvass of $126,100, which brings our percentage up to 50.20 at half-time of the Victory Loan campaign. Our percentage of time gone is just 50 per cent., and for the first time we are above it. With a much better outlook for the second half of the campaign it looks certain that we will substantially oversubscribe our objective.

Two more Prince of Wales' flags were won yesterday by Tyendinaga; Messrs. J. F. Hinchey and G. N. Spafford, who have now 102.40 per cent., and Faraday and Dungannon (Bancroft)—Dr. A. T. Embury and Mr. D. H. Morrison, who have quickly climbed to 114.50. In addition to his flag Mr. W. A. McMurray, Gilmour, canvasser for Tudor, Limerick and Cashel, has won a Prince of Wales' Crest for having got an additional 25 per cent. of his objective, has now 130 per cent.

Belleville is a little slow in its efforts to beat out Trenton in attaining their objectives. Trenton forged ahead to 66.53 per cent. yesterday, leaving us at 44.67. Local canvassers have something up their sleeves, however, and feel confident. Deseronto has leaped up to 59.61 per cent., suddenly making a splendid gain of 34.93 in one day.

Rapidly districts are bringing their totals over the percentage of time gone, eight having climbed to good position.

Victory Loan Parade.

Merchants, manufacturers and owners of motor cars will have a fine opportunity to win a $50 Victory Bond on Saturday morning and at the same time advertise their business. A big Victory Loan parade consisting of decorated industrial cars, floats and private cars and school children will form up at the armouries at 10.30 a.m. under Marshal J. J. B. Flint. Prizes of $50 bonds are being awarded to the best industrial car or float and to the best decorated private car. There will also be some novel features introduced which have not been announced yet. All floats, etc., must be emblematic of the Victory Loan. Anyone wishing posters or other loan advertising material can get it by applying at Victory Loan headquarters, 194 Front Street.

48 Hour Week, Not Hour Day

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5—The organization committee of the international labor conference has prepared a draft convention for a 48-hour week. It is proposed that the provisions of the draft convention which will probably come before the conference tomorrow shall be brought into force not later than July 1st, 1921.

The draft embodies the principles of the 48-hour week rather than that of the eight-hour day for two reasons, according to the committee.

First, it allows elasticity in the arrangement of the hours of work and it facilitates the adoption of a half holiday or even a whole holiday on Saturday, or some other day of the week, by enabling a longer period than eight hours to be worked on other days.

Secondly, it helps to secure the weekly rest day, whereas the principle of an eight hour day by itself does not.

Exceptions

Special provision is made for certain specified industries where a 48-hour week is considered impracticable In certain of these cases the 48-hour week may be extended to 56 in the week on the averages. In others, it could be extended to 60. In certain industries, over time for not more than 150 hours in the year may be worked with the provision that the workers shall receive overtime pay at least 25 per cent. higher than normal pay. In other industries, overtime, it is proposed may be worked for not more than 150 hours in the year during the next five years and afterwards for not more than 100 hours per year. In these cases, too, overtime pay would be 25 per cent. over normal.

HONDURAN CITY OF MYSTERY

No Scholar Has Been Able to Decipher the Picture-Writings Left in Copan.

Copan is a city of mystery. The people who once thronged its streets and bowled at its altars are long since gone, leaving no record of their existence save the hoary stones of their city. These stones, built into pyramids, walls and monuments, bear their story carved in the Maya characters. But no descendants have survived to interpret the stories, and no scholar has arisen wise enough to read the picture-writings of Copan.

Ruins of this oldest city of the Maya Indians may still be seen by those sufficiently persistent and enthusiastic to seek them out. A little Indian village in western Honduras, and the river on which it lies keep the name of Copan alive today. To visit the ruins of the great Copan you must seek out this village by train and then go a long journey on horseback. Just beyond the village lies the old Maya metropolis.

The only inhabitants of Copan today are queer figures of the Maya gods, that peer out of unexpected hiding places like the creatures of a bad dream. Wonderfully carved many of them are, grotesque in attitude and expression, according to the artists' conception of the beings of the other world.

When Copan flourished, how it fell, and what became of its last people, no one knows. The city is as desolate as only a deserted city can be, oppressive and sad even in the bright sunlight of a tropical midday.—"Niksah" in Indianapolis Star.

JAPS HONOR BRITISH SAILOR

Still Revere Memory of William Adams, Who Led Expedition to Their Country in 160.

Two memorial stone lanterns near the Japanese port of Yokosuka are the people's tribute to the memory of William Adams, an English sailor who was the first of his countrymen to settle in Japan, and who is credited with opening the way for commerce between Britain and Japan. In 1600 Adams led a trading expedition bound for the West Indies. His fleet consisted of five vessels symbolically named, Faith, Hope, Charity, Fidelity and Good News. The expedition met with many misfortunes of weather and sickness. Their adventures included the loss of eight men who were eaten by cannibals on one of the Pacific islands.

The ship carrying Adams finally reached the coast of Bungo in the eastern part of Kyushu, Japan. The Englishmen made friends with the natives until the arrival of some Portuguese Jesuits who told the Japanese leaders the strangers were pirates and had them imprisoned. The emperor heard of their plight, and had them brought to his palace at Osaka. The ruler finally decided that the men were harmless and released them, retaining Adams at court to teach shipbuilding and other arts to the natives. In 1613 another English sea captain arrived in Japan with letters from the king of England to the emperor of Japan. Through Adams' influence the Englishmen and the oriental ruler signed a treaty giving Britain the perpetual right to enter any ports of the empire and trade freely throughout the country.

Protecting Airplane Propellers.

An aluminum plating for airplane propellers has been devised for the purpose of protecting the wood from the influence of the weather, which has been a serious problem heretofore. The plating is a thin leaf which is incorporated in the finish of the propellers, and the idea was developed by the forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., and placed in production by the war department. The process is practically 100 per cent effective in preventing absorption of water, particularly in the storage stage. A French authority states that 80 per cent of the French propellers produced are rejected by the pilots mainly because they are out of balance. This difficulty is due largely to unequal absorption or distribution of moisture and can be greatly reduced by an effective water-proofing coating.

LED TO RESCUE BY DREAM

Tug Captain's Confidence in Vision He Had Proved Fortunate for Two Fishermen.

Guided by a dream, Capt. Adam Paczocha of a Lake Michigan tug found two men who had been drifting about helpless in a broken motor-launch for four days. The rescue was just in time to save the men's lives, for the feet of one were frozen and the other's hands were frostbitten and they were exhausted from cold and hunger.

Captain Paczocha had his dream while taking a nap at his home in Milwaukee one afternoon. When he awoke he described to his family how he had seen a launch drifting about helpless in the storm-swept lake and how he had swung his boat alongside and saved two men.

"I'm going to find them," said the captain, after telling of the dream vision.

He set out the next morning and by midafternoon he had located the launch. The two men in the launch were George Costigan and Joseph Budsiecz, Jones Island fishermen who had met with misfortune while out hauling in their nets. Driven about by a sudden storm that arose on the lake they sought to make shore until the gasoline engine in the launch gave out. Then they drifted about helpless.

The rescued men's first request was for cigarettes. They had been unable to smoke for four days because their matches had become wet.

FIRST TO WEAR FINGER RING

Legend Makes Prometheus the Pioneer of Custom That May Now Be Called Universal.

The first finger ring is supposed to have been worn by Prometheus, who stole fire from heaven that man might warm himself and cook his food. This act so incensed Jupiter that the king of gods condemned him to be chained upon a rock where vultures could constantly feast upon him. The sentence was carried out, but Prometheus was released. Then Jupiter ordered that Prometheus wear a link of chain about his finger as a reminder of the punishment. A fragment of the rock to which he had been chained was set in the ring, so that he might still be regarded as being bound to the rock.

The custom of wearing an engagement or wedding ring upon the third finger is due to an ancient belief that a nerve or vein directly connected this finger with the heart, according to a writer in the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Macrobius said: "Because of this nerve the newly betrothed places the ring on this finger of his beloved, as though it were a representation of the heart." And just to show that the practice is a very old one, Macrobius admitted having obtained the facts from an Egyptian priest, thus linking the belief with the dim reaches of the past.

JUST KNOCKING, NOT HELPING.

The Liberal Opposition at Ottawa is playing the game of the corporations in opposing the G. T. R. purchase bill, but they do not offer any alternative. The Government is somewhat in the position of the man who was fighting the wildcat at close quarters. His friend hollered, Hold on to him, I'm coming, but the man with the wildcat on his hands yelled back, "It's help I need to let him go, not hang on to him, bad cess to you." The Government would no doubt be pleased to let go of the G. T. R. if that were possible. Even the clever Mackenzie King and astute Fielding filled many pages of Hansard with objections to the acquirement of the G. T. R. by the people, but not one page or paragraph of coherent alternative.

NOTHING BETTER.

It is not only the big investing companies of Canada which have shown their confidence in Victory Loan, 1919, by greatly increasing their subscriptions over those of 1918. In the lists already published it will be noticed that the majority of similar companies doing business in Canada, but having their headquarters in the United States, have also come forward with increased subscriptions—in many cases with twice the nucber of millions that they subscribed a year ago. The men at the head of these great concerns are shrewd and widely experienced. The whole world is under their observation and they do not hazard the funds at their disposal unless the return is good and the security above suspicion. The Canadian citizen with a small sum to invest cannot do better than follow the example of these heads of big financial businesses. There is no better investment on the world market today than Victory Loan 1919.

THE TASK OF THE BOND-SELLERS.

The thousands of enthusiastic workers who are now engaged in the great and patriotic duty of floating the Victory Loan to success in every part of Canada have a somewhat different task from the "originals" who laid the foundations of the first Victory Loan of 1917. Most of them are still in the fight; but they now have to deal with a public which is educated in the national and personal benefits of Victory Bonds. When the first Victory loan was conceived and pressed to a splendid accomplishment, only a small percentage of those who were approached had more than a vague idea of what a bond or an interest coupon meant. Those in charge of publicity had to teach the public the A. B. C.'s of financial investment, as well as to stir the public to a realization of the great national purpose that lay back of the campaign.

Now the public everywhere, even to the children in the schools knows what Victory Bonds are; what a safe, convenient and remunerative investment they have proved. The only question is, whether the public realizes that the national necessity is as pressing as it was while the war was still in progress. Canada must fulfil her obligations created by the war. She must keep her pledges to the returned soldiers, and to maintain her trade prosperity and conserve it for the future, she must obtain a great liquid capital to enable her to do a credit business across the seas. The indications are that the public has become infected with the same enthusiasm that made the past Victory Loans successful and placed Canada where she is today. Her people did not fail her in 1917 and 1918; neither will they in 1919.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

With compulsory vaccination for everybody facing Toronto and several other cities battling with smallpox outbreaks, it might be a good idea for Belleville Board of Health and Medical Health Officer to try out a program based upon the idea that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. There is no isolation hospital here ,and the policy in the past in dealing with epidemics here has been one of secrecy, a policy long since discarded by communities having any pretensions to being up-to-date. The secrecy policy is not secret at all and only means an attempt to gag the press, with the inevitable result that street rumors swell to extravagant size and grotesqueness unchecked by the publication of the truth and the business life of the community is injured a thousand times more than would be the case if the plain truth was published. The people are at all times entitled to the truth on matters of public health as well as on all other public matters. All contagious diseases should be reported at once by the physicians in charge as required by law and should be registered in a book placed in the city clerk's office open to the public.

There's a right way of doing everything—also a wrong way—let us try the right way for a change, and the right way is to start now and try to prevent trouble later on.

The Toronto Star says of Sir William Hearst that "few premierships have been so short. None has been fraught with more good to the people of the province." The Star is a Liberal newspaper, and its tribute to Sir William is in happy contrast to that of the Toronto Globe, which, without laying a finger on an act of misgovernment, has sought to convey the impression that the Hearst Government was highly undesirable. A man who wrecked his political life in defence of a principle is entitled to more generous treatment. —Guelph Herald.

THE PASSING OF SUMMER

A pensive hush broods o'er the sunlit land,
The birds flit voiceless in the changing trees,
The sumach lights its torch on every hand,
The golden-rod nods in the quiet breeze;—
A hint of frost when sinks the sun to rest,
A mist of white when breaks the dawn of day,
And in the whisper of the soft south-west
We catch the word—that Summer's passed away.

Tho' Summer days are dead, the glint and glow
And golden glamor of the Autumn time,
Reflect, and in a golden glory, show
Sweet Summer's spirit, lingering, soft, sublime;
And so, when Life's brief Summer-time is past,
And Autumn finds the joys of youth have fled,
The spirit of a youth that aye shall last
Will shine, a halo, round each hoary head.

Abolish Firearms.

Brockville Recorder.

There is legislation before Parliament designed for the purpose of preventing people carrying firearms. The object is to make it unlawful for any person having concealed weapons about their person unless permitted by law to do so. It is a prudent piece of legislation. There should be no need in this country for people going about with concealed firearms. The numerous police court cases and the all too frequent murders are proof enough of the folly and danger of permitting the promiscuous use of firearms. If people must fight and beat each other up they should do so with their fists alone and without the use of guns. We do not want or need any professional thugs or police in this country. The legislation should make it necessary for all needing the use of firearms to take out a license. If this were done there would not be so much crime, the result of hot headedness, etc. The avenues should be closed to many people too anxious to carry firearms for no useful purpose.

To Grow Hair On Bald Head

Specialist Gives Simple Recipe That Works Fine

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair, who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair-grower without results have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy and can be put up by any druggist: "Bay Rum, 6 ounces, Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces, Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies using this prescription should be careful not to get it on the face or where hair is not desired.

BREADTH OF WOMEN'S LOVE FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN

No one can ever say again, that women's interests are confined to the four walls of her home. If the saying ever was true, the war has laid its ghost and buried its bones.

Were it not so, what would have happened about all the patriotic work that was accomplished during the war?

There are thousands of women who used not to see beyond the personal needs of the family, until the war was upon us. Then they learned that there was something bigger than selfish interests. As they saw sons, husbands and brothers march away, they knew that they would not have kept them at home if they could.

Why? ... .

Because they had found the bigger interest, the greater love —of country.

The lads might die, and the mothers' hearts must break, yet even the white haired mother, her eyes full of the agony of parting, would not have called the son back.

The war found its heroes among women as among men. And the war taught us a love of country which can never die in our hearts—a love which we must pass on in all its fullness and enthusiasm to those who follow this generation.

With women realizing their duty to and love for their country, they have taken their full share in making the Victory Loan of 1918 a success And, though lacking the impetus given by the reality of war, women will still bear their share in the Victory Loan this year. They realize now the need of the money even though the war is over. Their vision has broadened from the four walls of home to the boundaries of this dear Canada of promise; broadened to the four points of the compass which mark the boundaries of the Empire.

They want to see the land of promise become the land of fulfilment. If Canada is capable of yet greater things, they know that behind the determination of her people must be the very practical money.

Every country has to work out its own destiny. We may say that rather glibly, but if we will think for a moment of what it means, we will realize that the country "is the people in the country." As Canadians—men and women—contribute loyally of their brains, their brawn and their money, in the same degree will the destiny of Canada be measured.

If Canada is to do her duty by her soldiers, if Canada is to pay her war debts, if Canada is to prosper commercially and financially, then Canada must spend money.

When you buy Victory Bonds you do your duty, and you only do your full duty when you buy not only one but as many as you can afford.

When a call is made on our patriotism we answer in full measure.

When we are asked this year to buy Victory Bonds to lend our money to our own country—we, Canadian women, will answer in generous measure.

WINDSOR STATION ILLUMINATED FOR PRINCE'S VISIT.

The electrical illumination of the C.P.R. Windsor Station at Montreal in honor of the Royal visit, on which electrical engineers and decorators were at work for over a month, evoked favorable comment, and Mr. J. W. Bell, the superintendent of the building, who designed and supervised the erection of this elaborate decoration, was congratulated on the result of his effort. No fewer than 7,752 individual lights were used in this display, which follows the general outlines of the huge edifice, including the two towers. In order to connect the lamps with the seventeen switches, there is a mile and a quarter of wire. In the Prince of Wales' Feathers, which are 13 feet 6 inches in height, there are 242 lights, while the two maple leaves on St. Antoine street and Osborne street, each 12 feet high, have each 145 lights, while there are 55 lights in each of the four illuminated crowns. The electrical decoration is supplemented with a display of flags, 450 in number, twelve long streamers 31 feet each in length, and 60 shields each 4 feet high.

PRINCE PRESENTED WITH STRAWBERRIES PICKED ON OCTOBER 2.

If His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had any preconceived idea that Southern Alberta had grown nothing this year owing to the drought, he probably has reason to change his mind after being presented at Lethbridge with a four-pound box of most luscious strawberries packed on Thursday morning from his own garden by John Hamilton, who owns one of the farms on the C. P. R. Ready-made Farms Colony, 18 miles east of the city. The fruit was the ever-bearing variety and as fine in color, texture and flavor as any grown in the middle of the season. It remained for the Coaldale district to supply the royal table with fresh strawberries picked in October.

contrasting happily with the green of the heavy frisette plush upholstery. In each room is to be found an individual heating control.

The members of the Prince's immediate suite occupy the "Killarney" and dine with him in the exclusive dining room laid for six. Six more can be accommodated in the "Cromarty" but a special car was provided for the remainder of the party. The main diner is a pleasant place where tables for four and tables for two are placed in the windows down each side of the car. The rich brown tones of the Cuban mahogany walls and ceilings combined with the green hangings and accentuated with inlaid lines of satinwood harmonize beautifully. The diner will accomodate thirty persons at a sitting.

The three remaining sleepers present only one feature of exceptional interest to the travelling public well acquainted with the details of the C.P.R. sleeping cars. Tucked away in a corner is a dispensary as ship-shape as the doctor's office on a ship. A special chair has been arranged for the patient, if such there be, and the show-piece of the little office is a patent light fixture with which the physician can examine the throat.

In one of the baggage cars the dark-closet and workroom of the officail photgrapher - moore operator have been arranged. There are shower baths and sleeping compartments in the baggage cars too and cold storage cupboards where the chef keeps his supplies. An auxiliary generator is also installed here, to provide electric light throughout the train, if it is stationary for any length of time.

The Prince of Wales yesterday at Flavelle shook hands with all on board the royal train from correspondents to dining-car cooks and waiters. He made a short speech in which he said, "I am sorry not to have met you all before, but you have had your work to do and I have had mine. I called you to say good-bye and good luck, and I will send you all an autographed photo to remember me by."

Three cheers and a tiger were given for the Prince, after which he went up ahead and inspected the engine under the guidance of Engineer Flood. He the mounted into the cab and drove the train as far as Trenton. While passing through Brighton, the populace were at the station and the sight of the Prince in the engine waving to them created unbounded nthusiasm.

Stopping a Great Waste.

Millions of dollars' worth of fruit have been wasted in Florida during the quarter of a century. Hereafter nothing will be wasted as the drops, culls and ripes will all be utilized by new processes evolved by a clever chemist and scientist. The growers and the public generally will be helped by these processes, as the former will reap a benefit from the sale of their waste products and the latter will have the benefits of the manufactured products which are greatly in demand.

Electrocute Leopard to Save Pelt.

A leopard used by a motion-picture concern recently took to sulking, which made him a disagreeable companion for the actors in the jungle scenes, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. Shooting him with a high-powered rifle was first considered, but was objected to, as it would disfigure the valuable pelt. To avoid this, electrocution was decided upon, using power from a near-by station.

IMPORTANT DATE IN HAWAII

Modern History of Islands May Be Said to Have Begun on October 23, 1819.

The one hundredth anniversary of the departure of the first missionaries from the United States to the Sandwich islands, as they were then known, will be celebrated at Honolulu, October 23. On that date in the year 1819, the brig Thaddeus, Captain Hunnewell, sailed from Boston for Hawaii. The vessel anchored at Kailua, Kona, Island of Hawaii, April 5, 1820, and the missionaries landed that day to begin their work of civilizing the natives and converting them to Christianity. Those who arrived in Hawaii on the Thaddeus were Asa Thurston and Hirman Bingham, ordained missionaries, with their wives; Daniel Chamberlain, Thomas Holmes, Samuel Whitney, Samuel Ruggles, Elisha Loomis and four Hawaiians—Honolii, Hopu and Kanui—who had received some education at Cornwall institute, and George Humohumo, son of Kaumuali, the king of the Island of Kauai. The Hawaiians had been taken to the United States in trading vessels. Traders and whalers had been visiting Honolulu for some years before the arrival of the missionaries, but it is from the latter event that the modern history of Hawaii dates.

Wonderful Slot Machine.

Most people are familiar with the machines which sell chocolate and chewing gum. An interesting development in this field is a large apparatus that dispenses bottled beverages, sandwiches and chewing gum. Its cooling chamber has space for the accommodation of 96 bottles, while a precooling compartment, in which bottles are chilled by immersion in the water that drains from the ice, has an equal capacity. In order to encourage patrons to return empty bottles to the machine a stick of gum is discharged when a bottle is placed in the receiver provided for it. A counterfeit detector rejects spurious coins. A complete record of all transactions is kept by a sales-registering mechanism. The only attention the machine requires is that involved in stocking and icing it.

Untasted Emergency Ration.

A correspondent, writing from the front before the fighting came to an end, said that the emergency ration supplied to our soldiers still remained a mystery to them. Few indeed have even tasted this scientific life-saver of which the army boards are so proud.

It looks like ground oatmeal; but it is said to be the last word in concentrated calories and protein. It contains the juices and sustaining parts of all meats and vegetables known to man, with a little gluten thrown in. Most soldiers have not dared to taste it. A court martial threatens anyone who eats the emergency ration unnecessarily, and almost never, so they say, did any soldier find it necessary. Hot meals from rolling kitchens were virtually always to be had.

Farm Products by Parcel Post.

Wilmington, Del., is to receive farm products by parcel post truck service. The service between that city and Salisbury, Md., began recently, two large army trucks bearing eggs, butter, fish, oysters, crabs, berries and such direct from land or sea to the consumer. Stops are made at every town along the route which can claim a post office. Provision has also been made for acceptance of parcel post material for New York, transfers to be made at Chester; and through truck service from Wilmington to Philadelphia will be established.

A Little Learning.

"Do you subscribe to the theory that a little learning is a dangerous thing?"

"Yes," replied Gadspur. "I thought I knew enough about my automobile to take it apart and put it together again, but this bill of $154.17 from a repair shop proves that I didn't."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Uncle Jake's Best Joke

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Maud pouted—not the piquant, arch pout of her courtship days but the spoiled-child pout that she dared to indulge in now that she was really truly married to the embodiment, in her eyes, of all masculine charms and virtues—Rodney Blaine.

"I think you are a mean old thing," she announced with some heat. "To have to have him along with us. He'll just spoil everything. It isn't that I don't like him, but he is such a dreadful joker!"

The joker referred to was none other than Rodney's uncle, Jacob Blaine, a slightly built but erect old gentleman, who at three score and five had given up business and determined to lead the rest of his days in the open. If he had none of the crotchets which are sometimes ascribed to those of advancing years he had some of the foibles that had been characteristic of his boyhood. Nothing pleased him better than a practical joke, though his jokes were always of a kindly nature and, so far as any one knew, they had never caused any one real discomfort.

But Maud took herself, and above all she took Rodney, amazingly seriously. Now that summer had come, the Rodney Blaines had made arrangements to depart from the city for the woods, where Rodney owned a small mountain cabin.

He had just announced his intention of encouraging Uncle Jake to occupy a smaller cabin not many rods from theirs which he would make the headquarters for his fishing and outing trips; and he would share the company of his nephew and niece in many of his hours of inactivity.

"Well, my dear," Rodney assured his wife, "it isn't at all as if he were critical or intended to interfere with you in any way. There is no one else he likes so well as you—and me. He's the best sport in the world and what if he does pull off a practical joke once in a while? I rather like his joking."

"Like his joking!" echoed Maud, and her eyes snapped fire as much as eyes as blue as hers ever could snap fire.

"And besides," said Rodney, as he went on inspecting the fishing paraphernalia that he had recently purchased as preliminary to the vacation in the woods, "besides, uncle has willed everything he has to us. That shows that he is devoted to us."

Maud at this accused her husband of being mercenary, though had any one else made this accusation she would have raged indeed.

The result was that Uncle Jake went with the Rodney Blaines, and this was not because Rodney acted contrary to his wife's pleadings, but because after having protested and pouted she assured her husband that he was right as in all other cases and that she was sorry that she had shown such prejudice and would try to feel as strong attachment for Uncle Jake as did her husband.

Then she regretted her good nature. First he disguised as possible game warden and called at the cabin one day when Rodney was not at home and informed Maud that her husband had been violating the game law and would have to serve a life imprisonment. Maud, in spite of her ardent suffrage principles, was quite ignorant of the law and before she recognized Uncle Jake in the heavily false-bearded person, she had offered him her entire worldly wealth if he would go away and say nothing to the authorities concerning Rodney's guilt.

Then on the day that she went fishing with him he contrived to have her hook attach itself to a little package that he had brought with him to the brook and which proved, after Maud had excitedly angled for five minutes, to contain a can of sardines—a delicacy for which she had a decided aversion and of which Rodney and Uncle Jake, not knowing this, had set in a large supply.

Mild and even stupid jokes both of these—yet Maud allowed herself to be annoyed by them.

"He's a dear in many ways," she told Rodney, the evening after the sardine episode, "but so long as he jokes I cannot stand him."

"I wasn't going to tell you," Rodney replied, "but you see it is just because Uncle Jake does joke that I'm so attached to him. If he hadn't been a joker, you'd now be Mrs. Somebody else and I'd be a disconsolate old bachelor."

It was in midsummer and Maud—the eighteen-year-old Maud who pouted very archly then and still wore her curls merely tied at the back of her neck instead of in the present psyche—was four or five hundred miles away from Rodney, who was working in the city in the office of the Uncle Jake who had not yet found occasion to retire.

Rodney had danced with Maud and sent flowers to Maud on occasions, just as a dozen others had done, and as he had done to a dozen or so besides. Of course he thought she was pretty, and when there were other men trying to put their names on her dance order Rodney was always as eager as the others.

But it had never occurred to him that he might want to marry her. In fact, Rodney—in spite of his twenty-five years—had never thought very much

But Maud at eighteen had definitely made up her mind, that lurked somewhere beneath those soft brown curls, that she did want to marry, and that she wanted to marry Rodney Blaine, though she would have died rather than to have let any one suspect this.

She had convinced herself—and at eighteen one convinces oneself of such matters quite easily—that there as no hope. She had smiled and pouted as archly for Rodney as she had for Tom and Bill and Walter, and Tom and Bill and Walter had all in their own way let Maud know that they found her distracting and that they dreamed of no greater happiness than to be her slaves for life.

But Rodney had made no such protestations and, though he always asked for dances when he was about, he managed to dance with other pretty girls if she refused him.

Maud had thought it all out in her eighteen-year-old mind. She was quite sure that the case was hopeless and that she herself had arrived at the place where she must decide between a life of resigned spinsterdom or the alternative of marrying the man she merely liked.

This man was Walter. Walter had come up to her mother's country place to press his suit with considerable persistence. Maud had assured Walter that she didn't really love him, but had fibbed in saying that she loved no one else.

Then she thought it over quite definitely and decided that, as she was neither musical, artistic nor literary, and had no sisters or brothers to whose children she might devote herself, she had better be married, if only for a home and to have some one manage her affairs. If Walter asked her again before he went back to the city she had determined to accept him.

Then came the special messenger from the post office, ten miles away, bringing that ten-pound box of the choicest candy that the most expensive candy shop in the city had for sale.

Maud opened it, and out dropped a card that simply bore the engraved name of Rodney Blaine. That changed everything. Walter went back to the city unrewarded for his trip, incidentally asking another girl to be his wife, and was accepted.

The same locomotive that bore him back to the city and away from Maud, carried a letter from Maud to Rodney, that showed between the lines that she had been thinking as much of him as the candy showed that he had been thinking of her. Incidentally, the next mail carried an invitation from Maud's mother to Rodney to spend part of his vacation at their cabin, and—well, it was then that Rodney discovered what he had been too stupid to guess before, that Maud really was the most charming girl of his acquaintance and the one he had been in love with from the first.

"It was Uncle Jake that sent that candy," Rodney told Maud. "He was in one of his joking moods and he took your name because it was the first one he came across in my address book, then he got hold of a card of mine and off went the candy. You see I had always loved you, Maud, but I didn't know I had a ghost of a chance. I thought you were all in favor of that Walter Bates. So if it hadn't been for Uncle Jake's tendency to joke, I never would have had the nerve to ask you. I never could have guessed how things were."

Maud was in a reminiscent mood, that brought to her lips a pout that was arch and piquant. "I'm sorry I said what I did about him. Really I think he's a dear and I really didn't mind a bit about the sardines."

Lights for Surgery.

The discovery that a pure red light is complementary to the greenish yellow of the fluoroscope, so that each makes the eye more sensitive to the others has made possible the use of X-rays during a surgical operation, without danger to the surgeons.

In the past it was necessary for the surgeon to work with his hands exposed to the baneful influence of the rays, and also with a mere shadowy light of the rays themselves to work by. Now it has been found, through the experiments of a French surgeon, that operating with a bright red light alternating with the X-rays makes the operation itself easier, and also the alternating lights make the eyes especially sensitive, so that the most delicate and minor details of the X-ray shadows seem clear.

War's Havoc in Wales.

"Only those on the spot," says a correspondent of a London paper, can fully realize the devastation of the woodland portions of North Wales, which has been carried on for the past three years. This is notably the case in Carnarvonshire, where whole valleys and mountain sides have been robbed in order to satisfy the demand of the government for pitprops and railway sleepers. Notwithstanding the fact that the timber already felled and removed runs into many thousands of tons, the process, according to the terms made with the contractors, will extend in some cases into next year."

Lines and Angles.

The new mathematics teacher was thin and angular, indeed, also very severe of countenance and speech. At the very first session with her high school pupils she told them that she had had many years' experience as a teacher of algebra. The statement impressed them.

"But I knew it before she told me," Helen informed her chum on the way home. "You see teaching mathematics so many years consecutively is bound to affect one's figure and make it take on the shape of lines and angles."

DIDN'T MEAN IT LITERALLY

English Soldier's Expressed Wish That Death Might Come Was Followed by Hasty Revision.

Maj. Gen. John J. O'Ryan, who has just returned from France, has brought back a number of humorous stories of the battlefield. Here is one he tells about an English sentinel: "The Twenty-seventh division was in Flanders, where it rains almost continuously," began the general. "There were English troops billeted near by. One night, after a particularly hard rain, this English chap was on duty. When he thought no one was around he began to curse everything in general, the weather, the Germans and his own luck. 'Oh, I say, this is blawsted weather, dontcha know. I wish I was out of this beastly mud,' the English sentry muttered. A few minutes later he was cursing the rain which beat in his face. 'Gawd, but I wish I was out of this beastly water,' he mused again. Just then the Germans opened a heavy fire and made things uncomfortable for everyone. 'Oh, Gawd, but this is beastly,' said the sentry, raising his voice. 'Oh, I do hate those blawsted Germans. I wish I were dead.' Simultaneously with his last words a big 'Minnie' dropped almost at the sentry's feet. When he recovered he was lying in a hole covered with mud but uninjured. The sentry sat up, rubbed the mud from his eyes, and then gazing heavenward, said, 'Oh, I say, Gawd, cawn't you take a blawsted joke?'"—New York Sun.

FAR BEYOND ALLOTTED SPAN

Instances of Remarkable Cases of Longevity Which Seem to Be Well Authenticated.

The death at Nenagh, County Tipperary, Ireland, of Mrs. Bourke, who was reported to have reached the age of 121 years, has led the London Daily Express to make a record of some of the other famous cases of longevity. In 1904 the regimental chaplain of the 18th Bengal infantry was still conducting services in Calcutta at the age of 130. In 1908 Andrei Nikolaievitch Schmidt, a Russian, produced papers which showed that he was 136 years old, and had enlisted in the Reval battalion in 1796. The same year Hadji Raouf was 133, and was still earning a living as a saddler in Constantinople, but he was a juvenile compared with Quo-Ka-Num, an Indian chief who roamed the shores of Puget sound at the age of 160. He was generally conceded by Europeans more likely to be 200, and he claimed to remember the time when iron was unknown to his tribe. He was 2 feet 5 inches in height and did not weigh 50 pounds. A few years ago a Chinese woman reached Montreal. She had left her native land when 70, and had lived in Demerara for 100 years. In 1912 Europe had 7,000 living centenarians, of whom 3,883 were Bulgarians.

TE MAN [illegible]

(Montreal Star)

What a pity it is that Edwin Markham had not waited a few years before writing "The Man with the Hoe." If he had only waited until the present time he need not have written it at all.

Markham's man with the hoe was a sad spectacle, "gazing on the ground, the emptiness of ages in his face and on his back the burden of the world." But the man with the hoe nowadays isn't doing anything of the kind. If he has a hoe at all he isn't using it so much for agricultural purposes as for the vivisection of political parties; he doesn't lean on it, he leaps with it upon the faces of the prostrate idols of the old regime. Ad there is no emptiness in his own face; rather the happy animation that illuminss the countenance of a bull when it gets its former lord and master into the topmost branches of the only tree in a fifty-acre pasture.

The figure in Millet's famous painting which inspired Mr. Markham seemed rooted to the soil. Not so today. Your modern man with the hoe doesn't stand at all. That is one of the chief complaints that party organizers have against him,—he won't even stand when he's hitched. Hitherto he has ambled along peacefully enough, occasionally champing on his bit or fatuously shying at unusual objects caught sight of around the corner of his well-adjusted blinders, just to keep up the fiction of independence. But he has changed all that; now he sits up in the buggy, holds the lines and cracks the whip, while the former drivers—about as badly assorted a team, by the way, as any farmer ever attempted to drive—are getting ready to haul the wagon and trying to get up courage to dump the new driver when the chance comes.

But the chance may not come for some time. For the last quarter century or more the farmer has been under-represented in the various legislatures of Canada. He has been replaced by doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief, rich man, poor man, beggar man and practical politician. He got a seat now and then, but it was usually because the party organization had broken down and he crawled in in the confusion. When he got there he was not as a rule very happy. He was not there in large enough numbers to make himself felt as a class, and a good whip would rather have a "bloc" any time than a cohort of irregulars who are likely to go stampeding off the reservation every time a division bell rings. Now the farmer is arriving "en bloc," not to say "en masse." He has captured Ontario, and in Ottawa the Federal politicians get paler and paler as each day brings fuller news of what the "embattled farmers" did to the Ontario machine.

It is all very spirited and enlivening for everybody but the party boss. He is likely to have to go to work almost any day now. As for the man with the hoe, he is just on the eve of having the time of his life. It's his turn, and it looks as though he was going to take it. Anyway, there is nobody in Canada just now strong enough to take it away from him if he keeps his head and doesn't start fighting with himself. But he will have to sew up his pockets and go to bed with his boots on for a while at least. It is good deal farther from the farm to parliament than it is from parliament back to the farm. He is going to be watched more closely than anyone has been watched in a long time, and if he doesn't pick his friends with almost meticulous care he is likely to get left. He is going to need friends, too, although just at present he may think he is strong enough to do without them. He isn't. No single class is. But for the time being it looks as though most of the trumps were about to turn up in the hands of the man with the hoe.

HIGH PRICE FOR CHEESE.

Previous to the banquet held yesterday a meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board was held at which 670 boxes of colored cheese was boarded. Of this number 50 boxes were sold at 30⅛c. per pound and the balance at 30 7-16c. Mr. G. G. Publow, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, was present and gave a brief address relative to the cheese business of this district. The past season had been successful and a fairly good price had been realized for cheese. There had been little fault found with any cheese made in this district. Mr. Publow stated that there were prospects that the cheese business next year would be good. He impressed upon the factorymen the necessity of keeping up the excellent standard of cheese made.

Duncan Hay of Stratford died of heart failure when about to take a bath.

A general meeting of committees in connection with the presentation to members of the baseball team and the securing of an athletic field will be held in the City Hall to-night.

LIVE HOOGS SHIPPED

The price paid for live hogs today was identical with that of a week ago namely $16.25 per hundred weight. At this price Mr. R. Empson and son shipped a large number to Montreal.

FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Rev. Mr. Elliott, pastor of the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, and Rev. Mr. McMullen, of Cannifton, motored to West Huntingdon last evening, where they addressed a large gathering in the interests of the Forward Movement, as part of the national campaign now being waged to awaken interest in church work.

HOME WITH BRIDE

A troop train from the steamship Carmania passed through here on the G. T. R. last evening. Sgt. G. A. Alcock and bride were the only Belleville arrivals. He signed up with the Royal Canadian Dragoons at Toronto and has been overseas three and a half years. Sgt. and Mrs. Alcock are staying at 11 Cedar street. They were met at the depot by Ald. Hanna.

HOLD-UP AT CAMPBELLFORD.

At the village of Campbellford on Saturday night the proprietor of a Chinese cafe was held up in his place of business by two men and robbed of some money. The manner pursued by the hold-up men was similar to that followed at the Royal Cafe in this city early yesterday morning. The parties were apparently young men, and from the description given they resemble the two who did the same thing here. They secured $15 in money from one of the Celestials.

GRAIN CARS DERAILED

Twelve cars laden with grain were derailed on the Midland line of the Grand Trunk just east of Cambray on Tuesday evening, resulting in a bad spell. At the time the train was making fairly good time and the derailment was one of those unexplainable accidents. It is generally supposed however that it was due to a low joint in the track.

MALICIOUS DAMAGE.

A Sedan motor car, owned in Belleville, was seriously damaged last evening at West Huntingdon, apparently by mischievous boys. The car was left in the churchyard while a meeting was in progress and some miscreants scratched and otherwise damaged the back of the car, walked on the cushions with muddy feet and interfered with the mechanism of the car. The owner of the car is indignant at the outrage and offers a reward for any information leading to the discovery of the miscreants.

A FRATERNAL NIGHT.

The officers and companions of Moira Chapter No. 7. R.A.M., at the Masonic Temple in this city, on Tuesday night did honor to the Grand First Principal, Most Excellent Companion, Col. W. N. Ponton, who is a member of the chapter. The officers and a number of the members of Cataraqui Frontenac Chapter No. 1 were also present and were most cordially welcomed. The visiting team brought with them a keystone with a brass plate bearing the inscription: "Presented to Moira Chapter No. 7, R. A. M., by the Ancient Frontenac and Cataraqui Chapter, Nov. 5th, A. L. 1919." During the evening degree work was exemplified by the visiting brethren. After the business a banquet was held at which Comp. F. E. O'Flynn was toastmaster. A pleasant hour was spent in speech-making, interspersed with appropriate vocal selections.

AWARDED MILITARY CROSS

Mr. Douglas Graham of this city, was at the hands of the Prince of Wales the recipient of a Military Cross for bravery upon the field of battle in the recent war. The presentation was made a few days ago at Kingston. Mr. Graham is a nephew of Mrs. J. A. McFee of this city.

MUNICIPAL HOUSES

Mr. Williams of Toronto, Government building inspector in connection with the Municipal Housing Scheme, is in the city today inspecting seven houses in course of construction by the local Housing Commission. Five of the houses are on Chatham street and the others over the river. Thirty applications for the houses have been received thus far. Ten per cent of the cost of the house is required as initial payment and the balance in small monthly installments covering both principal and interest.

A DELIGHTFUL AT HOME

The members of Loyal Orange Lodges 274 and 2519 of this city last evening gave an At Home at the Orange Hall on Front street. The attendance was such that the spacious auditorium was filled to the door. A delightful programme was given consisting of brief addresses, songs and recitations. Rev. A. L. Geen of this city, Deputy Grand Chaplain occupied the chair and filled that position in a most acceptable manner. Rev. Canon Fitzgerald of Kingston was present and gave some recitations chiefly of an Irish nature, which were a delight to all present. They were both interesting and enstructure and the Rev. gentman was compelled to respond to hearty encores. Solos were given by Mrs. A. P. Allen, Mrs. W. Luscombe, Messrs. A. E Pedley, W. Schryver, H. W. Writmeyer and F. Sprague all of whom acquitted themselves in a most creditable manner. Miss Phyllis Bogart played the accompaniments. Readings and recitations were given by Miss Jennie Bishop and Miss Ruttan. The varied programme was thoroughly enjoyed by all present and the pleasing entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, after a hearty vote of thanks moved by Dr. M. J. Clarke and seconded by Mr. W. C. Reid had been passed to those contributing to the programme.

SPOKE AT PICTON.

A banquet was held on the evening of the 5th inst. at the Royal Hotel, Picton, for the workers in the Victory Loan campaign of Prince Edward county, presided over by Robert Davidson. The principal speaker of the evening was W. C. Mikel, K.C. Addresses were also delivered by Fred Newman, His Honor Judge McLean, Wm. Williams, Jas. Gillespie, E. M. Young, Capt. Warrington, and others. Mr. Mikel classified the various persons who do not purchase Victory Bonds into five classes: First, those who were sympathetic with our enemy in the late war or antagonietic to Canada for some reason; second, the pacifist, conscientious objector or nonresister; third, those who want more interest; fourth, those who believe they can't afford it; fifth, those who are ignorant of the advantages of the security. He also suggested methods for dealing with these different classes. He said that the practice adopted in Europe of ennobling municipalities by conferring noble orders upon them should be adopted and applied to the achievements of municipalities in subscribing to the Victory Loan. It would be more popular than conferring titles on individuals. The King might be asked to confer knighthood on the county whose inhabitants subscribed the greatest per head. Prince Edward being the richest county per head might easily win this title.

G.T.R. A.A.A. AT HOME

The Grand Trunk Amateur Athletic Association held an "At Home" last evening in Johnstone's Academy Front Street, which proved to be very successful. Progressive euchre was played by number of ladies up stairs while a greater number of ladies and gentlemen tripped the light fantastic on the lower floor There being no gentlemen preseat, however, who wished to indulge in card playing a number of young ladies were forced to play the gentleman's part. Miss Rita Hunter carried away the gentleman's prize, winning ten games, while Mrs. Lafferty walked off with the ladies prize with nine games to her credit. At the midnight hour the committee served light refreshments to all present. Music for dancing was rendered by Sprague's Orchestra and was of the highest order, being very generous in the encores. Much credit is due the committee who worked so hard and succeeded to make the affair so successful.

3 OTTAWA ST., HULL, P. Q.

"For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism, being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine without relief and thought I would never be able to walk again.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me."

STOVES! - STOVES!

HOW many hours a day do you spend in your kitchen?

SURELY a good many when you get 1,000 meals a year!

YOUR STOVE is either your best friend or your worst enemy—and you spend a large share of every day in its company.

DO YOU KNOW it costs a comparatively small sum to put the RIGHT stove in your kitchen? GOOD TOOLS — GOOD RESULTS. Every man and woman knows this is so!

WITH THESE FACTS in your mind, you must agree that the Kitchen Range is an important factor in your every-day life.

OUR METHOD - YOUR SAVING

Our plan gives you the chance to pay only for what you order. We offer you the best stove on the market today at a price as low as it can be made for cash. You see what you are buying—not a pretty picture, but an actual stove.

Other dealers have to think of their slow-paying customers before they set the price they quote for everybody, or they might lose money. Our prices are for the stove itself—and that is all you are asked to pay for. If you want credit or if you want the stove taken home and set up in working order, we will quote you a fair price, and if we set up the stove we will do the job right.

If you buy from a mail-order house, who will take an interest in setting up your stove properly? If you buy from a mail-order house, how can you tell whether the stove will look as good to you as the picture of it did?

A stove calls for special knowledge in making—Sometimes a poor stove looks well—so beware of the department store mail offer. Buy from stove specialists.
Our way is the only fair way—and it is the short cut to stove satisfaction.

Our Guarantee

IF YOUR STOVE, FOR ANY REASON FAILS TO GIVE SATISFACTORY RESULTS, WE AGREE TO REFUND THE PRICE PAID US ON THIS STOVE, ANY TIME WITHIN 100 DAYS OF THE TIME OF PURCHASING.

The above guarantee applies to every stove we sell. Before buying come in and look them over.

Why Start Your Furnace Now?

The Perfection Oil Heater provides plenty of cheery warmth for the cool Autumn evenings or the early morning chill.

No need of starting a big furnace fire that keeps the house hot and stuffy during the day.

The Perfection saves all the trouble, worry and work of tending a coal fire until it's absolutely necessary, and, of course, it cuts down your fuel bills, too. Runs ten hours on one gallon of Imperial Royalite Coal Oil.

There is nothing unpleasant about a Perfection Oil Heater. No smoke, no fumes, no soot or ashes. It is simple to operate, and can be carried anywhere. Provides just the amount of heat you need—just when you need it.

Strong, reliable and good-looking, with nickel trimmings, black japanned or blue enameled drum, and a brass burner,—the Perfection lasts for years. Ask your dealer to show you one.

Elsie Takes Command

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A ferry boat load of the shipyard men piled pell-mell over the wharf, across the railroad tracks and onto the main thoroughfare of the town, at the foot of which lay the makeshift slip. They were roughly clad and grimy and strong, and, many of them, hard-looking.

There had been a crap game on the boat coming over and it had not gone smoothly. Three of the men among the thousand showed the marks of it, for they were more or less bloody and still white with anger.

The three, each with a friend or two, stopped at the saloon at the foot of the street to wash off the stains of the row. The rest of the workers paid no heed but hurried on homeward. There was little laughter or joking. What conversation there was among them was unsmiling and it was plain to be seen that the yeast of discontent was at work.

At the street corner two blocks from the wharf a girl stood by the curb, watching the passing throng and looking for some one. By and by she caught sight of a tall, toughly fashioned young fellow with thick hair that looked flaxen by contrast with his sunburned skin.

He spied the girl at the same instant, said a brief word to the companions of the moment, and stopped beside her, automatically reaching out for the bundles she carried.

The girl's eyes were shining. "What do you know, Billy? I found a place! an honest-to-goodness apartment. Mrs. Elis heard about a couple that are going out of town—somebody she knows. She's a good old thing, after all, Billy, and she went right down there and got them to keep still about it till we could get a chance at the place.

"I've been down today and engaged it. It's an old house, Billy, but there's three rooms and a bath— and only one other family, the folks that own it; they live downstairs. I guess they're boosting the rent two or three dollars. But we should worry—with your pay. It's our lucky day, isn't it, Billy?"

But Billy Noxon didn't respond to the happy mood of his young wife nearly as she had anticipated. While Elsie lay in wait for him there she had expected that he would throw up his hat and shout. Places to live—to really live and keep house like regular civilized people—were simply unobtainable in the town. The Noxons had been "light housekeeping" in a single room for four months, like hundreds of others.

"Don't know as there's any use in fussing about it, Chick," the boy finally replied soberly. "We're likely to have to get to blazes out of this man's town any time now. The gang's pretty sore, and they're likely to tie a can, any time at all, to the bunch of grafters that are running the tea kettle factory over the river."

"What do you mean, Billy Noxon—a strike?"

"It's a heap sight more than just one strike, when the blowoff comes. The working man has been carrying the tar end of the stick about as long as he's going to in this country. Here's you and me living like a couple of bums in a coop of a room and me sweating my hide off over there on those hulls—and a lot of loafers that don't hit a ship a lick from the time she's doped out till she's overboard, and haven't even got a dollar of their own money in the plant, pulling down millions.

"Living in palaces and dressing their wives in thousand-dollar furs and swelling around in limousines and playing golf while we play on a rivet gun—and all off us! All stolen from the working man and his family! And then, when we hit them for a lousy dollar a day raise, to help pay for the profiteering prices on the grub we eat, they give us the hoot!"

Elsie was looking very steadily and studiously at her big husband. "Well?" she said, as he ran out of breath.

"Well," Billy resumed, "it's about all over, sis. There's going to be something doing, and that right quick. I dunno's it's worth while for us to change from one room to three. Maybe we'll be in the middle of a hard-boiled shindy in a week or two—and either have some kind of a decent share in things or nothing at all. Death's better than slavery." The boy stared goomily at a passing touring car.

The girl was about an inch above five feet—her husband about an inch above six. Her eyes had been growing bigger and bigger as she listened to his dour speech. Now she seized him by the arm and said: "Billy Noxon, you come home with me, straight.

"And don't you speak—or even think—a word till I tell you to." The somber face of the boy thawed into a sheepish grin as he permitted himself to be marshaled along six city blocks to the place where they lived in Mrs. Elis' furnished second floor back.

Not until they were in their room, with the door closed behind them, did Elsie speak again. "Now," she declared taking the bundles from Billy and putting them on the table, "I've got something to say to you, you big boob! You've been listening to those darned bolsheviks again! You sit down there and answer me a couple of questions;" and she pushed her husband into the limpy-legged morris chair. "First—How much money did we have after two years when we quit Roxbury and came here? We had $140, didn't we? We've been here four months, and how much have we got? We've got $480 of new money, that's what we've got. And it's clean money, Billy, honestly earned. I'd rather have that than a million that was grafted. We're not getting along so badly. Maybe somebody else is getting a whole lot more that doesn't deserve it half as much. But I guess these things will be straightened out if fellows like you don't go looney and spoil everything. Anyhow, you never had so much money ahead in your life, Billy Noxon, and I know it.

"Now, who's the head devil over there at the yard in getting up all this I. W. W. sentiment? Is it a black-muzzled fellow they call Saunderson?"

"Well, Saunderson's the smartest, most independent man in the yard, if that's what you mean, and not afraid to speak his mind. The fellows listen to him because he's there with the goods."

"I thought so. I sat behind him and some other anarchists in a street car yesterday, when he ought to have been at work, and I know what he thinks. I heard him tell the man with him that it was about time the 'boorzhwa' was kept from monopolizing everything, including the 'most beautiful and desirable wives'—that's exactly what he said, Billy Noxon!"

"Well," responded Billy, rather doubtfully, "he meant that a working man can't compete with a rich one for a girl, when he can't send her flowers and give her buzz-car rides and such things."

"Billy, you're a simp. He meant—because he said so—that the women ought to be nationalized. Understand that? Made the property of the men equally, like the food and the clothes and the houses and automobiles! He said it was too early to spring that idea yet, but it would surely come."

Billy tried to say something, but the little wife kept on. "Billy, I didn't tell you before, but twice that black devil has tried to pick me up on the street. Yesterday when he got up to leave the car he grinned at me and winked, and he said out of the corner of his mouth as he passed: 'Pretty peach!' Billy Noxon, do you want me nationalized—for Saunderson? Are you for the bolsheviks or for me?"

Billy Noxon found Saunderson in the yard next day, and hammered him for five minutes. He told him that he'd lick him every time he saw him. Wherefore, Saunderson is now agitating elsewhere, and there hasn't been any strike in the yard. Maybe everything is not exactly as it should be as between labor and capital, but as between Billy and Elsie, bolshevism hasn't a look-in.

PARAVANE PROVED ITS WORTH

No Vessel Protected by That Contrivance Is Known to Have Been Sunk by Mines.

The oddity of the word "paravane," as it now reaches the general public, shows how well an important secret was kept during the historic years 1917-18. During those years the invention, perfected at Portsmouth, England, was added to some 4,000 British vessels, and no case is known in which a ship thus protected was damaged by a sunken mine. Towed under water on both sides of the bow, the paravane, shaped like a kite, met the mooring wire of the sunken mine, deflected the hidden menace to a safe distance from the ship, severed its mooring, and left it free to come to the surface where it could be exploded by gun fire. Seamen naturally enough soon came to speak of the paravanes as "otters," and they enabled many a vessel to travel safely through mine-infested waters. Several hundred American ships had been thus equipped at the signing of the armistice, and it is a pleasing thought that the cessation of hostilities saved about $10,000,000 which the United States meant to spend in providing paravanes for American shipping.

Would Return the Favor.

Some years ago there was a Fourth of July celebration at a town in northern New York, where my father was pastor of a church. During the day several out of town couples came to the parsonage to be married, and one husky bridegroom as soon as the knot was tied, asked: "What are the damages?" Father replied that he made no particular charge for marrying people, but left the amount to the generosity of the groom. "Thank you," said the young man, "I'll do as much for you sometime," and walked out, leaving us all convulsed with laughter, but when they reached the street the bride would go no farther until "hubby" came back and handed the minister a $2 bill.—Exchange.

Size of Ocean Waves.

The size of the Atlantic ocean waves has been carefully measured for the hydrographic bureau, Washington. In height the waves usually average about 30 feet, but in rough weather they attain from 40 to 48 feet. During storms they are often from 500 to 600 feet long and last ten to eleven seconds, while the longest one yet known measured half a mile, and did not spend itself for 23 seconds.

Quest of Novelty.

"Henry, I must have a motorcar that is unlike anybody else's."

"I don't see how we are going to arrange that, my dear. Most of the available models seem to be in use. However, we might persuade a manufacturer to build a car to order shaped like a bee hive, and you could buzz around in that."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Refinement of Purity

CAREFUL cooks know the value of purity. In the making of cakes or pastry they use those ingredients which they believe to be pure and wholesome.

To apply this "insistence on purity" to sugar, is no easy matter—for nearly all sugars look alike to those not expert in detecting variation. The safe course is to use a sugar that comes from refineries in which purity is a boast.

In the Dominion Sugar refineries the boast is backed by a standing invitation to the public to visit and inspect the plants in which Dominion Crystal Sugar is made.

In Dominion Crystal Sugar the housewives of Canada have one sugar that can be depended upon for that Purity which is so essential to successful culinary effort.

This is the only sugar that may be rightly termed "Canadian from the ground up." We do import the finest raw cane sugar and refine it—but our pride is in the product we make from Canadian sugar beets.

How to Tame Hubby.

Modern wives, here are a few tips on how to keep that husband of yours from becoming a wild man. Mrs. Gene Holmes of Evanston, named by Mrs. George Remus as the other woman in Chicago's latest triangle, is sponsor for the tips.

Need we explain Mrs. Remus is seeking a divorce from her husband? Here are the tips:

Give the husband all the rope he wants—he'll never hang himself. Never, never try to curb his liberty; make him happy; keep the home cozy and attractive; always appear cheerful and pretty—always; feed him well, pet him, humor him—these three things alone will keep him from causing you any trouble; never look upon him as a mere provider—they should be treated like pets.

"If," says Mrs. Holmes, "after doing all these things the husband does not want to stay at home—he isn't human, that's all."

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—With receipts of cattle totalling more than 9000, or, to be absolutely accurate, 9067 head at the Union Stock Yards yesterday at noon, all records in point of numbers were, we believe, broken on the local exchange.

With all this volume of trading, and the bulk of the receipts of inferior quality, there was a good demand for the finished butcher class, heifers and steers, and the good and choice feeders.

There was a steady market for canner cows and choice butcher cows, but medium butcher cows were slow of sale.

Good springers and milkers commanded satisfactory prices, and, taken all in all, and considering the exceptional run, we cannot but regard the market as satisfactory.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Nov. 3. — Cattle, receipts, 32,000; weak. Beef steers, medium and heavyweight, choice and prime, $17 to $19.65; medium and good, $10.50 to $16.75; common, $8.25 to $10.50; lightweight, good and choice, $13.75 to $19.25; common and medium, $7.25 to $13.75; butcher cattle, heifers, $6.35 to $14; cows, $8.25 to $12.75; canners and cutters, $5.25 to $6.25. Veal calves, $17 to $18.25; feeder steers, $8.75 to $12.75; stocker steers, $6 to $10; western range steers, $10.75 to $15.25; cows and heifers, $7.50 to $12.50.

Sheep, receipts 47,000; weak. Lambs, $12 to $14.75; culls and common, $8.50 to $11.75; ewes, medium, good and choice, $6.75 to $8; culls and common, $3 to $6.50; breeding, $6.75 to $12.50.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 3.—Cattle — Receipts 8,000, 25c to 50c lower. Prime steers, $16 to $16.50; shipping steers, $15 to $15.50; butchers, $10 to $14.50; yearlings, $14 to $15.50; heifers, $6 to $11.50; cows, $4 to $10.25; bulls, $7 to $10; stockers and feeders, $6 to $10; fresh cows and springers, $65 to $170.

Calves—Receipts 2,400, $1 lower; $5 to $19.

Hogs—Receipts 12,800, 20c to 25c higher. Heavy, $15.50 to $15.75; stags, $8 to $10.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 13,000; lambs, 50c lower. Lambs, $8 to $14.50; yearlings, $7 to $11; wethers, $9 to $9.50; ewes, $6 to $8; mixed sheep, $8.25 to $8.75.

Victory for Labor.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 4.—Labor has won a sensational victory in the municipal election, not only in London, but throughout Great Britain, as far as can be judged by the reports already at hand.

"While labor polled probably quite a fair proportion of its voting strength, the other parties suffered very heavily from the supineness of their supporters, and only in a few instances did 50 per cent. of the electors take the trouble to vote.

"The women voters probably exercised a considerable influence on many of the results, the discontent of the housewife no doubt finding satisfaction in a decisive pronouncement in favor of a forward policy. But the women candidates at the polls were not, on the whole, successful."

Boy Shoots Another.

GUELPH, Nov. 4. — Taking seriously the suggestion that he should protect his house on Hallowe'en, the younger son of William Milton shot a boy named Kokejeski, who, with a number of other boys, were out for the usual pranks.

FOUR REASONS WHY SHREWD MEN ARE BUYING VICTORY BONDS 1919

1. Security.

SHREWD men are buying Victory Bonds because Victory Bonds are backed by Canada's guarantee that she will repay the full amount stated on the face of the bond—the five-year bonds on November 1st, 1924; and the fifteen-year bonds on November 1st, 1934. And she not only binds herself to pay the money back, but she pledges all of her vast resources as security for her promise.

2. Income.

SHREWD men are buying Victory Bonds because the interest return is unusually good considering the absolute security. You will be paid 5½% per year on Victory Bonds—2½% more than you can get in the Savings Banks. Unlike many other investments, you have absolutely no worry as to the prompt payment of the interest.

3. Saleability.

SHREWD men are buying all the Victory Bonds they can pay for now and all they will be able to pay for during the next ten months under the instalment plan, because they know that if at any time they should need ready money they can sell them. There will always be a ready market for Victory Bonds.

4. Advancement in Price.

SHREWD men are buying Victory Bonds because they consider them to have an excellent prospect of advancing in price.

ALL of Canada's previous issues of Victory Bonds have advanced. You can sell your Victory Bonds 1917 and 1918 even in this short time—one and two years—and get more than par for them. What will Victory Bonds be worth when the world finally gets back to a normal basis—when interest rates come down—when Canada will be able to borrow again at 4%, or even less?

WAR conditions have created the opportunity for you to buy the very best of Government securities on unusually attractive terms. Do not miss such a good investment opportunity, but buy to your limit.

WIFE ONCE BOUGHT

Proceeding Many Centuries Ago Was Universal.

Present-Day "Marriage Portion" May Be Regarded as a Symbol of Old Custom—Some Curious Wedding Ceremonies.

Among far older civilizations than that of the Anglo-Saxon the system of wife-purchase had ceased before Britain was a real country. The Indian law-giver, Manu, strictly forbade it, and said: "A man who, through avarice, takes a gratuity, is a seller of his offspring." In the historical times of the Greeks they no longer bought wives. In Rome "coemptio" was only a symbol of the ancient custom. In the Jewish Talmud the purchase is also symbolic, as is frequently the Mohammedan "mahr." Withal, the bride price, "foster leans" and marriage gifts, when returned, were converted into dowry and became at first the bride's property. Thus marriage portions chiefly derived their origin from the habit of purchase, and dowry often became, as with the Hebrews, a religious duty. Not less than the tenth of the father's property was considered a just dowry. In Aristotle's time nearly two-fifths of all Sparta belonged from this cause to the women. Sir Henry Maine considers that the amazing thrift of the French is also owing to this custom, which probably descended to them from the marriage law of Augustus Caesar. It was only by an anachronism that Euripides made Medea lament that women were obliged to purchase husbands at a great price. And it is often as true today as when the Latin poet sang.

When marriage ceremonies first did arise it was by degrees and in many ways, and customs such as capture when superseded became by symbolism a part of the succeeding legal form or contract. To eat maize pudding from the same plate or to eat in any way together is a widely distributed marriage ceremony. In Brazil a couple may be married by drinking brandy together; in Japan by so many cups of wine; in Russia and Scandinavia it used to be one cup for both. The joining of hands among Romans and Hindus is common in many parts of the world. In Scotland it is called "hand fasting," and couples live together after. To sit on one seat while receiving friends or to have the hands of each tied together with grass, or to smear with each other's blood, or for the woman to tie a cord of her own twisting around the naked waist of the man constitutes marriage in one place or another. In Australia a woman carries fire to her lover's hut and makes a fire for him. A Loango negress cooks two dishes for him in his own hut. In Croatia the bridegroom boxes the bride's ears, and in Russia the father formerly struck his daughter gently with a new whip—for the last time—and then gave the weapon to her husband.

Hat Decorations.

A very dignified matron, the wife of one of the city's clergymen, went into a downtown store the other day to take advantage of a sale. She bought the books for which she had come and started out of the store. But a counter piled high with men's hose attracted her to a crowd of more fastidious shoppers, most of whom were examining the varicolored silk stockings on the racks above the counter. The modest parsonage woman almost blushed over their open interest.

Finally the socks were bought, several other counters visited, and then the minister's wife started to leave. At the door she met one of the parishioners. They exchanged greetings and then, with a "Please allow me," the parishioner reached up to the hat of the minister's wife and lifted from its wide brim a pair of gaudy rose silk stockings.

The racks above the bargain counter were, of course, the cause. "But no one knew it," moaned the parson's wife. "Just think how many people saw me wearing those decorations, and actually I was embarrassed over the other women just looking at them. And I—well, I was wearing them very prominently.'

Hats Off.

One day I was watching a new company drill. The officer gave the command, "Cover off in the rear rank," meaning that every man in the rear rank had to stand directly back of the man in front of him. Instead the whole rear rank took off their hats.—Exchange.

First Surgeon—Serious? Should say not; he's one of these newspaper nut column artists.

Good Pipes From Paper Material.

"Pertinax," one of the most important of substitutes for metal, is a compressed paper material, which has been used in place of lead and copper for pipes for gas, oil and other purposes. From a British war trade report, it appears that these pipes can endure three or four times as great a pressure as lead, while their weight is only one-ninth as great, and they are water-tight, insoluble and unaffected by temperatures up to about 200 degrees Centigrade. The tensile strength of the material is 14,000 pounds per square inch, nearly equaling that of the best stamped, sawed-out and drilled, and as an electric insulator approaches porcelain in effectiveness.

PREMIER ON HOUSE HUNT MEETS TOUGH LUCK

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—E. C. Drury, Premierelect, celebrated for his grasp of all details in the problem of the farm, is getting his primary lesson in the problems of city life. The Premierprospective is house-hunting.

Several days ago he decided that he must have a afit. With all the advice fioflating around there evidently were no city-bred men present to sound a warning note. Although democratic, Mr. Drury couldn't very well start knocking at doors and politely inquiring: "Could you rent a flat to the Premier of Ontario?"

So that ready help lin all ordinary cases, the 'want ad", was caleld in. Up to the present it has failed to solve the most difficult task in the city right now.

The Power of Inspiration

GEORGE BROWN'S ambition was to build up a Great Family Newspaper that would be a source of inspiration to each succeeding generation to go forward.

He wanted them in reading The Globe to get a broad outlook on life, and sympathy for, as well as an understanding of their fellows that make men and women of us all.

He urged upon others the same unselfish devotion to public service that he himself rendered.

All men and women cannot rise to positions of fame and fortune, but they can do something to leave the world better for their coming.

The Globe has been a part of the family life of many men and women who have come from humble circumstances to rise in the service and estimation of their fellows.

It has received a daily welcome in the homes of thousands who have left the world brighter and better for their sojourn here.

To give some idea of the exceptional influence The Globe has in the homes of its readers, take the result of a test of The Globe's circulation.

Out of 2,949 renewals of subscriptions made to The Globe in the usual course of business for a period prior to April 1st this year, 1,969 subscribers answered the question "How long has The Globe been read continuously in your family?"

This is the result:—

Readers for 50 years or more	255 or 13%
" " 40 " " "	436 or 22%
" " 30 " " "	681 or 34%
" " 20 " " "	962 or 48%
" " 10 " " "	1340 or 68%

On the basis of this test, out of the 30,000 families who subscribed to The Globe 30 years ago, 17,000 families are subscribing to it today; and out of the 45,000 families who subscribed to The Globe 10 years ago, 30,000 families are subscribing to it to-day.

In the 75th Anniversary Edition of The Globe on March 5th, 1919, names and addresses were printed of 300 families who have read The Globe continuously for 50 years or more.

The Globe has enjoyed three generations of leadership and inspiration of the people. What it has been in the past it will be in the future.

To maintain this position—to give The Globe a place in every home—to stimulate the aspirations of the people as well as to record daily events—is the fulfilment of the policy laid down by its founder, and continued from George Brown's time down to the present.

"Let me thank you now," he murmured, fighting to conceal his rage.

"If you can," she said, "if you feel it, I am very glad. You see what you have done. You wrote a book, which you got very little for—some nice reviews"—she smiled meaningly—'which we needn't talk about. And then you spend a year on another which nobody wants. To succeed as a novelist, one must have a very strong gift; their is no doubt about it. A novelist must be very brilliant to do any good to-day—very brilliant! He wants—er—to know the world—to know the world, and—er—oh, he must be very polished—very smart!"

"I see," he said shakily, as she paused. "You don't think I've the eccessary qualifications?"

"You have aptitude," she said; "you have a certain aptitude, of course, but to make it your profession——So many young men, who have been educated, could write a novel. You happen to have done it; others haven't the time. They go into an office, or on the Stock Exchange, or perhaps they haven't the patience. I'm afraid your publishers did you a mistaken kindness by those unfortunate reviews"

"How do you mean?" he asked. "Yes, the reviewers didn't agree with you, did they?"

She smiled again and spread her hands abroad expressively.

"Oh, they were very pretty, very nice to have; but—er—newspaper notices do not take us in. Naturally those were paid for. Cousins and Co. arranged with the papers for all that"

"With——"

He looked at her open-mouthed, as the names of some of the journals in which he had been eulogized recurred to him.

"With them all," she said. "Oh yes! You must remember, we are quite behind the scenes."

"Pincocca," he said musingly. "Yes you knew Pincocca! But he was a singing-master and he doesn't come here now."

"Oh, Pincocca was one of many—one of very many." She giggled ervonusly. "How very laughable that you should suppose I meant Pincocca! You musn't forget that Caesar knows everybody. I'm almost glad he isn't going in for the stage on that account. He brought such crowds to the house at one time that really we lived in a whirl. I believe—between ourslves—that this man he has gone to Berlin with is at the bottom of his throwing up his career. A financier. A Mr. McCullough. One of the greatest powers in the City. And—er—Caesar was always wonderfully shrewd in these things. Don't say anything, but I believe Mr. McCullough wants to keep him."

"I won't say a word," he mused.

"McCullough controls millions" she gasped "and your father-in-law thinks from certain rumors he has heard, that he's persuaded Caesar to join him in some negotiations he has with the German Government. Of course, we mustn't breathe a whisper—hush! What wer we saying? Oh yes, I'm afraid those unfortunate reviews have done you more harm than good. Nothing great in the City can be got for you, because you haven't the commercial experience, but a clerkship would be better than doing nothing. You must really think about it, Humphrey if you can't do anything for yourself. As your father-in-law says, you are sitting down with your hands in your pockets, eating up your last few pounds." It occurred to her that a clerkship and the east with which her son was obtaining a partnership in millions formed a contrast. "Of course," she added, "Caesar always did have a head for finance. And—er—he's a way with him. He has aplomb ad address that make him immesely valuable for negotiations with a government. It's different in his case.'

Kent left her, and cursed aloud. He went the same evening ot Turquand's partly as ar elief to his feelings and partly to ask his friend's opinion of he feasibility of his procuring any journalistic work.

"For Heaven's sake, talk!" he exclaimed as he went in and flung himself down in the rickety chair that used to be his own. "Say anythig you like, but talk. I've just had an hour and a half of my mother-in-law neat! Take the taste out of my mouth, Turk I wish I were dead! What the devil is to be the end of it? The Walfords say a "clerkship!" Oh, my God, you should hear the Walfords! "I've frivolled away a year on "The Eye of the Beholder," and Cousins' squarred the reviewers for me on the Spectator and the Saturday! Look here, I must get something gto do. Don't you know of anything? can't you introduce me to an editor who wants a genius? isn't there anything stirring at all? I'm buried; I live in a red-brick tomb at Streatham; I hear nothing and see nobody except my blasted parents-in-law But you're in the thick of it; you sniff the mud of Fleet Street every day; you're the salaried sub of a paper that's going to put a cover on itself, and "throw it in" at the penny; you——"

"Surely you can advise me of a chance? I don't say an opening, but a chance of an opening. Man alive, the outlook's as dark as the devil! I shall be stony directly. You must!"

"Fendall's have still not written, eh?"

"No; Fendall's regrets haven't come yet. How about short stories."

"You didn't find them particularly lucrative yet, did you?"

"A guinea each; one in six months. No; but I want to be invited to contribute: "Can you let us have anything this month?"

"My dear chap! should I have stuck to The Outpost all these years if I had shch advice to give away? I did"—he coughed, and spat out an invisible shred of tobacco—"I did stick to it."

"You weren't going to say that. You were going to say, "I did advise you once, but you would marry." Well, I don't complain that I married. The only fault I have to find with my wife is that she's the Walfords' daughter. She's not literary but she's a very good girl. Don't blind facts, Turk; my money would have lasted longer if I hadn't married, but I shouldn't have got my novel taken because I was single. The point of this situation is that, after being lauded to the skies by every paper of importance in England, I can't place the book I write next at any price at all, nor find a way to earn bread and cheese by my pen! If a musician had got such criticisms on a composition, he would be a made man. If an artist had had them on a picture the ball would be at his feet. If an actor had got them on a performance he would be offered engagements at a hundred a week. In literature alone such an anomalous and damnable condition of affairs as mine is possible. You can't deny it."

"I don't" said Turquand.

Union M.P.'s Come To Blows Following House Incident

COL. CURRIE "LANDS" DR. COWAN ON THE JAW AND THE WESTERNER COMES BACK WITH A WALKING STICK —J. ROBB STOPS HOSTILITIES.

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—That bonnie fechter, Col. John A. Currie, M.P. for North Simcoe, and Dr. W. D. Cowan, the doughty dentist of Regina, enlivened the proceedings of Parliament when they came to blows in the main corridor.

It was the sequel to a taunt hurled at the Highlander in the Commons chamber while the Hon. James Calder was speaking on the report of the Special Committee of Soldiers Civil Reestablishment. The Colonel had been heckling the Minister, and Dr. Cowan, who is also a Tory Unionist, but a greater admirer of Union Government than the North Simcoe member, exclaimed, "Better get back to your dugout."

Shortly afterwards the members took dinner recess, and Colonel Currie, approaching the Regina man, said: "Cowan, you insulted me." His follow through was a punch on the jaw. The dentist is a lame man, but was quick enough to give the Highlander a blow over the head with his walking stick.

Liberal Whip Interferes.

Before they could clinch, Mr. James Robb, the Chief Liberal Whip, jumped in between them and prevented further hostilities. The corridor was crowded at the time, and the incident was the sole topic of conversation in the parliamentary restaurant during the evening meal.

"I didn't intend to hurt him," said Col. Currie to a reporter, "I merely slapped him on the face a couple of times."

No Blood Spilled.

No blood was spilled, though Dr. Cowan has a slight cut on the right cheek. If he could only get Currie in his dentist's chair for a few minutes

—!—!—!

Dr. Cowan gave his version of the fight as follows:

"Colonel Currie was interrupting the Minister of Immigration and accusing him of dodging," said the doctor.

"Members all about me thought this an unfair remark, as the Minister was making a straightforward statement. I said to Currie, 'Anyway, he's not dodging out of the trenches into a dugout.'

"Few Cracks With Cane"

"As I was passing down the corridor at dinner-time to join my wife and daughter, who were waiting for me, Currie came up and slapped me in the face. I was completely taken by surprise, but recovered in time to give him a few cracks over the head with my cane. I suppose I should not have done that, but I was so taken by surprise. I am sorry the thing happened. It certainly doesn't add to the dignity of a member of Parliament."

Both Col. Currie and Dr. Cowan were "jollied" by colleagues, several members coming forward with such remarks as "How's Jess Willard tonight?" and "Hello, Battling Cowan."

"WELL PUNISHED", SAYS KING GEORGE

LONDON, Nov. 7.—King George gave his view of the former German Emperor in the course of an audience with a missionary from Armenia, Archibald Forder.

When the missionary told the story of his captivity of four years, saying that the troubles had all been instigated by the Germans, the King replied:

"Well, they are finished now. The Kaiser has had to run away from his own country. He is well punished for all he did."

Made in Belleville: Needed in Labrador

Belleville folks were recently afforded the exceptional opportunity of meeting Wilfred Thompson Grenfell, Master Mariner, C.M.G., M.D., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., M.A., LL.D., J.P., founder and superintendent of that great and wonderful work of philanthropy and love of humanity, the Labrador Medical Mission, now the International Grenfell Association. Much has been written and said about Dr. Grenfell and his work, and many are familiar with "Labrador and Its People," "Down the Sea," "Adrift on a Pan of Ice," "A Man's Faith," "Man's Helpers," "What Life Means to Me," written by Dr. Grenfell himself; and to anyone who has given the matter any thought at all it is amazing that this brilliant medical man, said to be among the best surgeons in the world and formerly an associate of Sir Frederick Treves, should have devoted his life to promoting the welfare of the deep sea fishermen and their families on the bleak and barren Labrador coast, besides caring for Indians and Eskimos.

A remarkable feature of Dr. Grenfell's lecture before the Belleville Women's Canadian Club was his statement that in far-away Labrador he had run across an advertisement of a Belleville manufacturer drawing attention to a turbine wheel which looked to be just the thing which he had needed for a long time upon the mission steamer Strathcona. He determined if opportunity offered when he came west to visit Belleville and inspect the wheel. The invitation of the Women's Canadian Club afforded the opportunity, and upon examination the Belleville turbine wheel was found to be what he had been looking for. The only thing which prevented him from ordering one was lack of funds, he having had to leave his work and tour Canada seeking funds for needed extensions.

The price of the turbine wheel made in Belleville which would be a great help to Dr. Grenfell and his work is $225.

The Women's Canadian Club have thirty-five dollars, the proceeds of the plate collection at Dr. Grenfell's lecture. This the Club will devote to a turbine wheel fund, and one of the prominent lady members will augment this with twenty-five dollars. That leaves only $165 on the purchase price, and there should be a rush to get the privilege of contributing all or part of this sum. Anyone who has any doubts as to this should read some of the books on the Labrador work and then, snuggling close up to the cheery glow of the fireplace in perfect peace and comfort, fill out a fat check for the men and women who face disease and death daily in its most terrible forms to save life, ameliorate distress, feed the hungry and keep the great fisheries going which help to feed the world.

While the check is being written the sturdy little steamer Strathcona, with its brave staff and crew, may be battling in icy seas with bergs and floes seeking to rescue fishermen driven out to sea or marooned on some floating ice-pack. That Belleville turbine may make it easier to save lives later on.

Made in Belleville, shipped to Labrador, should be an entry soon to be made in the export record.

Miss Fraleck, at the Court House, will be pleased to receive subscriptions toward the turbine wheel fund for the Dr. Grenfell Medical Mission on the Labrador. Act quickly or you will miss this opportunity to boost Belleville and help a worthy object.

Vain Hunt For Hidden Gold

"Spiritual Congregation" Lured Into Search for Capt. Kidd Treasure.

PATERSON, N.J., Nov. 7.—Still projecting his malign influence into affairs of mortals, Captain Kidd has claimed a new quota of credulous treasure-seekers, and through their cupidity brought them to grief.

The story of the search with picks and shovels, on the part of a director of a "spiritual congregation" and two of his feminine leaders, for a $2,000,000 chest of gold, supposed to have been buried by the pirate on an Oakland, N.J., farm, in the sixteenth century, was told in the Passaic County Circuit Court before Judge George S. Setyer in this city.

Suit Over Note

Trial was resumed to-day in a suit in which Daniel Balsinger, a seventy-five-year-old farmer of Oakland, is seeking to recover $5,000 alleged to be due from the Spiritualist leaders on a promissory note, made in May, 1913. The defendants in the case are Fred Loehrs of Elizabeth, director of the Congregation for the Enlightenment and Teaching of the Soul and Spirit, and Mrs. Sophie Saulter, and Mrs. Marie Blumer, Secretary and Treasuer, respectively, of the congegation.

According to the testimony by Loehrs, he was aproached by Balsinger in May, 1913, on the question of the purchase of a farm owned by Balsinger in Oakland. Balsinger, he said, told him of a "vision' 'which came to him that Captain Kidd had buried $2,000,000 worth of treasure on the farm. Balsinger, Loehrs testified, said that the spirit described Loehrs as the man who was to find the treasure, which was to be devoted to Spiritual and philanthropic work. It would be necessary, however, for Loehrs to buy the farm.

Fell For "Vision"

The congregation of the church was consulted, Loehrs said, and it was decided to buy the farm. A mortgage of $1,300 was assumed by the congregation and $200 in cash was paid to Balsinger. A note for $5,000, the principal point of contention in the suit, was made payable to Balsinger, and was made payable to Balsinger, and was signed by Loehrs, Mrs. Saulter and Mrs. Blumer. This note was to be paid only upon condition that the treasure was found, the witness said. Loehrs testified that he and his two feminine helpers dug up a greater part of the 63 acre farm in a vain search for the treasure. Balsinger, he said, pointed out many likely places in which to dig.

He stopped digging one day, while at the bottom of a fourteen-foot hole, when he realized that the earth might cave in and bury him.

May Resign On Gratuity Question

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—If Parliament decides upon a further general distribution of gratuities for veterans of the great war it will have to find another Administration to carry on. That was the intimation to the House of Comomns of M. James Calder, Minister of Immigration and Chairman of the Special Committee on the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Bill.

In other words, the Government will resign if the Flynns and their Parliamentary supporters are to have their way and the soldiers are to get another $2,000 or smaller gratuity. The Minister of Immigration issued the ultimatum in the course of a comprehensive review of the voluminous report of the special committee, the adoption of which he moved in the House this afternoon.

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Alfred Zimmerman secretary for Foreign Affairs during the war, caused a mild sensation during to-day's session of the National Assembly committee investigating the war when he admitted that German authorities had been suspicious that their code which was known by an American was betrayed to the U. S. Government.

Sinn Feiners Cut Off Hair Of Work Girl

DUBLIN, Nov. 7.—Lovemaking by the girls of Ireland with members of the British Government forces has been prescribed by the Irish Republican army. Any girl keeping company with a Government soldier or policeman will be penalized by having her hair cut off. One girl has already suffered the full penalty, losing her locks for walking out with a soldier.

Ban Soldier Lovers

A proclamation has been posted, signed by "The competent military authority," saying:

'Whereas certain girls, wanting in selfrespect, have damned themselves by keeping company with the army of occupation, it is deemed proper by competent authority, both to safeguard morality and to stop bad examples, to publish the names of these culprits, and also to warn them that, after the publication of this proclamation, those who presist in the above-mentioned scandalous, unpatriotic company-keeping render themselves liable to the punishment of being branded by having their hair cut off. The names of four offenders are attached to the proclamation.

Public Houses Threatened

The notification goes on to say:

"The parents or mistresses are requested to see that the above-mentioned girls are kept from intercourse with enemy troops. All loyal subjects of the Irish Republic are also requested to shun public houses which entertain members of the enemy army until such time as they make reparation by a complete change of conduct."

Three names of offenders are here given. The first-named person is earnestly requested to dismiss the barmaid, who openly mocks loyal subjects by wearing a policeman's cap and badge, showing the Crown above the heart. In case of refusal drastic measures will be taken. All who persist in visiting these porclaimed houses are liable to have their names published as disloyal subjects who patronize houses frequented by the enemy, and private punishment will be meted out in due course.

Vote In Senate On G.T.R. Bill

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—The first round of the battle in the Senate over the Grand Trunk Railway purchase legislation ended at 1.30 this (Friday) morning in the defeat of the amendment of Senator Ross of Halifax calling for postponement of consideration of the bill until next session by 39 votes to 35. The motion for second reading of the measure was then carried by the same division reversed. The Government, in its majority of four in both divisions, secured what had been expected. Eight Conservatice Senators voted against the Government. They were Hon. Messrs. Frederick Nicholls of Toronto; Ross of Halifax; Fowler of New Brunswick; Dowler of Montplaiser; Gordon of Nipissing; McLennan of Sydney, N.S., and Smeaton White of Montreal. Senator Todd (Liberal), voted with the Government. By agreement, Colonel Gerald White, who took his seat in the Senate for the first time during the evening sitting, did not vote in the division.

Policeman Milton was shot twice just below the heart early this morning by a burglar and is not expected to live.

Order To Vaccinate Every Civil Servant

One Thousand of Them Will be Treated Against Smallpox—Provincial Officer Takes Serum, Too.

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—Believing that it is good business to put into practise what he advises others to do, Dr. P. W. S. McCullough, Provincial Officer of Health, and members of his staff, will commence the vaccination of all civil servants employed in the Parliament buildings.

Reports received by the Provincial Board of Health are to the effect that there are large numbers of cases of the mild type of smallpox in the Province, and in view of this fact, and also that the number of cases in Toronto is on the increase, Dr. McCullough requested Premier Hearst to issue an order requiring all employees to be vaccinated. This order was issued last night and the doctors will commence work at once. As there are more than 1,000 employees in the Parliament buildings, the task is by no means a small one.

Dr. McCullough was himself vaccinated yesterday by his assistant, Dr. Bell, and then Dr. McCullough performed a similar operation on Dr. Bell.

Policeman Shot By Daring Burglar

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—Police Constable Milton (No. 43) of West Dundas Street Station, was shot twice above the heart while attempting to arrest a burglar at the premises of the Gildcraft Clothing Company, at the rear of 368 Yonge Street, shortly after 1.30 o'clock this morning.

J. M. Clymer, of 61 Bolton Street, and J. D. Sutherland, 331 Sherbourne Street, who were returning from a party shortly before 2 a.m., heard moans proceeding from the lane, and on investigation, discovered the constable, who was lying on his face, his tunic being soaked with blood. Clymer telephoned to the police headquarters and Sergeants-Detectives Taylor and Young were assigned to the case.

When found Policeman Milton had his baton in his right hand, indicating that he had been engaged in a struggle with the burglar. A revolver containing two discharged cartridges was found near the wounded man, but the constable's pistol was missing. A coat and a pair of woollen mittens, evidently the property of the burglar and which had been torn off him in the struggle, were also found.

The wounded policeman was removed to St. Michael's Hospital in an unconscious condition and but little hope is entertained of his recovery. The burglar has not yet been located.

The Victim's Story

In his ante-mortem statement, taken at 2.30 this morning, P. C. Milton said he heard a crash of glass at the rear of 368 Yonge Street, and when he went behind he saw a man in the building with a light. He called upon him to come out. This he failed to do, and Milton entered the building. A struggle ensued. The burglar broke loose, and, drawing a revolver, fired two shots and ran to the lane. Milton attempted to follow, but fell to the ground from weakness.

Nova Scotia Swept By A Destructive Hurricane

MANY VESSELS DRIVEN OUT TO SEA OR WRECKED ON THE ROCKS—TELEGRAPH WIRES BLOWN DOWN, BUILDINGS RAZED AND GENERAL DAMAGE CAUSED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 7.—The storm that swept over Nova Scotia with hurricane force last night and today drove two schooners and five yachts ashore here, tore down telegraph and telephone wires, delayed trains and caused extensive damage to shipping interests generally.

West coast towns reported many wharves under water.

At Portsmouth fifteen fishing boats were swept from their moorings and driven out to sea or tossed on shore. The signal station at Liverpool was blown down and many small boats and buoys were torn from their anchorage. Yarmouth also suffered considerable damage.

The seas in the Bay of Fundy ran to great heights. Six large fishing schooners were driven ashore at Lunenburg. They were the Dorothy Adams, Lauretta Francis, Arcadia, Edyth Mills, Carrie L. Hurtle and Lucille Smith. Several buildings were razed by the wind in that town.

The three-masted schooner Audrey was wrecked on the rocks near Liverpool.

But one life was reported lost, a man who stepped on an electric wire at Woodside being instantly killed.

Children Perish In Burning Home

TRENTON, Nov. 6.—Two small children of Benjamin Hatfield, Murray township, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the farmhouse.

About 6 o'clock Mr. Hatfield and his wife went to the barn to do the milking. Fifteen minutes later they noticed flames bursting from the frame house, where they had left their three children. Running to the house Hatfield smashed a window and pulled the baby from its cradle.

Getting a ladder he made an entrance to the upstairs room where the other two children slept. In the smoke and flame the father groped his way to the bed, but found it empty. He was forced out by the smoke, but made another heroice attempt to locate the children. He could not find them, and nearly lost his own life in the effort.

Some time later the two small, charred bodies were recovered from the ruins of the burned dwelling. The were burned past all recognition. The children were aged six and eight years. Dr. Geo. H. Ferris, Coroner, after personal investigation, deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Strike Interferes With Train Service

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Curtailment of passenger train service, discontinuance of bunkering of foreign owned vessels at American ports, restrictions in some places of use of public utilities and appeals for coal from various cities as strike of approximately 425,000 bituminous coal miners today rounded out its first week gave the nation further indication of the distress in store should there be a protacted suspension of mining operations. Other disarrangements of the country's routine were expected today with little change in general conditions surrounding the strike itself.

Officials said that the Government's offer to arbitrate the controversy as soon as the strike order was withdrawn still was open, and that unless it was accepted and the strike ended there was no course for the Government except to press the injunction suit.

Birth Notice

TILLEY—To Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Tilley, a son.

A TRAGIC PAPTY

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 5—Tragedy seems to have followed a party of two which set out fro mRenfrew, Ont., last week to visit MacDowall, Sask. Mrs. Lillie Christie was taken ill on the train here and died on Sunday at the general hospital, where she was taken. No wthe friend who accompanied her, Miss Annie Stalker, Edinburgh, Scotland, has also died in the same hospital. The latter was a nurse and there are suspicions that she poisoned herself. Mrs. Christie was the wife of an Edinburgh solicitor who was killed during a German air raid in the recent war.

Marsh Engineering Works Wins Prince of Wales Flag

With Victory Loan subscriptions totaling 12½ per cent of the annual payroll, 75 per cent of the employees of the Marsh Engineering Works, Ltd. have won the first Prince of Wales' Honor Flag awarded to industrial establishments in Hastings County. Capt. G. H. Holton and Mr. A. S. White have energetically canvassed the works and expect that still more subscriptions from this source. The employees of the Marsh Engineering Works have splendidly subscribed to former Loans and are to be congratulated on their patriotic showing throughout.

Applications for $93,850 yesterday brought the County total up to $997,600 from team members subscriptions and with $50,000 specials it now stands at $1,047,600. Deseronto made a splendid showing yesterday having brought in the highest per centage of the day's returns. They now stand at 70.86 per cent. Belleville is still lagging in the race with 48.90 per cent, while Trenton has 71.62. Local canvassers gathered last night to discuss means of making special efforts during the last week of the campaign.

BIG PARADE TO-MORROW

All Belleville school children are patriotically giving their services to boost the Victory Loan to-morrow in the big parade and competition of decorated cars. Marshall J. J. B. Flint will assemble the procession in front of the Armouries at 10.30 a.m. and following the march through the streets an out door meeting will be held in the market square. This will be a splendid chance to win a $50 Bond for merchants and owners of motor cars. The judges are Messrs. C. B. Scantlebury, W. H. McCreary and W. J. Thomson who will award the prizes at the conclusion of the parade.

ARMISTICE CELEBRATION

The same spirit of joy that made Belleville go wild on Armistice Day last year will prevail at the big Citizens' Armistice Celebration to be held in the Armouries next Tuesday evening. Members of the victorious Belleville Team will be presented with gold watches and a big programme of entertainment has been arranged by Mrs. A. P. Allen. This will last till 10.30 p.m. and will be followed by a big dance with novel Victory Loan features. Among these will be an elimination dance with a prize of a $50 Victory Bond. Refreshments are being prepared and arrangements made for one of the largest crowds ever gathered together in Belleville.

Investigaton Of Standard Reliance

Question Raised as to Scope of the Investigation.

The judicial probe into the affairs of the defunct Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation before the Master in Chambers, Mr. J. A. C. Cameron, at Osgoode Hall yesterday was featured by the attempt of Mr. J. R. L. Starr, K.C., counsel for W. S. Dinnick, former vice-president of the Standard Reliance, to restrict the line of examination to events of the past four years beginning with the formation of the company.

Mr. Starr based his contention upon the main ground that at the amalgamation of the Standard and Reliance Companies in 1913, the books were audited and the companies were found to be in sound financial condition. Any deeper probe than that, Mr. Starr declared would be an investigation over 'dead horses.'

The Master in Chambers overruled Mr. Starr's contention and ordered Dinnick to answer all questions. Mr. Starr thereupon gave immediate notice of appeal to a judge in single court, and pending the appeal, Mr. Dinnick was excused from answering. The appeal must be made within four days, the Master stated.

George H. Kilmer, K.C., appeared for the liquidator, Mr. G. T. Clarkson

When W. S. Dinnick resumed his testimony in the Standard Reliance probe before the Master-in-Chambers, Mr. J. A. C. Cameron, at Osgoode Hall in the afternoon, he said the Royal Bank Building at 12 King street east now the Dinnick Building, was purchased in 1912 for $700,000.

After examining Mr. Dinnick for two hours, Mr. Kilmer said he could not go on until it was definitely settled whether or not there was to be a full investigation or merely an examination over the period since the formation of the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation.

MAY FOREGO APPEAL

"Col. Dinnick" explained Mr. Starr "does not want any delay in hastening the investigation and he has authorized me to proceed with all despatch to determine how far the probe shall extend. I will say this, that Col. Dinnick was not fully agreed with me about the objection I have raised, but it is entirely my own, and I particularly desire it. It is the intention of the colonel and myself to further consider this question and we may even decide before to-morrow morning not to press for the appeal, merely reserving my right to object to questions from time to time."

Questioned by Geo. H. Kilmer, K.C., for the liquidator, Mr. Dinnick said the money necessary for the purchase was borrowed on two notes of $72,500 each signed by Herbert Waddington, A. G. C. Dinnick, W. S. Dinnick and Gideon Grant and endorsed by J. Firstbrook. Payments made on the property amounted to $100,000. Soon afer this payment the Dovercourt Land Co., which purchased the building, sold it to the British Land Co., at a profit of $40,000.

"Were there any other notes given?"

"Yes, as I remember it, Mr. E. F. B. Johnson also gave his note for $15,000."

"That made altogether $160,000?"

"Yes."

"Was the lad transferred immediately to the British Land Company and how was the property paid for?"

"As I recollect it, we borrowed this money from the Royal Bank and with some of this we purchased what is kown as the Strathcona property from N. Garland and made our payment on the Royal Bank building."

LARGE AMOUNT OWING

"What payment?" "I have no figures but as it stands now $100,000 has been paid, leaving $600,000 still owing. There was $133,000 paid to Garland and $25,000 to the Royal Bank, plus what appears on the books as a bonus The property was conveyed to the British Land Company almost immediately."

WOMEN WHO KILL.

A Few of Them Have Been Real Mercenary.

Do women commit cold-blooded murder? That there have been thousands of women killers within a generation we know. But are their slayings not always either what the French call crimes passionnels, or killings of revenge, or homicides founded on morbid sensuality, or occasions due to pathological conditions—insanity, neurosis, hysteria or epilepsy? In a word, do women kill, as countless men in every age and clime have killed, for exclusively mercenary motives and with calm premeditation?

These old but ever fresh questions are revived by the confession and life-long sentence of Mrs. Amy E. Archer Gilligan in Connecticut. A few days since, this mature woman herself brought to an end a three years' fight against charges of the state which inferentially involved the deaths of perhaps 40 human beings

This woman was not emotionally or erotically concerned with any of her victims. At no point was any hatred or passion against any one shown. She tried to plead insanity, but repeated examining boards of physicians found her all too sane. She had simply murdered a number, and perhaps a very large number, of old men and women to profit a few hundred dollars extra on each trucidation.

A complete and perfect Borgia, one with few parallels.

But if Lucretia Borgia's record, true or fabulous, in no way compares to this story, there are other women along the backwaters of history, old and new, whose doings will add evidence to support the truth that woman may kill and does kill as calmly and consciously as man.

The celebrated Marie d'Aubray, Marquise de Brinvilliers, 1630-76, is one of the best examples from olden times. Having exhausted her husband's fortune and disposed of him, she poisoned her mother, father and other relatives in startling succession, to possess herself of their money. She finally poisoned her lover by mistake, was caught and decapitated. The only crime of her many in which any emotional elements were at play was her last, and it was more accident than crime.

France has had a number of other examples. Marie Bompard, that abysmal child of crime, will be example sufficient. In 1889 this young girl formed a plot with her lover, one Eyraud, to lure Gouffe, a rich notary, into an apartment and there strangle him. She went from Paris to London with Eyraud, to lure Gouffe, a rich notary, into an apartment and there strangle him. She went from Paris to London with Eyraud and there bought the paraphernalia of her crime — a large trunk and a strong colored cord to match a dressing gown. With this equipment she and her lover returned and then she led the smitten Gouffe inb her room and sat in his lap in a chair. She slipped the strong cord of her gowns about his neck and remarked what a lovely necktie it would make. That was the signal. Eyraud, hidden behind a drapery, tugged at the cord. In a few minutes Gouffe was dead. His body was hidden in the trunk and she sat beside it all night. She and her paramour were caught after prolonged search. Indeed, she brazenly walked in the prefect's office and said she had heard he was looking for her, hoping to shift the blame to Eyraud. Both finally were convicted. The girl had done her crime only to get money.

Sergeant Had His Reasons for Not Making at That Time a "Full an' Free Confession."

An American colonel in France was having difficulty with his safe. It was the headquarters safe. Its lock had jammed, and none of his staff could open it. While they were struggling with it a negro sergeant came up to them apologetically.

"Cul'n'l," he said, "if I ain't intrudin' into dis heah difficulty, I believes, sah, dat I might he'p yah."

"Yes?" said the colonel. "What do you suggest?"

"Cul'n'l," said the sergeant, "I suggests Co'p'l Hall."

"Corporal Hall? Why Corporal Hall?"

"Co'p'l Hall," the sergeant explained, under his voice, "was fo' foah years a bugglah."

They sent for Corporal Hall and Corporal Hall opened the safe.

"Well, sergeant," the colonel said, "I'm glad to know about Corporal Hall. I wish I'd known it sooner. It would have saved us a lot of time with that safe. And tell me, sergeant!—in case we may need to call on you some day—in what direction do your particular talents lie?"

"Cul'n'l," the sergeant answered, "Ah doan' want to tell no lies. Standin' as Ah does daily in de presence of mah Makeh, mos' doubtless Ah doan' want to tell no lies. But if de time comes when Ah kin he'p yah, sah, Ah'll make a full an' free confession, a full an' free confession, sah."—Ben B. Lindsey in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Italy's Exports.

Italian motor car exports showed a falling off for the first six months of 1918, compared with the corresponding period of the two preceding years. From January 1 to June 30, 1918, a total of 2,356 lorries and touring cars were exported, having a value of approximately £1,400,000, compared with 4,148 vehicles in 1917 and 2,781 in 1916. The number of touring cars exported during the first six months of 1918 was 728, this constituting a record, for the figures of the two preceding years were 244 and 569, respectively.

It's True in Terre Haute.

The other day a primary teacher in the Terre Haute schools was teaching her youngsters about animals. She had told them about domestic animals and then gave examples of the cow and the pig. Then she turned to the children. "Can't some little boy name some wild animals?" she asked.

John could. He rose with alacrity, "Ghosts and Indians!" he shouted.

PROPOSED HOCKEY LEAGUE

Editor of Belleville Intelligencer:

Sir: — The Perth Hockey Club would like to get in touch with the Hockey Management of your town in reference to forming a league and perhaps through the local medium of your paper we could get the required help. Perth and Smith's Falls have organized and we are just waiting on a reply from Brockville. The proposed league is to include Brockville, Belleville, Perth and Smith's Falls to which the train connections for all four points are excellent. Hertofore Brockville, Perth and Smith's Falls have formed a group of the Inter-Provincial and this year if your town came in, it would make a rattling good league.

So, if you will kindly insert a few lines regarding this matter in your paper, asking your hockeyists to communicate with R. E. Stone, Perth Ont. we would appreciate your kindness very much.

Sincerely,
R. E. Stone, Secy.,
Perth Hockey Club

Wedding Bells

WILSON—FLINDALL

At the home of Mrs. Esther Flindall, of Wellington, Prince Edward County, on Tuesday at high noon an interesting event occurred, namely the marriage of her daughter, Miss Ninta Flindall to Mr. Arthur Wilson, of Toronto The ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives and friends by the Rev. Mr. Boyle of the Anglican Church. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Frank Flindall and was most charmingly attired in a gown of blue georgette crepe with bead trimmings and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The couple were unattended. Decorations in the house for the occasion were chrysanthemums and ferns and were charmingly arranged. That the bride was popular was evidenced by the numerous gifts of value she received. The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls which she wore during the ceremony. After the company had partaken of a most tempting repast the young couple left for Toronto, Hamilton and other points, previous to taking up their residence in the Queen City. Their many friends will wish for them years of happiness and prosperity.

SHARP—DENNIS

Last evening at the Presbyterian parsonage, George St., Miss Nina Dennis was quietly married to Mr. Harry Sharpe of Flint, Mich., formerly of Belleville. The happy couple left by G.T.R. for Toronto and western points returning to Flint, Mich., where they will reside.

WEDDING GIFT WAS A BRUNSWICK

Among the gifts of the Lieutenant-Governor's daughter, now Mrs. Owens was a Brunswick All-Record Phonograph. This was a special selected hand-carved case design, and equipped with the remarkable Ultona which plays all records by a mere twist of the wrist. The instrument also had the much-talked of round all-wood horn built like a violin. The Brunswick has been set to the bride's residence at Montreal. This was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. McConnell.

Stomach Troubles Are Due To Acidity

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief for Acid Digestion.

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief for Acid Indigestion

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutalizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antiacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestants. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

OWEN SOUND MOONSHINERS USED CURIOUS MATERIALS

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 7—Three men were charged in the police court with having material in their possession which could be used for the manufacture of spirituous liquors, without a license. The charge was laid by Inland Revenue Inspectors Johnson and Learney, who have been making an attempt to clean up blind pigs in this district. Inspector D. J. Kearney, combed the country thoroughly during the past month and states that the report of moonshine outfits in this section and of Bruce Peninsula is much exaggerated.

The stuff which was seized this morning was concocted from all manner of queer material. One man used apples, raisins and yeast. Another grapes, prunes and sugar, the third claimed that his was rhubarb wine. The first was fined $200. The second went to jail for six months and the third elected to be tried by jury at the next session of the County Court.

$30,000 HOG AND IS NOT PROFITEER EVEN THEN

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 7.—Thirty thousand dollars were paid by a local breeder for "Desiger," a yearling Poland China boar. This is said to be the record price of a single hog. When a few weeks old "Desiger" was sold for $5,000. Yesterday's sale makes a profit of $25,000 for the original purchaser in less than a year.

WANT TO FLOAT NATIONAL LOAN FOR SOLDIERS

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—Flotation of a soldiers' Victory Loan of two or three hundred million dollars for the purpose of paying further grauities to disabled and needy veterans and their families was advocated by several Government supporters in the House of Commons during the resumed debate upon the report of the Special Committee on Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. The author of the proposition was Mr. J. H. Burnham of West Peterboro', and his plan was warmly supported by W. F. Maclean of South York and W. F. Cockshutt of Brantford.

The Peterboro' member said we could have a referedum on whiskey, why not one for the returned soldiers? They had been told when they went to war that they would be well looked after upon their return, but when they came back they saw a lot of wealthy people who had made money out of the war and were now living in luxury. The slogan of 'The Last Man and the Last Dollar' had only been half carried out. If people could sleep while war veterans were in need thy were Pharaoh of old: their hearts were hardened against reasonable requests.

FOREIGN CREDITS, FOREIGN BUSINESS.

The Committee on Commerce and Marine of the American Bankers' Association in a report presented to the latter body has declared that for the extension of foreign credits "the necessary financial machinery in the form of a large, capably managed and thoroughly equipped organization with which the bankers, business man, and manufacturers of this country would become identified, and which might very properly be initiated and supported by the members of the American Bankers' Association, should be provided with the least possible delay."

The committee declares its belief that the provisions of credits for foreign purchases in the United States constitute an essential basis for the maintenance and extension of the foreign trade of the United States. This basis, the committee adds, can be secured "to a markedly important, if not wholly necessary degree, by wisely made American investment in foreign securities, not only Government issues, but also municipal and industrial, if properly guaranteed."

The committee was of the opinion that such an organization should have ample capital and "be sufficiently resourceful to extend credits running into the largest figures than can be required for the purchase of American products." The efforts of the organization "should most certainly be supplemented by the maximum of production here" (i.e. in the United States) in order not only that American workers be kept well and profitably employed, but also that they be not subjected to the payment of excessive prices for their own needs.

STRENGTHENING THE RESERVES.

During the war everyone learned more or less to think in military terms and apply them to the public and private problems of the day.

Thus when the phrase "Strengthen the Reserves" used to fall from the lips of Foch and Haig we knew what it meant—namely, that no great enterprise can be carried on, without ample reserves to meet every possible contingency.

The command that is going out from General Drayton, General White, and the other captains of Canada's finances today is "Strengthen the Reserves." Canada is face to face with a great fight to secure and hold the share of the world's trade to which her resources and machinery of production entitle her. She has also to battle with great domestic problems before conditions for the returned soldiers will be restored to the condition of stability and contentment. She cannot win these battles without strong financial reserves. Every solicitor for the sale of Victory Bonds is an officer in the campaign and is endeavoring to organize the country for a great economic effort to maintain her present position of prosperity and heavy exports at good prices. If you hoard or waste money with which you could buy Victory Bonds you are helping to exhaust the reserves, and are shirking your duty. To quote another war-phrase—it is necessary for every Canadian to "do his bit" according to his means, or see his country outstripped in the race.

A NEWSPAPER'S POWER.

The influence of the daily press has been well summarized by Carl P. Johnson, a writer of national fame over the border, who pens this tribute:

The power of the Press exceeds that of mighty armies in full panoply of war.

The daily newspaper lights the way for men and nations along the path of progress.

The newspaper is a greater educational institution than all the colleges of Christendom.

Its doors are wide open to every man, woman and child who can read.

The newspaper is the bulwark of liberty, the flaming sword of justice.

It brings wrongdoers, without fear or favor, before the supreme court of public opinion, from whose verdict there is no appeal.

To an audience more vast than pulpiteers command, the newspaper proclaims its great evangel—the brotherhood of man.

Modern civilization could not exist without the daily newspaper.

Second only in importance to its mission as a disseminator of news is its work as a builder of business.

Its advertising columns are the display windows of merchandise—eagerly scanned from day to day, in millions of homes.

Newspaper advertising is the world's master salesman.

Great is the daily newspaper.

INEXHAUSTIBLE FOUNTAINS OF FINANCE.

Members of Parliament are subject to all the ills that flesh is heir to and then some, not the least of their troubles being the problem of keeping a reserve fund large enough to meet the demands of subscription canvassers for a variety of objects. In this connection the following alleged copy of a letter sent by a member of Parliament in answer to a request for a cash donation will be of interest:

> "For the following reasons I am unable to send you the cheque asked for:—
> "I have been held up, held down, sandbagged, walked on, sat on, flattened out, and squeezed, first by the Canadian Government for Federal War Tax, the Excessive Profits Tax, the Victory Loan Bonds, Thrift Capital Stock Tax, Merchants' License and Auto Tax, and by every society and organization that the inventive mind of man can invent to extract what I may or may not possess.
> "From the Society of John the Baptist, the G.W.V.A., the Women's Relief, the Navy League, the Red Cross, the Purple Cross, the Black Cross, the Double Cross, the Children's Home, the Dorcas Society, the Y.M.C.A., the Boy Scouts, the Jewish Relief, the Belgian Relief and every hospital in town.
> "The Government has so governed my business that I don't know who owns it. I am inspected, examined and re-examined, informed, required and commanded, so I don't know who I am, where I am, or why I am here. All I know is I am supposed to be an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need of the human race, and because I will not sell all I have and go out and beg, borrow or steal money to give away, I have been cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, held up, hung up, robbed and nearly ruined, and the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what in Hell is coming next."

as tho' de rest keeps pilin' mo' and mo',
And you reckon, ef dey gwine that away ter act, you'll never hab de time ter play.
Sho, that's kase mostly all de while,
you just keep watchin' de wrong heap, chile, turn round and look at de 'is done' pile.

For de man what shirks his work ter
fret 'bout his job what ain't done yet,
Just as sho's yer a foot high, son, is de feller what neber gits nothin' done
And nothin' done means nothin' ter eat, and mostly holes in yer trowser seat, and yer rated no count by all yer meet.

So, wheneber you has a task ter do,
just remember what ah'm tellin' you,
In order to 'complish de things you should, you must do like you's choppin' that wood—
Don't fret 'bout what ain't done, chile, keep pluggin' away, and in a while de one what's done is de biggest pile.

If the Coal Tie-up Comes.

New York Sun.

The soft coal miners demand a decrease of working time to six hours a day, five days a week—in all thirty hours a week. They also demand an increase of pay by sixty per cent.

If the miners get their demands the coal bill of the American public—for every penny of it will be passed along to the public—would be raised by an estimated billion dollars a year. If the miners don't get their demands they threaten to tie up the mines.

If the soft coal workers do tie up the mines the country's railways for the most part can't operate, the country's industries for the most part can't operate. If the country's industries and railways can't operate the greater part of the American people can't work, they can't keep warm, they can't eat.

The American public, preyed upon incessantly and insatiably by this organized fraction, that organized fraction and the other organized fraction of the national community, is more than sick and tired of undergoing the compulsion of every day or two having its pockets turned inside out. The American public is in the mood to begin to defend its own hard-earned dollars. The American public is done with the hold-up game. The American public is ready to roll up its sleeves and tackle the job of self-preservation.

When the soft coal workers tie up the mines and begin to freeze and starve the nation the American people are going to get into the compulsion business themselves. They are going to operate the coal mines, operate the industries, operate the railroads—operate the country, if they have to pulverize every selfish and greedy organization that stands in the way of the American people.

RHEUMATISM

PERMANENT RELIEF FROM CHRONIC RHEUMATISM ATTAINED BY USING T. R. C.'S.

"Today I haven't a rheumatic pain in any part of my body and I am satisfied that others suffering as I did will be benefitted as I was by using T.R.C.'s," writes Mr. M. A. Hawley of Campbellford, Ontario.

"I am nearly 81, by occupation real estate and insurance broker. Some time ago I contracted Rheumatism. I tried many advertised cures without result and became very discouraged. At times I was almost helpless, being unable to dress without assistance, and suffered a great deal. One day my daughter brought me some T.R.C.'s. They helped me from the first box. I kept on using them and today am absolutely free from Rheumatism."

OLD LONDON BELL FOUNDRIES

Relics of Many of Them Are Still to Be Found Scattered Through the British Capital.

In the days before clocks, to say nothing of watches, were common the bells of London occupied a much more important position than they do today. 'Prentices depended on this bell and that to call them very unwillingly to work of a morning and release them very willingly from work of an evening, whilst bells were requisitioned for all manner of special purposes. And so there were many bell foundries in the city. Relics of them are found in many places, even if it is only a street name, such as Billitter street, which, as Mr. Landfear Lucas points out, was undoubtedly Bell-sitzers or Founders' lane. Then Belsize probably owes its name, he declares, to a bell foundry on the lower part of Hampstead hill. Something of this sort is all that remains of many of them, but others, like the Whitechapel Bell foundry, which has been charged with retuning and rehanging the bells of Westminster abbey for the peace rejoicings, have continued to do business through the centuries. The foundry commenced business in 1570.

Timely Suggestion.

A Brooklyn lady who bought some get-rich-while-you-sleep oil and mining stock recently, is now just too provoked for anything because she didn't examine the shares more closely. Some of them are red, some yellow and some green. She tried to paper her kitchen walls with them after the president of the company disappeared, but the artistic effect was not satisfactory.

In doing your spring shopping for worthless securities, insist on getting stock certificates that harmonize in color. Then you can use them for decorative purposes after the company goes to the wall.

An old piano box covered with the shares of deceased corporations makes a pretty good clothes press, provided the stock matches nicely in shade and texture. Persons who are color blind should be extremely cautious with their wild-cat investments these days.

BEAUTY SECRETS!

Where she gets her good looks, her healthy skin, her pink cheeks, is known to every one, because it is apparent that it is not due to cosmetics, paint and powder. But the true womanly beauty comes from good health, and this good health is a woman's secret.

Health comes with good physical machinery and good spirits, an active digestion. A body free from pains and aches comes with a tonic known for over fifty years as the best "temperance" tonic and nervine for woman—namely, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It can be obtained in any drug store in liquid or tablet form, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Cleansing of the intestinal tract is important. Take castor oil or select a vegetable pill. Such a one is composed of May-apple, leaves of aloe, root of jalap, and made into tiny sugar-coated pellets, to be had at every drug store as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

CHOOSE FURS NOW

Novelties for Coming Season Have Made Their Appearance.

Dolman, It Is Predicted, Will Be a Leader for Fall Wear—Designs in Square Cut Short Coats Shown.

Midsummer fur sales this year have many novelties to offer, not so much in new pelts as in the shape and general style design of the garments. The dolman is to be a leader, it is said, and it will appear in a variety of lengths. For the woman who likes extreme styles a number of fitted models are being brought out. One of the newest is called the "redingote" because it is really cut much on the same general style line as the redingote dress, with fitted bodice section and long skirt of peplum, usually cut away in front so that a front panel of the skirt or dress over which it is worn may be seen.

Another novelty is the square cut short coat with loose panel back, collar and cuffs of fur contrasting with that used for the coat proper. Collars, especially when made of a different fur from that used for the coat, are usually enormous affairs, really large enough to qualify as small separate capes.

The smart little neckpiece of one or two skins sold in the spring will not be discarded immediately by Dame Fashion, and the woman who owns one may wear it with perfect serenity right through the autumn days as an accompaniment for her tailored street frock or untrimmed tailored suit. Mink, marten and sable were the most used pelts for these smart little neckpieces. They were shown made of one, two or three skins, the smaller ones being little more than choker collars.

Full length fur coats are shown, but by far the smartest models are those that are hip or three-quarter length, except, of course, when designed for evening wear. For general wear the full length coat is heavy, and a short model is not only less expensive but gives all the protection required.

Marshal Foch has acquired a British habit. The French do not generally smoke pipes. Day by day Marshal Foch saw Field Marshal Haig and other British generals in the vortex of the work calmly doing their work behind good high-bowled briar pipes. Foch asked Haig what it was like to smoke a pipe. He bought an English one. He filled it under careful British military instruction. He began the attempt with energy and purposeful determination, but at first smoked more matches than tobacco. Now, however, he has mastered it and thoroughly enjoys a good briar which he has bought from an English firm.

CHAPTER XIII

Nor did the conference which was protracted until a late hour provide an outlet to the dilemma; it was agreeable, but it did not lead anywhere. If he should hear of anything, he would certainly let the other know; that was the most the subeditor could say. Authors are not offered salaries to write novels, and Kent was not a journalist by temperament, nor possessed of any journalistic experience. As to tales or articles for The Outpost, that periodical did not publish feuilletons, and their rate for other matter was seven and sixpence a column. However, some attempt had to be made and Kent went to town every day and Cynthia saw less of him than when he had been writing 'The Eye of the Beholder.' He hunted up his few acquaintances and haunted the literary club that he had joined in the flush of his success. He applied for various posts that he saw were vacant by the Daily News and inserted a skilfully-framed advertisemnt in the Athenoeum. No answer ever arrived and the tradesmen's bills, and the poor rates and the gas notices and the very competent nurse's wages continued to fall due in the meanwhile. When the competent nurse's were no, he, the incipient lunatic's were. Dr. Roberts' account came in and the sight of his pass book now literally terrified the young man.

They had not been married quite two years yet and he asked himself if they had been extravagant in view of this evidence of the rapidity with which money had melted; but, excepting the style in which they had furnished, he could not perceive any cause for such self-reproach. They had lived comfortably, of course, but if the novel had been placed when it was finished they could have continued to live just as comfortably while he wrote the next. He feared they would have to take a bill of sale on the too expensive furniture, and that way lay destitution. Cynthia's composure under the circumstances surprised him. He told her so.

"It will all come right," she said "You are sure to get something soon, and perhaps Fendall and Green will accept 'The Eye of the Beholder' fulsomely."

This was an improvement for a few months since she would have been able to recollect the firm's name and referred to them vaguely as the publishers. He felt the sense of intimacy deepen as Fendall and Green dropped glibly from her lips, and the 'fulsomely' made him feel quite warm toward her.

"Have you told your people how low we are?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"Why should I? That is our affair."

"So it is," he assented. "Poor little girl! it's awful rough on you, though. I wonder you aren't playing with straws. You didn't know what economy meant when we married."

Praise from him was nectar and ambrosia to her. She wanted to embrace him, but felt that if she embraced the opportunity to give a happy definition of economy it would be appreciated better. She perched herself on the arm of his chair and struggled to evolve an epigram. As she could not think of one, she said:

"What nonsense!"

"I wish you had read the book and liked it," said Kent speaking spontaneously.

"Say you wish I'd read it?" replied his wife.

"Oh, you'd like it, because it was mine. But I mean I wish——"

"What?"

"I don't know."

She twisted a piece of his hair round her finger.

"My taste is much maturer than it was," she averred with satisfaction. "Somehow I can't stand the sort of things that used to please me; I don't know how I was able to read them. They bore me now."

She smiled. As she had often done to him before, she seemed a child masquerading in a woman's robes.

"You're getting quite a critic!"

"Well," she said happily, "you'll laugh, but I got 'A Peacock's Tail' from the library and when the review in the Chronicle came out the reviewer said just what I'd felt about it. He did. I'm not such a silly as you think you see."

"My dear!" he cried, "I never thought you were a 'silly'."

"Not very wise though. Oh, I know what I lack Humphrey but I am better than I was—I am really! Remember I never heard Literature talked about until I met you; it was all new to me when we married, and—if you've noticed it—you aren't very, very interested in anything else. The longer we live together, the more—the nicer I shall be!"

He answered lightly:

"You are nice enough now."

But he was touched.

Colombian Platinum.

Colombia produces an average of 30,000 troy ounces of platinum a year, practically all coming from the Quibdo district. The high prices prevailing during the war greatly stimulated the production of this important metal and entire districts along the coast and rivers west of Cartagena were depopulated, the people emigrating to the platinum district to wash for platinum gold.

A Strange Bird.

A tiny yellow bird in India makes a most curious nest. To escape snakes and monkeys this bird takes a dead leaf, flies up into a tree, and with a fibre for a thread and its bill for a needle sews the leaf to a green one hanging from the tree. The sides are sewed up, an opening to the nest thus formed being left at the top. The leaf, apparently hanging from a twig, would never be taken for a nest.

FIND LITTLE JOY IN MANTUA

American Soldiers in Italian City Cannot Be Accused of Indulging in Wild Revels.

Mantua, the metropolis of the province, is the center of the territory which encircles it in every direction. Hither flock the country folk from as far as five or six kilometers away, to gaze at the vino and stand around in the middle of the street, impeding the progress of the trolley car.

Equally fascinating to the American soldier is this city, with its car track, its air of cordial welcome, and its insalubrious climate, all of which combine to make him think more of the old home town than he did before he came here, says a writer in Italy Ambulance Service News. It is not difficult to find things to do, for one may always spend quite a while figuring out when he last saw the sun, or when he will see it again. And then one may also look at the lake.

But it is at night that Mantua discloses its true nature. With an electric light gleaming on every fourth block, and the comradely mist always with you, you can start out for a wild evening. There are plenty of places to go—all cafes. Variety is supplied by ordering beer in one place and wine in the next, until in a final burst of hilarity you end up with caffe-latte (the nadir of recklessness). By that time it is 10:30, the shutters are up, the waiter jingles a pocketful of centessimi and looks bored, the last patron has departed and the girl behind the bar seems to wonder what secret sorrow keeps you from home. So you depart—via the back door, harking to your footprints echoing upon the still night air. The carabinieri look at you suspiciously, a cat runs across the black street, and you are all, all alone in the wicked city. You yawn and go back to bed, filled with excitement and beer. One night nearer home.

Mantua has many attractive featvres, but the best one is the ten o'clock train to Milan.

WAS DICKENS' OFFICE BOY

And All He Remembers of Great Author Is the Peculiar Style of His Clothes.

The perseverance with which the unimportant lingers in memory is illustrated by the sum total of what the veteran porter who lately retired from his post at Temple Gate, London, can now recall about Charles Dickens. Back in the sixties this man, it is said, was office boy for the author, then editing "All the Year Round." All he remembers is that Dickens wore a "black velvet coat with big smoked-pearl buttons, and a queer waistcoat, and trousers of shepherd's plaid, the biggest check you ever saw, and a great big deerstalker hat, as they called them, and his hair all hanging down, wiry like." Also that once upon a time somebody asked him, "Is that a showman?" And he answered, "That's the great Charles Dickens." A vivid picture, and this is probably why, plaid trousers and all, it still sticks in the former office boy's memory; but one wishes he could now recall some of the other things he must have observed in his remarkable chief.

Forces of Bolshevists Are Growing Powerful.

The paper strength of the Red army of Soviet Russia has reached the figure of 4,000,000. However, its actual strength was about 3,000,000, although it was constantly on the increase. The difference of 1,000,000 represented approximately the number of draft evaders and deserters at large.

In spite of this apparently imposing number of slackers, the Red army is not to be under-estimated. It is not a haphazard collection of Red Guards bands. It is not a mob of youngsters. The Red army is well organized, well disciplined, well equipped and well officered. The soldiers who demoralized the front in 1917 by fraternization are not drafted into the Red army. Generally speaking those who participated in the war against Germany are not welcomed into the ranks.

When you ask a Bolshevik in Russia to point out the creative and not destructive accomplishments of the Soviet Government, you are apt to get such an answer as: "We have created the Red army which absorbs most of our energy. Give us peace and we will show you how we can build." It must be admitted that to keep an army of 3,000,000 supplied with abundant food, for that is what the Red army gets, and to maintain a system of transport reaching a front extending over enormous distances such as lie between the Archangel and Denikine or between the Ukrainian and Kolchak fronts, is a task which would tax even the resources of a tried old Government.

The soldiers of the Red army surprises one by their satisfied appearance. Of course, in order to keep the Red army satisfied the country is deprived of many necessities and is not wholly satisfied. The requisitions in the villages for the army are certainly not popular. Half of Soviet Russia's transportation system is devoted to the needs of the Red army.

A central commission to combat desertion has been formed in Moscow. In May, it organized a series of roundups of deserters throughout the country. At railway stations, on the streets of the cities and villages, dragnets were spread for Red army slackers. Military schools for officers have been established in Moscow and other places. The command of the Red army has almost passed from the hands of the old officers, although the latter are very much in demand as instructors and advisers. Thus, toward the end of May, a number of officers were graduated from the academy of the general staff of the Red army. The courses for infantry officers maintained by the Moscow Soviet are open only to members of the communist party or to Soviet supporters, who can produce recommendations from such members.

A tribute to the Red army has been paid by one of Kolchak's leading generals in a secret order issued by the commander of the Siberian western army, Lieut.-Gen. Khanzhin, under number O826. A copy of it fell into the hands of the Soviet troops when they captured a part of the 21st Tohelabinsk regiment with its staff. It reads, in part:

"Through all the actions of our enemies there runs the red thread of attack at whatever cost and in whatever circumstances, often reaching a degree of audacity. Similar daring should be our answer at every opportunity. Every blow should be answered by a blow. If strategically the Reds have no rear, which increases their bravado, actually they are very sensitive to surprise attacks and encirclements.

"But remembering the ability of the Reds to recuperate quickly after unsuccessful conflicts, I most insistently recommend sure, determined, even bold tactics aiming to smash the enemy and not to win territory, to place him in a position of death or surrender and not make him evacuate a sector.

"There is plenty of territory in the rear of the enemy, and his human reserves are great. We must strive to break up his military organization, to convince his soldiers that skill and not quantity is on our side.

"We witness a civil war in which, willingly or unwillingly, especially on the side of the Reds, the population of the war zone is taking a most active part. Hence the advantage of having the people's sympathy on our side is obvious."

Valuable Pearls Starving.

It is sad to think that at the present time, when pearls are so rapidly increasing in value, there are some perishing in the Louvre, says Tit-Bits.

Mme. Thiers bequeathed to that institution a marvellous pearl necklace, which within a few years fell a victim to the mysterious disease defined by experts as a form of starvation.

Pearls live by contact with humanity, and for this reason jewelers maintain that they should be worn on the bare skin. If the Louvre necklace could be worn for a time the pearls would recover their lustre. But, according to the will of Mme. Thiers, it must not be removed from its case, so the pearls are gradually becoming more unsightly and shrivelled.

Premiums for Marriage.

In one chemical factory in Switzerland, which is representative of other chemical and dye concerns, married men receive 10 per cent. more a week than single men engaged in the same occupation, and still above this married men receive fifty-four cents a week extra for each child under fifteen years of age.

Modern Printing.

A new form letter printing machine cuts paper fed from rolls into the proper sizes, uses three colors of ink when desired and automatically changes the names and addresses for each letter produced.

Miss Mary Macarthur, secretary of the British Women's Trade Union league, will represent the organized women of Great Britain at the National convention of the National Women's Trade Union league of America to be held in Philadelphia during June.

The teacher was teaching his class in a mental arithmetic lesson. After "tables" had been repeated he commenced giving a series of mental sums, and presently asked an intelligent little Scot:

Women in British Industries.

The vast extent to which British women replaced men in industry and commerce during the war is disclosed in a white paper just issued. It is estimated that the net increase in female workers employed outside their own homes was 1,200,000.

The number of females employed in industrial concerns and government establishments in April, 1918, were: Munitions, 701,000; other government work in industry, 774,000. The number of females employed as permanent work people in agriculture in July, 1914, was 80,000; in 1918 the number was 113,000.

LOOK FOR GRAVE AND GOLD

Two Reasons Which Actuate Explorers Searching Among Santa Barbara Channel Islands.

Again the rugged and little-frequented Santa Barbara channel islands are being explored for the burial spot of Juan Cabrillo, the intrepid Spaniard who visited the California coast in the sixteenth century. The search centers in San Miguel island, the property of J. P. Moore, a wealthy resident or Florida.

Cabrillo died on one of the islands, it appears reasonably certain, and San Miguel is generally believed to be the isle where he met death. One legend has it that Cabrillo died of a fever, another that he met a violent death at the hands of a warrior from one of the Indian tribes then inhabiting the channel islands.

He is said to have been secretly buried at night in a cave, in a spot inaccessible except at low tide.

Not all the romance that is associated with San Miguel grows out of the supposed tragic death. For generations Californians have heard of the fabulous sums of gold hidden there by sea rovers.

Treasure is said to have been buried on the isle by Sir Francis Drake, after he had stripped Spanish bullion-laden ships. Drake, so the legend runs, left hurriedly and neither returned nor gave a key to the secret cache.

Several of the Spanish and Mexican outlaws that overran southern California in the Spanish regime, and even after the Americans came, are said to have made the islands their meeting place and to have buried there a fortune in gold and silver coin.

Germany's Paper Yarn Industry.

The importance of the paper yarn industry, which has been greatly extended in Germany during the past year, is indicated by a statement in the Frankfurter Zeitung, quoted in Commerce Reports, to the effect that about 88,000,000 pounds are being manufactured annually. Manufacturing processes are constantly being improved and paper yarn can be used successfully in the manufacture of various fabrics and garments, excepting only body linen and the better sorts of overwear. Workmen's clothes, bed and table linen, curtains, sailcloth and imitation leather are among the articles that can now be made. In many fabrics, we read, the paper yarn is combined with wool, shoddy, cotton waste, etc., and the supply of fabrics for the clothing industry is thus enlarged. It is not to be supposed that all these articles will disappear in Germany upon the return of peace. The demands for them "will continue undiminished for some time, and some of them may retain their places in the market permanently. The weaving mills are now likewise more active. Army orders, as well as civilian purchases, have been frequent, and the auxiliary industries, including paper cutting and the fitting of paper fabrics, are better employed."

The use of paper yarn for sewing thread is also increasing, owing chiefly to the scarcity of cotton and linen thread. The preparation, twisting, etc., have been improved to such an extent that the paper threads are strong and durable enough to be used in the manufacture of coarse clothing and sacks.—Current Opinion.

Tarzan of The Apes Great Jungle Picture

Ferocious Natives and Funny Monkeys in Feature Picture.

Lions, Tigers, Snakes, and Crocodiles

"Tarzan of the Apes" was presented at Griffin's last night before an audience that occupied every seat in the auditorium and if the first night's reception is indicative of the public's attitude toward the play the feature is undisputably scheduled for two bumper audiences on Saturday. "Tarzan" not being screened tonight on account of a road attraction holding the boards. The story takes the form of a jungle melodrama, in which every possible variety of thrill is crowded into a Robinson Crusoe setting. It follows the adventures of a youth, who, when a baby, is stolen from his mother by a huge ape and brought up in the latter's native haunts. The boy is really the son of a nobleman in England and a faithful sailor, who has escaped from a band of Arab slavers, returns to England and endeavors to restore him to his rightful position as peer of a wealthy estate. He is foiled at every turn by the son of a barmaid, the false heir to the title, who is finally reduced to defeat. Meanwhile the real heir is still in the jungle, where he spends his time getting the rescuing parties, sent for his benefit, out of their difficulties. In one of these fights he saves a beautiful maiden from a ferocious lion, and a charming jungle romance quickly develops. The last reel closes with a sentimental fade-out in which the unwitting heir finds that ignorance is bliss and that there are many other compensations for a title and estate in England. Elmo Lincoln made a strikingly effective Tarzan, and Enid Markey as the heroine did one of the best characterizations of her screen career. The cast includes a number of other well-known actors, and was directed with a skill that emphasized the best points of the story. While the basic idea of the plot might not have been sponsored by Darwin, it is none the less absobing for all that, and forms the background for one of the most interesting and spectacular films in this season's output. The program is augmented by the exhibition of 5 other comedies and topicals and includes, the Screen Magazine, aptly termed the reel of knowledge, "Five to Five," a refined and funny Christie comedy, a beautiful colored Outing Chester Travelogue, and a Lyons-Moran comedy.

The Great Gamble

OTHERS OF MERIT

"LEAVE IT TO SUSAN" RICH IN HUMOR

Certainly Madge Kennedy's new picture "Leave it to Susan" which was screened at the Palace yesterday is not short of novelties. The piquant comedienne is seen wandering over the American desert, having been left behind when her train resumed its journey. She trudges through sand and sageshack. She is joined by a young man whom she vaguely remembers having seen on the train and his promise of protection does a great deal to reassure Susan. Soon, however, a quartet of hold-up men appear. Susan recognizes them as the fellows who robbed the train. At once her protector changes his tactics and becames one of them apparently. In reality he knows who Susan is and pretends that he is holding her for ransom. He agrees to share it with the bandits if they will permit him to send a message to Susan's father. This is done, the message at the same time telling the true situation. How he happens to be known to the capitalist and what happens when the rescuing party descends upon Susan adn saves her—all this comes out in the subsequent action. The greatest surprise in Susan's life is when she learns who her "Kidnapper" really happens to be. The opening chapter of Pathe's "The Great Gamble" serial is being shown on the same program and bids fair to be popular with Palace patrons. The British Canadian Pathe News and "Topic of the Days" wit of the World's press are also being exhibited on the same program.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Conner, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (6)

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 7.—Some polish that she was using suddenly taking fire resulted in the removal to the hospital of Miss Mary O'Grady, employed as a domestic at the residence of George Beacock, Buells street. To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

DEATH OF A FAMOUS DUCK

Peggy of Rouen, N. J., Laid 325 Eggs in a Single Year, and Was Fairly World's Champion.

The death of Peggy, the famous duck of Rouen, New Jersey, comes as a reminder to us that we would do well to follow the principles which guided the life of this excellent bird. Peggy was celebrated in two hemispheres as the champion egglayer of the world, the New York Evening Post states. Peggy, in one year laid as many as 325 eggs. Yet, celebrated as she was, noted wherever eggs were laid or scrambled, head of her glorious profession, what was her attitude after we entered the war? Did she rush into print, airing her opinion as to what the president ought to do? Not at all. Despite numerous tempting offers from fowl fashions and other magazines, she refrained from utterance and continued contributing her daily drop to national victory. Even when the Germans opened their recent peace drive Peggy did not turn hysterical and demand that they at once surrender all the Strassburg geese. She, still in silence, went on with her lay. It is related of her that on the morning of her demise she quietly produced an egg, and, indicating her satisfaction with a feeble quack, keeled over and [illegible]

Where Huns Were Inferior.

There is a noteworthy example of the preservation of valuable military secrets in the interesting article written by the secretary of the British Geographic society entitled "German War Maps and Surveys." British methods of survey and mapmaking were far superior to the enemy's, and one conspicuous success was scored in the scientific development of sound ranging for artillery. They used a self-recording apparatus, an ingenious and delicate piece of mechanism, which was used during the battle of Arras in April, 1917. The idea upon which it was based must have been known to a great many persons, both soldiers and civilians, but it never reached the enemy, though how much he desired to obtain it was revealed by Ludendorf's issue of an order in which he insisted upon the importance of capturing a set of these instruments. Until practically the end of the war German sound ranging was done with stop watches, a hopelessly crude and inaccurate arrangement in comparison with the scientific British system.—Indianapolis Star.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial?

Peps is the discovery!

Peps are little tablets, containing certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

FREE TRIAL Cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps, 50c. box.

MEANS EVERYTHING TO WORKING CLASS

No class of citizens is more vitally interested in the success of the Victory Loan than the workers. It just about means everything to them. They have acquired the satisfactory habit of getting the well filled pay envelope regularly. This is because business is good all along the line. The factories have all the orders they can fill. Times are good to-day. It would be a pity to spoil it.

Much of the present prosperity is owing to the fact that Canada is supplying an enormous quantity of her surplus products to countries across the sea. This market was made possible through the giving of credits to the purchasing countries. A portion of the proceeds of the last Victory Loan was devoted to this purpose. More money is needed now and the people must provide it, if they would keep prosperity here.

Great Britain and her Allies have more orders but are not yet in the position where they can pay cash. Canada can have these orders by extending the credits. The money will all be spent in the Dominion. The Victory Loan will provide for this purpose and the workers should subscribe liberally to it for their own profit and protection.

STANDARD RELIANCE SUIT

When the Assizes were opened at Picton by Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, Wednesday, there was only one civil action on the docket, that of C. F. Thompson, against G. M. Wright agent for the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation. The claim was $2,500, representing two purchasers ($2,000 ad $500) of the corporation stock made by Thompson with the corporation (H. Waddington, managing director), through Wright ,in respect of which Thompson had only received shares for $500. At the time of purchases, Wright had given Thompson agreements to sell the stock for, and pay the proceeds to him at any time; but the request to do so was only made after the winding-up order of the above corporation. The Chief Justice held that Mr. Wright at the time of the purchase, thought and had good reason to think the corporation was in a flourishing condition; that the request to sell came too late, as it was then out of Wright's power to implement his promise and that the action should therefore be dismissed. E. M. Young, Picton was for plaintiff and Major E. P. Brown, Toronto, for the defendant.

For Two Years He Couldn't Work

Has New Accepted a Position and Will Go to Work in a Few Days.

"Just give me Tanlac and you may have all the other medicines," said Robert M. Sexton, of 504 C. Avenue, East, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, while discussing his case, recently.

In relating his experience Mr. Sexton made the remarkable statement that a few bottles of Tanlac has done him more good than all other treatment and medicines he has taken in ten years combined. But let Mr. Sexton tell his own story. Here is his statement.

"At the time I began taking this Tanlac I had not been able to hit a lick of work in two long years, but I am now on my feet and am going to accept a position in just a few days. My stomach commenced troubling me about twelve years ago and although I just tried everything I kept getting worse until I had a complete nervous breakdown and got to where I was of little use to myself or anyone else. I suffered from indigestion after eating and the gas on my stomach made by heart palpitate frightfully. I could not rest or sleep at night and would often get up away in the night and walk about town until day.

"I was beginning to think there was no relief for me, but Tanlac is fast making a new man of me. I had taken but a few doses of this medicine until I began to straighten right up, and while it may sound unreasonable it's the truth, a few bottles has done me more good than everything else I have taken in ten years put together. I can now eat anything I want and have no more gas, bloating or palpitation of the heart. My nerves have quieted down and I can lie down and sleep like a child until morning. There's no getting around it, Tanlac is the grandest medicine I have ever seen or heard of and it is nothing less than remarkable how it has brought me out in so short a time."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vine, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

What Are "Young Mountains"?

Mountains are wrinkles of the earth's crust, caused by its settling on the cooling and contracting interior. They have been formed slowly and by successive uplifts. From the very first the rising land is attacked by the agents of denudation (i.e., laying bare the rocks through the action of water and the atmosphere); but this attack increases as the mountains grow higher. Glaciers extend down the valleys; streams cut gorges across the ridges, and the durable rocks are etched out into ridges and peaks, while the weak ones are cut away, forming valleys and passes. In this stage the surface is so irregular that the mountains are unsuited for human habitation. Such mountains, of which the Rockies, the Andes, the Alps, and the Himalayas are examples, are called "young mountain." When the uplift finally ceases the denudation continues to broaden the valleys and lower the peaks and ridges; the glaciers disappear, and in time even the highest peaks may come below the timber line. Such mountains, which have lost the ruggedness of youth, may be called "mature." The Appalachians and the mountains of New England, Norway, and Scotland are examples. Their slopes are forested and their valleys tilled. Further lowering reduces the mountains to a series of low, rolling hills, and sometimes to a surface, almost as level as a plain (called a "peneplain," almost plain). The mountains are then "old," and are, like plains, adapted to dense settlement. New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington are situated on such old, worn-down mountains. These ancient mountains, known as the Piedmont belt, extend east of the Appalachians, from New England to Alabama. In Ontario we have no such worn-down mountains, unless it be the Muskoka district, but this has rather been a plateau than a mountain region. All the mountains of Eastern Canada are old mountains. Nova Scotia is almost wholly the worn-down extremity of the old Eastern mountain system of America.

The Regeneration of West Africa

SOME years ago, an Englishman expressed in writing a very prevalent opinion of his countrymen—that Britons were in the habit of making the peoples of the new countries which they annexed give up their normal ways of life, and yet took no real pains to teach those natives better ways. That was doubtless true of a generation ago; but it cannot fairly be alleged against the present one. No better illustration of the change is to be adduced than West Africa, although similar conditions exist throughout the entire African continent, in British India, and elsewhere, the variations in local circumstances being duly considered.

West Africa is a territory so great in area, and is so well populated, as to rival many, if not most, of the European states. Since Great Britain and France are working together in amicable harmony all through this great region, it seems as if one might safely include in a brief study of the material, industrial, social, and educational development a large part of the western Sahara, all of the Gold Coast, and continue downward to the southern boundary of the Kameruns. By the terms of the recent convention between Great Britain and France, endorsed by the allies, France is the mandatory for Togoland and the whole of the Kameruns.

The exact area, in square miles, is not important; nor is the precise population (even if it were possible to give it), for we are primarily interested in the manner of education and the ways followed in training the natives to appreciate the advantages of the systems presented by the European governors and commercialists in social and domestic devices. How they, the natives, savages but a short time ago, can—without sacrificing their own dignity and independence—co-operate with the British, French, and Belgians in bearing the burdens entailed by progress, is a matter worthy of study.

It was the custom in former times to hide from the natives, as much as possible, the true value of their own products, and to enhance in questionable way the actual worth of the articles which strangers offered in exchange. By such methods, the process of hand-to-hand barter had all the advantage for the foreign trader and little or no commensurate benefit for the native.

During the early days and continuing on into the transition period of perhaps two or three decades ago, even these questionable methods can hardly be said to have entailed serious hardship upon the natives, because the fabrics and gewgaws which were offered them in barter for things which had cost practically no labor did have, in their uneducated opinion, values that were not at all measured by intrinsic worth.

But in the matter of education, there was a most unfair attitude taken by the first officials and merchants. Too often, these classes openly opposed all efforts of missionaries and lay instructors; or, if this statement seems too hard, it was true that an overwhelming percentage of officials and traders did contend that the religious teachers should restrict their efforts because practical knowledge must inevitably make for diminution of trade profits.

A great change has come over the whole of West Africa, including Liberia and the Belgian Congo. The change began with a broadening of the scope of education. At first this was noticeable in the efforts made by missionaries, with the grudging consent of their home societies and their meagre financial assistance, as against the hot disapproval of government officials and merchants, who still contended that general education would "spoil trade." But the effort was persisted in to devise alphabets with which to fix the legends of the natives in a permanent form, and also to permit religious books as well as secular literature being placed in the hands of the natives so that rudimentary and advanced education might be passed to a stage beyond that of oral and mere memorizing work.

The change of heart as to education with foreign officials, merchants, This is in happy contrast with the opposition displayed a decade or so ago. Native schools of the primary, middle, and higher grades are scattered all over the various colonies, while even a university for advanced students is not lacking. Competent natives are, too, sent to Europe for special education — mainly in theology for ordination to the clergy—and in some cases for consecration as bishops, for numerous dioceses are in charge of bishops either of the Anglican or the Roman Catholic church. Natives on boards of civil administration are made welcome as soon as they display ability, and African schoolmasters and lawyers are frequently in demand.

The general consequence is that West Africa, from Cape Verde into the very heart of "The Dark Continent," holds promise — and, indeed more than promise—of becoming a group of self-governing provinces, allied with the powerful states of Europe.

Vessels for England.

Since the Germans surrendered their merchant ships to the allies, at least one hundred of these steamers have arrived at Firth of Forth ports and have been distributed to various British firms at London, Plymouth, Cardiff and Barry, for management. These vessels represent approximately 200,000 registered tons.

The smallest known race is that of the Bushmen of southern Africa, the mean height being 4 feet 3½ inches.

Sir Robert Horne Makes Reputation in England As Minister of Labor

IN the session of the British Parliament just ended two members have created big reputations for themselves. They stand out head and shoulders above their fellows.

One is Sir Robert Horne, the Labor Minister, who has stepped without any apparent effort into the very front rank of parliamentarians, and whose abilities as an administrator are second to none in the Government.

He gave up £8,000 a year at the Scottish Bar to become a member of the Government at £2,000 a year. He first wooed and then won the confidence of Labor in hundreds of conferences and personal interviews, and lately has been responsible for the firm handling of the Labor situation by the Government. He has the well-deserved nickname of "Hail, Smiling Horne."

The other success of the session is an old member in a new coat—Lord Robert Cecil, who since his return from the Paris Conference has added daily to his reputation.

He is the mystery man of Parliament. Once looked on as the type of Tory aristocrat in politics, he now seems ready to out-do the democrats in democracy. He has a large band of enthusiastic young Unionist followers. The Labor men hail him as one after their own heart. Which way will he turn? What party will he lead? No one but himself knows. His mind plans some destiny while men are wondering.

Two other figures have marched with some degree of distinction across the Parliamentary page. Sir Donald Maclean, the leader of the lone band of Independent Liberals, is the Admirable Crichton of politics, compelled by the scarcity of his followers to speak on every subject. And he does it at times so brilliantly that he has given a full heart of hope to a party that no longer desires the return of Mr. Asquith to lead it.

Mr. Clynes has achieved distinction as a Labor member. He is easily the best of that party. Honorable mention must be made also of Sir L. Worthington Evans for his work at the Pensions Ministry; of Sir Tudor Walters and Sir Kingsley Wood for their work on housing; of Mr. J. S. Holmes for his able exhortations on finance and economy; of Mr. Kennedy Jones for his work on London traffic and other matters; of Mr. Godfrey Locker Lampson for his grapple with income tax problems; of Mr. McCurdy for knowing something about food control; and of the Geddes brothers for knowing all about everything.

Finally, after diligent search, there may be discovered on the back benches two modest new members out of all the hundreds arriving full of hope last January who deserve encouragement, namely, Capt. Elliot, a doctor who has dissected politics with considerable skill, and Sir Park Goff, the most accomplished traveler in the British House of Commons, who told his fellow members that most of them were uncertain whether Budapest was an Indian god or a new plague.—London Daily Mail.

"Pubs" To Be Improved.

Better public houses, an improved tone for saloons, is the newly announced policy of the British liquor trade.

Rear Admiral Sir Reginald Hall, a member of Parliament, who was recently elected to the directorate of one of the leading brewing companies of the kingdom, said that representatives of all sections of the trade had drawn up a bill embodying such principles as promotion of sobriety, restriction of drunkenness, reduction of the number of licenses where they are excessive and enlargement of premises so as to provide greater opportunities for social amenities.

"Recreation, including reading rooms, facilities for writing, music and games, should be provided," Admiral Hall said. The entry into the trade of those who would set up and maintain a high social standard should be encouraged to the exclusion of those who might bring discredit on the industry.

Lady Arabella Stuart.

The history of Lady Arabella Stuart was a succession of romantic incidents and disasters. She was the daughter of Charles Stuart, Earl of Lennox, and being in the line of succession to the throne, was the object of jealous care by Queen Elizabeth, who attempted to marry her off to some European prince, some of whom believed that the line of succession to the throne, says an exchange. When she was 33 she married William Seymour, son of Lord Beauchamp. Her marriage had been secret, and when Elizabeth heard of it she had Seymour committed to the tower, while Arabella was detained as a prisoner in the house of Sir Thomas Parry. Both lovers escaped, but poor Arabella was caught and brought back and placed in the tower, where she remained until her death in 1615.

Finland and Australia.

Finland has discovered Australia, and it is hoped that the Commonwealth will soon recognize commercially the enterprising new republic. Trade relations with Australia are being sought, and Finland will be glad to exchange cream separators and safety matches, paper pulp and timber for a little of Australia's surplus meat and wheat. The consul of the new republic has established his headquarters in Sydney, New South Wales, and has already obtained excellent publicity in the shape of press interviews. Finland must surely have been studying American methods of production.

ENGLISH ADVERTISING.

War's Aftermath as Found in the Newspapers.

When an Englishman wishes to focus public attention upon his pet schemes; when he wants to start a new religion or propagate an old one; when he wants money or a new collie pup, he advertises in the columns of his favorite newspaper. There is a wealth of human interest in those advertising columns of the great British dailies. None of the usual British reticence is there. The lady of quality and the charwoman, the jobless and the wealthy, all unite in the effort to gain the public eye and ear.

House-hunting also, is done through the advertising columns. There is more than a dash of the Canadian verbal comments on May 1, visible in some of the efforts to attract attention. The following is a typical example:

Un-British cruelty — No medium-size houses to let, outskirts London, for invalid, disabled, or war-strained gentle-born. Did all considerate landlords die on Aug. 4, 1914? Will noble survivors (if any) kindly reply, with particulars. "Invalid," Box F. 141, the Times.

The propaganda "ad" is also common. Religious subjects occur frequently, and the opponents of vivisection also lose no opportunity to keep their hobby before the public. An example of the religious appeal follows:

"What shall it profit a nation if it win a great war and lose its own soul? Send 1½d for a copy of a leaflet bearing this title to A. E. McAdam, 45 Leepark, S.E. 3."

Every housemaid airs her secret aspirations to ladyship. In her search for employment she is never a "woman." A "lady" wishes to undertake a "post" as "Cook general" and she volunteers the rather surprising information that she is thoroughly "domesticated." For this work she "requires" wages of £35 to £40 or, approximately, $144 to $180 for the year.

Householders in the best parts of London, on the other hand, reveal to the world the innermost secrets of their menage. One may readily ascertain how many maids and menservants are maintained, the number of appetites that must be satisfied, the frequency of guests and similar matters. The English servant is also cautious to a degree, for many prospective employers take pains to forewarn applicants that there are "no knives or boots," and often that there are no coal fires, that parlor and scullery maids are kept and that charwomen are employed twice weekly, etc.

References are very much more important than in America. Practically no position is open except to those who can furnish "characters." It is the same whether the place demands a man with a salary of many hundreds or a shopgirl with a guinea a week.

Until the expiration of the war the demand for "Lady Shorthand-Typists" was heavy and a system of yearly or half-yearly bonuses was instituted. The requirements would be extraordinary in this country, and particularly at the low wages of $13.50 in the following offer:

"Merchant's Office — Shorthand typist (lady) required in merchant's office. Permanent position. French, Spanish essential. Salary £3 week; bonus half-yearly. Hours 9.30 to 6. Wire, stating age, experience, speeds, to Pim, 19, Bury street, E.C. 3."

For lesser accomplishments the rate falls to £2 and £2 10s.

Another aftermath of the war is visible in the many appeals for aid. The personal columns often reveal the tragedies of the Flanders Field or of the lone watches in the North Sea, or of the "spurlos versenkt" policy. There are the minor tragedies of the demobilized and crippled soldier who cannot find employment, of the men who are no longer fit for their trades, and of many others. There are also the gloomy, despairing appeals such as this one:

"Lady, with two young children left penniless under most tragic circumstances, implores help. Particulars and references. Box G 26, the Times."

Another influence of the war is apparent in a great many "ads." In two or three inches of a column it is possible to find men who wish to go to South Angola or Demerara or New South Wales, and the established colonies like India and South Africa also furnish much desired fields. These efforts to obtain employment reflect the industrial status of the mother country at this time, because most of those men who wish to emigrate are discharged officers with records of capable and efficient service, the class of men that seldom has difficulty in finding employment at home.

Measuring the Earth.

An effort is being made to induce the Commonwealth and its six states to combine to provide £3,000 for measuring the earth, that is, for obtaining an accurate determination of Australian longitude by means of wireless signals sent out from Aden and Darien (Panama) to Sydney, New South Wales, and Greenwich. Dr. J. M. Baldwin, Victorian Government astronomer, says that in order to measure the earth it is necessary to have two wireless stations at places called A and B. The exact local time at each station having been observed by the stars a series of wireless signals is sent from a third station C and the difference in times of reception of the signals at A and B enable the determining of the longitude in hours, minutes and seconds, which can be easily worked out as degrees, minutes and seconds. Similar experiments in 1913 showed that the meridian of longitude at Washington was one-twentieth of a second out and the imaginary line had to be moved about fifty feet.

A New Thermometer.

For industries where temperature records are of value an inventor has devised a registering thermometer that can be connected to and operated by an alarm clock.

HOW LIGHT WORKS TO INCREASE SALES

IN a well-lighted shop customers make their purchases quickly and with certainty. People like to trade where there's plenty of light.

A scientifically illuminated shop helps to make satisfied patrons. It doesn't experience the wrath of customers who return goods with the explanation that "it doesn't look the same in daylight."

Better illumination shows its real value in the daily sales record.

Finding the best light sometimes puzzles the merchant. But experiments are no longer necessary. Experts of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario have found the best lamps for store illumination—HYDRO Gas Filled Lamps. These lamps give a brilliant light closely resembling daylight. This fact alone makes them desirable for store illumination. HYDRO Gas Filled Lamps are truly economical. Ask the Hydro Shop for a demonstration.

CHANGING THEIR NAMES.

New Fad Has Developed In England In Recent Years.

A name to Englishmen had so little in it that until the outbreak of the war a man could call himself anything he liked without consulting the law. A privilege which enabled him to indulge his fancy for a resounding name or to get rid of an ugly patronymic like Bugg, which it is recorded was exchanged by a saloon-keeper for a combination of the old English names Norfolk-Howard.

During the last four years alone the following names have been abandoned: Baggs, Buggy, Gotobed, Onions, Outlaw, Pickles, Scragg and Tart.

When the war broke out there was a rush among people who bore German names to change them, but in 1914 the Defence of the Realm Act stopped enemy aliens from doing so, but British subjects were still permitted to make a change, and they have done so ever since, and continue to do so. Up to date over 2,000 changes of enemy surnames have taken place since the war broke out.

The first foreign surname changed after the war broke out was that of a Liverpool man, who changed his Rosenheim to Rose on August 17, 1914, and by the end of the month 64 similar names were changed. The sinking of the Lusitania was followed by an increase in changes to 118 and 132 in May and June, 1915. After this the figures dropped until January, 1919, when the number rose to 80, which has been the average figure for this year.

A list issued by the British Empire Union gives a number of the changes, and it is not difficult to trace the different principles on which the changes have been effected. In many cases there have been direct translations, such as Konig into King, Muller into Miller, Schloss into Castle and Schneidner into Taylor. Sometimes the translation has been indirect, such as Steinthal into Petrie, through "petros," the Greek word for Stone, and Leinenweber into Webster, which is the Scots for weaver.

A very popular form of change has been the adoption of the initial letter, especially Gee, Kay and Kaye, for unpronounceable polysyllables. Thus we can understand that Mr. Gunzenhauser may have been known by his friends for years as Mr. Gee, and Mr. Kronenberger as Mr. Kay. In other cases the first syllable has been adopted, such as Hittbrecht into Hill, or it has been the last syllable, such as Hansmann into Mann.

In the process of change a great many famous Teutonic names have disappeared, notably those of Bach, Handel, Hindenburg, Koch, Mendelssohn, Schubert, Schumann and Wagner. A number of celebrated British names have been utilized, such as Burns, Gainsborough, Raeburn, Scott, Shelly, Sheridan and Wallace. Among the notable titles adopted as surnames are those of Airlie, Beresford, Burnham, Soventry, Curzon, French, Milner, Ruthven, Rutland, Sheffield and Wentworth.

A very curious aspect of the question is in the fact that different members of the same family, living sometimes in the same house, have changed their names at different periods during the war. Still more curious is the change of the same name by people of the same address into different names. In one case a Mr. Meissenheim became Mason and another Homer.

An Indian Motor Road.

Although the 69-mile road which climbs from the plains of India to the summer resort at Shillong, some 5,000 feet above sea level, is as hard a road for automobiles as one would be likely anywhere to encounter, precautions have been taken that make it probably as safe a road for motorists as any in the world. The road is one of many a twist and turn, steadily climbing at a steep gradient, and with many a blind curve. To make it safe for traffic has required unusual precautions both in making road rules and in securing their proper observance. A schedule has been arranged for up and down cars, and gates which bar the road when not lifted are placed at intervals, while roadside admonitions, impressively worded so that those who ride may read, are a frequent part of the landscape. During the day the road is used chiefly for automobile traffic, an indication, by the way, of how rapidly motor cars are taking the place of the old-fashioned bullock and camel carts and the one or two-horse tonga which not long ago were the only means of transportation on the Indian highways. A picturesque feature of the road, for that matter, is the sight of the bullock carts which have halted at the sidings and are waiting for the coming of night to continue their journey.

The Shah Travels.

The Shah of Persia is on his travels. London will see him and keep him, apparently, for some little time. Europe has memories of the peregrinations of other shahs. They are quaint memories, some of them. There was Nasr-ed-Din, in 1873, and there was Ahmed Mirza, many years later. There would have been a visit, in 1894, on the part of Nasr-ed-Din, but for a Brussels journalist. It happened that, on the Shah's traveling program becoming known, a Brussels daily published an article which seemed to prognosticate a cool welcome in Belgium. The Minister of Justice of the period thought fit to give the article the publicity of judicial proceedings. The writer was summoned before a Brabant tribunal, but he was exonerated. But the verdict had the immediate effect of keeping Nasr-ed-Din at home in Teheran.

Bulls.

A correspondent of an English paper recently indulged in this bull: "Lest a whisper of the hidden hand be heard—." Was it an English clergyman who said to his congregation, "Brethren, the muddy pool of politics was the rock on which I split"?

Breakfast Food.

"What kind of breakfast food have you?" the dyspeptic traveling salesman asked the rural waitress. "We've got all the reg'lar kinds," said she, "ham and eggs, fried steak, fried bacon, griddle cakes, doughnuts an' apple pie. What'll it be?"

WIVES NOT PROTECTED.

Bigamy Is Increasing Rapidly In Great Britain.

Increase in bigamous marriages throughout the United Kingdom, much more pronounced since the end of the war, is causing grave concern and there is a growing disposition to treat bigamy as a venial offence.

Sir Bernard Mallet, the registrar general, is credited with the statement that English marriage laws afford less security against bigamy than the laws of almost any other civilised state. His department has prepared proposals for their amendment, but nothing has been done to carry them into effect. A new act of Parliament is necessary, and Sir Bernard suggests as a preliminary that some plan be outlined by which accurate information concerning the principals in a proposed marriage may be obtained by the competent authorities before the ceremony can be performed.

For marriage by license in England it is required that both parties make solemn declaration that they know of no impediment to this union, that they have resided for fifteen days in the district and, if they are minors, the consent of guardian or parents has been obtained. But no solemn declaration is required for such material particulars as name, condition as to marriage, age, rank and residence.

Shakespeare's Will.

We are indebted to an English publication for a copy of the last will and testament of the late William Shakespeare, says the Thrift Magazine. In the course of this document, we observe the following sentence: "I gyve onto my wief my second best bed with the furniture."

We have no desire to find fault with the successful poet and dramatist of Stratford for this apparent discrimination against the Widow Shakespeare. What disposition he made of his first best bed is a matter that is not revealed by the copy of the will of the versatile author whose last testament is reported in the columns of our alert London contemporary. However, we don't think Mr. S. showed just the right spirit in gyveing onto his wief his second best bed. O, why did he not gyve unto her his first bed, or his tee potte or his punche bole with the gilt butter-flyes, or his favorytte wigge, or his safety razor, or fountain penne, or bicycle—anything, in fact, but his second best bed.

No doubt Mr. Shakespeare had gone to bed with his boots on many a Saturday night in that very second best bed and yet, hallowed as it was by such memories, one cannot but feel that the widow was treated unfairly. Perhaps Will's folks influenced him. As a co-writer we have only the highest regard and esteem for him. But we don't think he acted right about friend wief.

London-Paris Air "Express."

Those who think there is any pause in the great work of conquering the air simply because transoceanic flights and projected flights no longer supply columns of "copy" to the daily papers are greatly mistaken. With a celerity and a silence wholly appropriate, the airplane and the airships are steadily making good their position in the great transportation service of the world. There is, for instance, a decided air of "settlement," in the recent almost routine account which appeared in the London Times of the air service between London and Paris. Three flying "expresses" instead of the normal two, declared the Times, were required on a certain day to deal with the loads presented for despatch by the London-Paris air service. One carrying two passengers and a quantity of parcels left London at 12.20 p.m. and reached Paris at 2.55 p.m. From Paris the ordinary scheduled machine left at 12.30 p.m. and a relief machine at 12.40 p.m., each carrying passengers and parcels—the latter including an urgent consignment of millinery from a Paris costumier to a leading West End shop. Both these "expresses" ran through to time, one landing at Hounslow at 3.10 p.m. and the other at 3.20 p.m. London-Paris air service has already, it would seem, almost reached the point where it is taken for granted.

The Government of Nauru.

Nauru has declared overwhelmingly by ballot for British rule. The importance of the decision does not rest on the size of this former German possession—it is about six miles long by two and a half miles wide. Nor is the population so dense as to deserve attention, there being 1,250 Nauruans and 300 Kanakas. Nauru, moreover, does not offer climatic attractions, as it is a few degrees south of the equator and is subject to terrific heat. The secret of Nauru is its immense deposits of phosphates which lie upon a rough coral floor, and are so absorbant that ten inches of rain will vanish almost instantly, making the distillation of sea water necessary. Fortunately for Nauru's hopes, the Peace Conference has decided that Britain, Australia and New Zealand shall administer it by mandate.

Canadian Writer Honored.

His Majesty the King has graciously accepted a copy of "The Maple Leaf's Red Cross," by Mary MacLeod Moore. Their Majesties have shown a keen interest in the work of the society and are well posted in its activities. On one occasion when visiting a large military hospital the Queen spoke to a Canadian soldier and asked if he had a Red Cross visitor, as she knew that through the Information Bureau, under Lady Drummond, all sick and wounded soldiers were visited and cared for. The King, it will be remembered, lately co-operated with the Red Cross in giving Bushey Lodge and Hospital for the use of the ailing children of London.

King George has traveled more widely than any other king who ever occupied the British throne.

King George Was Trained Like Any Other Midshipman Who Enters British Navy

THE navy had advanced a good deal since King George began his nautical experiences, thirty years earlier. King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, showed his practical appreciation of the value of a sea training when he decided to put both his sons into the navy. Possibly he was influenced in this decision by a recollection of what he himself had missed. It is true that among the most popular pictures of King Edward as a small boy were those showing him in a sailor dress, and even something approaching the dress of a midshipman, but as a matter of fact he never served in the navy or received any other nautical instruction than that he derived from the sailors when on board the royal yacht.

In 1878, when the time came for King Edward's sons, Prince Albert and Prince George, to join the navy, the training of cadets was entirely carried out on board the old hulk Britannia, moored off Dartmouth. After nearly two years there, the princes embarked in the Bacchante, Captain Lord Charles Scott, which made prolonged cruises for three years, including a voyage around the world. After their return Prince Albert, who was not intended to follow the naval career, left the service for Cambridge University, but his younger brother was appointed a midshipman of the Canada, corvette, in which he visited Canada in 1883. In the following year he became a sub-lieutenant and underwent courses of instruction at Greenwich and Portsmouth, and, having passed the usual examinations with credit, he obtained his lieutenant's commission on October 8, 1885. The greater part of the next two years was spent on the Mediterranean station, first on the Thunderer, a little later on the Dreadnought, and afterward on the Alexandra, which was then the flagship of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, at that time better known as the Duke of Edinburgh. His next appointment was to the Northumberland, in the Channel, and then, in 1889, he received his first independent command, torpedo boat No. 79.

It was while in command of this boat that Prince George had an opportunity of displaying his professional knowledge and the enthusiasm for which he was noted. While with another torpedo boat reconnoitring off an Irish harbor, during manoeuvres, his consort broke down, and after a vain attempt to get her into harbor because of the tow rope breaking Prince George returned to his base and reported the facts. Other vessels were there and the prince had been up all night, but so keen was his desire to finish the job that he himself obtained a brand new hemp hawser and went back to rescue his friend, which he did, and towed him safely home. A flag officer present said it was a smart piece of seamanship, which would have done credit to an officer with a far wider experience of such work than the prince had then enjoyed.

A further exhibition of his close working knowledge of the navy was afforded when he received command of the gunboat Thrush at the age of twenty-five, and after nearly thirteen years' service. Many stories are told about the King at this period, all of which indicate his professional capacity and his energy and knowledge of handling men. It was after his return home from his cruise in this little gunboat that he was promoted to commander, on August 24, 1891. In the following year he commissioned the new cruiser Melampus, of 3,400 tons, for service in the naval manoeuvres. This command, however, lasted for only two months. The death of his elder brother, Prince Albert, Duke of Clarence, had brought him into the direct line of succession to the throne. After his marriage, in 1893, to his cousin, Princess Mary of Teck, he only served once afloat. This was in 1898, when as a captain he commanded the cruiser Crescent for a short period. He has, however, made frequent overseas voyages since that time, the chief of which were in the Ophir, to the British overseas dominions, in 1901; in the Indomitable, to Canada, in 1908, and in the Medina, for the Durbar in India, in 1911-12.

Both in regard to his training and in his promotions King George closely followed the routine of the navy. He was thirty-five years old before he became a rear-admiral, whereas Sir David Beatty, for instance, was thirty-eight. In the Britannia the King and his brother were treated like all other cadets, and later in the fleet he served in all the grades below flag rank and fulfilled every duty required of the naval officer of his time. It was owing to this judicious policy that the King became so keenly interested in his profession. His comrades were men of his own age and outlook, instead of being older and of another school as would have been the case had his advance been accelerated because of his royal birth. In a way, too, it was especially fortunate that at a time when a great war was being waged in which the struggle at sea was all-important, Britain's King should have been possessed of the ability and experience necessary to understand, from the point of view of a naval officer, the various changes in the situation afloat.

Japan's Population.

Until a few years ago the rate of increase in the population of Japan was a little more than 500,000, but last year's increase is put at close to 800,000.

Our Nerves Are Electric Systems

THAT nerve energy is simple electricity is a belief now held by many physiologists. Their idea is that the brain is the central power station of an electric system that has for its main transmission line the spinal cord, and for its subsidiary wires, the nerves.

By this means the brain directs and controls all the activities of the body, just as an ordinary power station operates the electric lights, the street cars, and the innumerable machines and mechanical contrivances of a city.

But the electrical system of a human being is far more complex than that of a city. It has a much greater variety of duties to perform, and it is vastly more efficient.

One method of generating electricity is by burning coal. Part of the heat hereby obtained is converted into electricity by means of a dynamo, the phenomenon representing merely the transformation of one kind of energy into another. To utilize it for mechanical purposes a motor is employed.

In your own body the fuel is the food you eat, which is chemically burned, producing heat. A large part of this heat (according to the theory here quoted) is converted into electricity, which is stored for use as it may be required.

One naturally asks, what part of the brain generates the electricity, acting as a dynamo? What part serves as a motor? And where is the electricity stored?

Nobody can answer these questions. The brain is still a profound mystery tothe physiologist, who has managed to find out only a few things about it. He can point out certain "motor areas" on its surface, which control movements of various parts of the body—as, for instance, the big toe, which is wiggled in response to orders from the middle of the top of the cerebrum. He will tell you that the "cerebellum"—a small secondary brain, located behind the ears—has for one of its functions the co-ordinating of muscular efforts. When it comes to considering the business of the "medulla oblongata," which is a great enlargement of the upper end of the spinal cord, just below the brain, he is pretty much in the dark.

There must be a motor somewhere, to drive the machinery of the body. There is the blood to be kept continually circulating through many miles of veins and arteries, and, to accomplish this, power must be applied to the pump which we call the heart. Power must be available for use by the external muscles, and for many other purposes.

Your nervous system is vastly more complex than you probably imagine. Distributed on the spinal cord and along the important nerves throughout the body are knots of brain stuff called "ganglia." These are the subsidiary stations of your electrical system, and through them the activities of the various parts of your body are directed and controlled.

The system is a veritable maze of "wires" extending through every part of your body. Look at the palm of your hand, and observe the wonderfully elaborate arrangement of ridges with which it is covered in curiously convoluted patterns. Each of these ridges is merely a roof to protect a row of tiny nerve-ends. Beneath the outer skin of your palm are hundreds of thousands of these nerve-ends, and the arrangement of their rows is marked by the ridges. The same remark applies to the similar ridges that, in equally complex patterns, cover the sole of your foot.

These are nerves of touch. Suppose that the end of your finger comes into contact with something hot enough to burn. The finger instantly signals to the brain, "Something painful has touched me!" The brain signals back, "Pull your finger away!"

The order, of course, is promptly obeyed. But in the meantime, your finger may be burned badly enough to blister; for it takes an appreciable time to send an alarm to the central power station and get an answer back.

A familiar illustration of this is afforded in operating a typewriter. You know that you are going to strike a wrong key, but you cannot get quickly enough from your brain the order to your finger not to strike it, and so you have a letter to rub out.

Curiously enough, the first hint that nerve energy might be electrical was obtained through observation of a fish—the so-called "torpedo ray," which looks like a magnified skate, and carries an elaborate equipment for generating and storing electricity. So formidable are the thunderbolts with which it is armed that a man who incautiously touches a fresh-caught specimen is liable to be knocked down.

The electrical equipment of the torpedo ray is far more efficient than any constructed by human hands, delivering a much greater amount of electricity in proportion to the size of the apparatus and quantity of fuel (represented by food in the fish's case) consumed.

According to the theory here set forth, the torpedo ray offers merely an illustration of electrical phenomena which are, in all essential respects, reproduced in a human being, though less open to ready observation.

The cotton spinning industry in Japan is regarded by many to be as important commercially as the silk industry. The number of cotton spinning mills increased from 153 in 1909 to 177 in 1918.

ROMANCE OF OIL.

Has Been Used in the Intrigue of Mexico.

The romance of Mexican oil is one of the most interesting chapters of industrial history, but the romance of Mexican oil propaganda is even more fascinating, says P. Beckwith Davis in Leslie's. It is a romance full of intrigue, trickery, deceit, the confusion of statesmen, the browbeating of officials, and, alas, touched here and there with tragedy with the stories of brave men shot down in ambush, robbed of everything they possessed, and either left to make their uncharted way through the jungle, naked to the brush and insects of tropical swamps, or their bodies left stark in the forests for the beasts to prey on and the purifying buzzard to clean.

But it will come as a shock to most people to know that the propaganda has been one-sided, and the side that has made use of this lever on public opinion to shift the great responsibility of murder, theft and political trickery from its shoulders has been the Mexican side. The American public has been deceived. Americans have been the victims. The bodies left to rot in the steaming swamps have been the bodies of American citizens. The statesmen who have the wool pulled over their eyes and have been despoiled of their property have been those whose rights it was the duty of the United States Government to protect in whatever part of the world they were, for they were citizens of the great republic, who had gone into Mexico in search of oil, needed by their country, the development of which had resulted in untold benefit to Mexico herself.

The Mexican oil propaganda began in 1911, when Porfirio Diaz, his star waning and with the wolves of revolt close on his heels, raised the cry that the Standard Oil was backing Madero with oil money. This was the birth of the Romance of Mexican Oil Propaganda. Diaz could explain the Madero successes only by exposing the dry-rot of his system, and to avoid this confession he and his supporters filled the Mexican, British and American newspapers with accusations against the Standard Oil, or Waters-Pierce Company, charging that the company was furnishing arms, munitions and vast sums of money to the Maderistas.

The object of Diaz was, of course, to discredit Madero in the eyes of the American public, to shift the responsibility for the failure to suppress the revolution from his own shoulders to the oil company. Madero won, but this first blast of oil propaganda also won, and its victory was more enduring than Madero's. So successful was this initial use of oil propaganda that the Senate of the United States appointed a committee to investigate the charges, and after numerous hearings and the testimony of many witnesses which filled 400 pages, this committee developed the incontrovertible fact that the charges were utterly unfounded.

In spite of the facts that this investigation disclosed, in spite of the proved falsity of the charge, and in the face of the established fact that intereference with Mexico's internal affairs would be the worst possible policy for the oil companies to pursue, the impression that Mexican revolution is the story of oil, that oil influence is back of all the trouble in Mexico, is still abroad and is played upon by every amateur journalistic and reformed expert, and by every Mexican Government that needs something on which to blame its own ineptitude, misfortune or failures.

Liberia.

Liberia is a negro republic on the west coast of Africa, founded in 1820 by liberated American slaves under the auspices of the American Colonization Society, and recognized as an independent state in 1847. It has an area of 35,000 square miles, with a population of 2,000,000. The climate is tropical; the chief crop is coffee; other exports are palm oil, ground nuts, caoutchouc and ivory. The climate is very unhealthy for Europeans. British weights, measures and money are mostly used. The English language is used among the governing class, and schools and churches are amply provided, and civilization is making rapid strides among the natives. The population consists of some 60,000 immigrants from the United States and their descendants and 2,000,000 natives. The capital is Monrovia and the government is a republic modeled after that of the United States.

Had Some Merit.

A well-known clergyman in Liverpool used to tell a story of a fishing experience he had in Shetland. He was out fishing for sea trout, accompanied by a local youth, when his foot slipped on a stone and he overbalanced. As he was encumbered with heavy waders, which quickly filled with water, he was in considerable danger of drowning, but after a good deal of struggling he managed at last to reach safety, though in a very exhausted condition. When he managed to recover his breath, he said very reproachfully to the youth, who had stood stolidly all the time watching him, "I noticed you never tried to help me." "Na," came the reply, "but it wasna because I wasna thinkin' o't."

Appearance and Manner Made Sir Arthur Currie A Very Typical Canadian

STANDING six feet four inches, weighing close on to two hundred and forty pounds, built in proportion, Sir Arthur Currie merits the name of "big Canadian" no less from his physical attributes than by reason of his qualities as a soldier and a man. Not a wrinkle mars the smoothness of his round, youthful face. A pair of big blue eyes look out from his broad and open countenance. Born at Strathroy, Ont., in 1875, he is a native son of Ontario from the soles of the big field boots which he constantly wears in preference to riding boots or puttees, to the parting in the middle of his blonde, grizzling hair. His deep voice is the voice of a Canadian, untinged with any trace of the swank and affectation to which, alas! more than one in the C.E.F. has succumbed. In manner and bearing he is just the same Currie who sold real estate in Victoria before the war.

The Canadian corps commander impresses all who meet him with his simplicity and straightforwardness of manner. So much so that many marvel how this can be the man who became lieutenant-general at 42, the commander of 200,000 men, and one of the most successful leaders in France.

"Somehow he looks like a stalwart civilian who has put on a uniform. He lacks the brass-hattiness and the barrack-room air of the stereotyped general," is the tenor of the comment made by strangers discussing him after their first introduction. But Currie's blue eyes can flash fire on occasion, his voice snap out commands, and his apparently easy-going manner undergoes a lightning change when there is work to be done. Casual visitors only saw him off duty. Shrewder judges of men had sized him up soon after the First Canadian Division landed in France, and marked him out for promotion. Gen. Byng, the idol of the Canadian corps and the victor of Vimy Ridge, wanted Currie as his successor.

GEN. ARTHUR CURRIE.

Gen. Currie talked very freely to Canadian newspapermen. He would invite them into his battlefield hut at Vimy, hard by the deep, dark dug-out dungeons which served as First Division headquarters, or later, when occupying some old chateau, into the lofty chamber, with its antique furniture and four-post bed, and there unbosom his mind to the press as he could not do to anyone else in France. Most of such conversations were strictly confidential, and not for publication.

In London, during his short and infrequent visits of a day or two to confer with the Overseas Minister of Militia or the War Office, pending some great development, or on his still less frequent leaves to see his wife and children, the Canadian corps commander moved about as unostentatiously as a private on furlough. He frequently carried neither cane nor gloves, and when his towering figure rose above the crowds on the Strand, it was only the rank badges on his shoulders and on the straight, old-fashioned and uncomfortable-looking cloth tunic collar which he alone of all the generals wore, that restrained vigilant A.P.M.'s from stopping him and inquiring the reason for this reprehensible lack of gloves and walking stick, without which every officer was deemed "improperly dressed."

Bluntness rather than diplomatic suavity characterizes Currie. He speaks his mind freely. A royal personage—not the Prince of Wales—who was at one time attached to the Canadian Corps, delights to tell a story in this connection. The royal soldier, one inky night, made use of his electric torch to pick his way through the mud at the gate of Canadian Corps Headquarters, then located at the Chateau of Camblain l'Abbe. A Canadian sentry, not observing who the transgressor was, exclaimed angrily: "Put out that torch or you'll have Heine dropping bombs on us. A fellow would think you were the corps commander." Royalty promptly extinguished the torch and next day at the mess related the story with gusto. "Huh!" exclaimed Currie with a quiet smile. "I wouldn't be such a d—— fool as to flash a torch like that." The royal raconteur, a great admirer of the general, considered this last addition, one on himself, the tit-bit of the whole story and cherishes it among his anecdotes.

Universities in Russia Destroyed by Bolshevism Education Is Paralyzed

THE name of Prof. P. N. Milyukoff, the eminent Russian historian, was familiar before the war to all the world of scholarship as that of one of the most distinguished teachers in the University of Moscow. Though the troubled events of the last four years have made us more familiar with his work as a member of the Duma, a powerful minister of the Russian republic, and a leader in the fight again Bolshevism, he has not forgotten the sphere of learning, and when approached by an academic correspondent in London he readily consented to speak of the effects of the revolution upon the Russian universities.

Like all the seats of learning in the belligerent countries, the universities of Russia threw themselves whole-heartedly into the conflict against the Prussian enemy and applied the technical skill of their professors and students without stint to the service of the armies. The numbers of Russians engaged in their universities and professional schools in quieter times were always very large and many more were desirous of availing themselves of the resources of the institutions that carried on the teaching work of the universities than it was possible for them to accommodate.

PROF. P. N. MILYUKOFF.

One of the earliest measures of the progressive regime that followed upon the downfall of the Tzardom was, therefore, the establishment of provincial universities in many of the great centres of population in order to relieve the pressure upon the great universities of Moscow and Petrograd, but even this and the drain of students away to the armies left the halls of the universities crammed with pupils anxious to get learning, though all had to be capable of fulfilling the requirements in the way of high school certificates that were necessary to secure admission to an academic course, and these in Russia have been very exacting.

The old autocratic government did its best to secure a rigid uniformity in the teaching and examination of university students, but there was no supreme authority in each university such as exists in England and America. Every one of the schools, observed the professor, that went to make up the university had its own governing body, and it was thus possible to secure a considerable diversity of methods and of outlook and some measure of liberty. With the overthrow of autocracy and the advent to power of liberal reformers a large diversity of educational experiment was encouraged, many hampering restrictions were removed and endeavors were made to bring university education within the reach of all who were capable of profiting by it. Prof. Milyukoff feels that these enlightened measures were meeting a real demand on the part of the best elements in Russia, and that the desire for real progress was being directed into the right channels when the universities, like all the other constructive agencies in Russia, were overwhelmed by the hideous tide of anarchy and Bolshevist tyranny which is more autocratic and terrorist in its methods than the worst government of all the discredited tzars.

The whole organization of the universities was brought down in ruin and their doors were thrown open to all, regardless of attainments or capacity for serious effort.

Society fell apart into fragments, the purchasing power of money was destroyed, the price of commodities soared to judicrous heights, and it became the sole preoccupation of every one but the direct agents of the Bolshevist tyrants to secure food for himself and his dependents until it was possible to escape from the wreck. One by one some of the men of international reputation in the world of learning who were the pride of the Russian universities, have succeeded in finding their way across the Finnish frontier or in fleeing to the protection of one of the anti-Bolshevist armies.

Prof. Milyukoff himself, after struggling against the tyranny at Kiev and elsewhere, journeyed south to Constantinople and thence through Italy to England, there to continue the constructive work of organization on which the life of a new Russia must be built.

The Young Man's Opportunity

"If you want to know if you are a success, ask yourself this question—'Can you save money?' If you can, you are a success. If you can't, drop out."

That's plain talk, but it's true.

That's something for the young man of Canada to think over. If you are not saving money—you are not getting anywhere.

You are lifting your feet and putting them down on the same spot day after day, marking time.

No man ever succeeded that way.

Take a grip on yourself and cut out those careless, useless expenditures you make day after day.

Victory Bonds are your opportunity.

Buy a "big block" of Victory Bonds.

Buy them on easy terms — under the instalment plan.

Grit your teeth—and pay for them! You can do it.

And think what this money saved may mean to you later in life. It may mean an interest in some business; it may mean the making of a home. It will mean that you can avail yourself of some investment opportunity that will ensure your financial or business success. The possession of some "ready money" has often been the foundation of a fortune.

Begin saving to-day.

FINALLY REACHED HIS POINT

Lawyer's Flowery Eloquence Turned Out to Be Prelude to Very Simple Request.

Norman Hapgood, the new minister to Denmark, was talking about a "whitewashing" case.

"The case reminds me," he said, "of Pietro Libertini, a scion of sunny Italy, who was on trial for a murderous assault. His lawyer defended him in this manner:

"'Your honor,' the lawyer began, 'my client, Signor Pietro Libertini, comes from Italia la Bella, land of romance, art and immortal literature. He comes, your honor, from the sun-kissed home of the illustrious Michelangelo Buonarotti, of the divine Raffaello and the undying Dante Alighieri. He comes from the olive-crowned birthplace of Tasso, Ariosto and the humorous Boccaccio. His home is Italia, prolific mother of art and science, progenitrix of Galvani and Galileo Galilei.'

"After the lawyer had gone on in this strain for about an hour the judge began to get impatient.

"'What has all this got to do with the case?' he finally asked.

"'My poor words,' said the lawyer, 'are by way of preface. My client, from immortal Italy, home of the painter and the sculptor, humbly prays this court to apply to him the very lowest form of pictorial art. He prays, your honor, to be whitewashed.'"

Find a Moth Exterminator.

Experiments of the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture, have demonstrated that naphthalene is uniformly effective in protecting woolens from clothes moth infection and in killing all stages of the insect, says the Des Moines Register. A red cedar chest readily killed all adult moths and showed considerable killing effect upon young larvae. It did not prevent the hatching of eggs, but killed all of the resulting larvae almost immediately. Red cedar chips and shavings, while not entirely effective in keeping the adult moths from laying eggs on the flannel treated, appeared to protect it from appreciable damage when used liberally.

Not New to Her.

Beatrice was invited to a birthday party and, womanlike, she wanted a new frock. Her mother, finding the child's party dress in good condition, refused to buy another. Her father, trying to console his little daughter, said: "Let me see the dress, Beatrice."

She brought it and he said: "Why, Beatrice, it is very pretty! I've never seen it before."

"Well," responded the child, "I'se seen it offin."

Stung.

"Fine day, isn't it?"

"Sir, you have the advantage of me! I don't know you."

"H-m! I fail to see the advantage."

A Butterfly Farm.

An unusual "farm" has been started near Macon, France by Mr. Andre, a French entomologist. Mr. Andre raises butterflies and silkworms, and so the vegetation of his farm consists of mulberry, oak, ash, cypress, lilac, pine, plum, hawthorn, and other trees and shrubs on which the caterpillars that become butterflies live. In infancy the butterflies are protected by being inclosed in tulle bags which are fastened to the twig or branch on which the young caterpillars are to feed; as the caterpillars get bigger the tulle bags are taken away, and the caterpillars left free to spin their cocoons, which are collected from the trees and bushes very much like some strange kind of fruit and placed in little wire cages until the perfect butterflies emerge. On this side the work of the butterfly farm is commercial, but no less important is the experimental work of the farm with silkworms, by which sooner or later the butterfly farm hopes to provide the world with silkworms that will produce a fine grade of silk in a northerly climate.

Danish Railroads.

The principal railways of Denmark are owned and operated by the Government. The length of the Government roads is 2,103 kilometers (1,307 miles) and that of the several private roads is 2,067 kilometers (1,284 miles). The private companies operate, for the most part, only the short lines, whereas the Government operates the main lines and handles the greater part of the business.

Tanks Like a Deck of Cards.

In the open stretch, beyond the last fringe of wood, we struck the field where the American tanks attacked the Huns on flank and rear and finished the battle of Argonne wood, Elizabeth Frazer writes in the Saturday Evening Post. Later we saw a complete outfit of these grotesque monsters go walloping across a shell-torn field. Their insignia were the characters on a deck of cards, and they always followed suit. Thus an ace of spades was always followed by the king of spades, the king by his spouse; and so on down to the tray. As we passed, the knave of hearts thrust forth a grinning face from his round armored little turret and waved a grimy paw. Close on his tail waggishly tangoed the ten spot. It was like some mad scene in "Alice in Wonderland."

Grim Jest Pathetic.

Was Poe's tale "The Masque of the Red Death" prophetic? His story was that on the stroke of midnight a tall, red-gowned figure revealed itself amid revelers as Death by Plague.

A counterpart from real life is reported from Cowestry, Wales. It is the report of a masquerade ball, at which one of the masked celebrators simulated Death, in a black robe and with hollow eye-sockets.

There were 140 dancers at the ball. Of this number, 122 are now suffering from influenza. Twelve are already dead, including the death masker.

Colonial Pumps Are Smartest—Oxfords for Day Dress Come in Various Shapes and Materials.

The colonial pump is the smart shoe of the season. To be sure oxfords are also worn for day dress. They are rather high and are laced not with ribbons, as they were last year, but with tubular silk lacings. They are made in kid, suede and black satin. And the lacing holes are bound with metal. But the colonial pumps are newer. They, like the oxfords, have French heels of medium height, almost invariably with a little metal layer that is now used to help keep the heels even.

They are made in black and brown kid and in patent leather. Sometimes a buckle of jet or steel is fastened at the bottom of the flaring tongue. One striking and attractive type of colonial pump has the sides of the tongue fastened to the shoe. This holds the shoe on, at the same time giving the attractive silhouette of the regulation colonial pump.

Raffia Trims Taffeta Gowns.

Raffia embroidery is the latest thing for decorating gowns made of taffeta. For example, on black taffeta appear a few sprays of dull pink roses, with dark green and brown leaves, or trails of blackberry bramble worked on midnight blue taffeta, little flecks of silver brightening up the whole thing. More than ever we are calling for embroideries.

A Good Investment.

Speculation is one thing. Investment is another. The majority of citizens want an investment, not a speculation. And they want a safe investment. Victory Bonds fill that requirement as does no other investment. Because behind every bond there is the national wealth of Canada— a wealth so great that it staggers the imagination.

Canadian Bank Clearings.

That Canada is well able to support the Victory Loan is clearly shown by the Canadian bank clearings for the current year. They indicate that the year's total will exceed $15,000,000,000 compared with $13,776,000,000 in 1918. And the year's total clearings should be three times those of 1909.

Must Subscribe More

Dividing the people of Canada into three classes — the comparatively poor, the moderately wealthy, and the very wealthy — it would seem that if contributions to the Victory Loans constitute service to the nation, the moderately wealthy class is hardly doing its share. Of the money subscribed to the Victory Loan 1918, two hundred and seventy-one million dollars were in bonds of $5,000 and under, ninety-four millions in bonds of between $5,000 and $25,000, and three hundred and one millions in bonds of $25,000 and over.

The Aid Loan Co's Head Got Standard To Buy His Stock

HE SOLD IT AT PAR, WHILE OTHER SHAREHOLDERS LATER GOT ONLY 72 PER CENT.—VALUATION OF ASSETS ROSE BY $14,000 AFTER PURCHASE.

TORONTO, Nov. 8—Col. W. S. Dinnick was again on the witness stand when the investigation into the affairs of the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation before Mr. J. A. C. Cameron Master-in-Chambers was resumed yesterday afternoon a Osgoode Hall. Mr. George H. Kilmer, K.C., counsel for the liquidator, commenced the examination of the witness.

"Can you tell me anything about a loan of $12,000 to R. S. Williams, resident of the Aid Loan and Savings Co., on his stock?" "We had got to where the meeting for the amalgamation was to be held when we learned that Mr. Williams threatened he would secure an injunction against the Standard Reliance Co. unless he were paid the full value of his stock, which was $12,000.

"To whom did he transfer the stock—the trustees?" "Likely."

"Then the $12,000 was for the purchase of the stock and was not a loan nor an advance?" "A purchase."

Mr. Kilmer then turned up another item of $2,000 on December 31st, 1903 a lead pencil entry as an advance on loans and other securities.

Col. Dinnick said it was paid in debentures and this $2,000 would be in addition to the $12,000.

"You had a careful valuation made terday afternoon at Osgoode Hall. Mr. made the purchase?"—"Yes—the assets valued at $72,131.26 and the liabilities $22,238.40, leaving a balance of $49,891.86. That is equal to 72 cents on the dollar on the Aid Loan and Savings Company's stock."

Mr. Kilmer: "That is to say, they got Standard Reliance stock for 72 per cent. of the stock held in the Aid Loan and Savings Company." "Yes."

Mr. Kilmer then went on to point out that on the conversion of the Williams stock there was a loss of $2,299 which went to Williams. This occurred because Williams stock was bought at par, whereas had he remained a shareholder in the Aid Company, he would have received only 72 per cent. Then on the subsequent sale of this $12,000 stock, there was a loss of $1,614, making a total loss of $3,913.

Col. Dinnick said that Williams was the Aid Company president and later became director of the Standard Reliance Co.

COMPLIMENT TO HIS COUNSEL

"Is there anything to show that the shareholders new or were told of this payment to their directors before they approved the agreement?" asked Mr. Kilmer.

Col. Dinnick smiled and spoke with care and deliberation. "The shareholders were fortunate in having a very cautious and conscientious solicitor in the person of Mr. J. R. L. Starr, K. C."

"That is a joke," laughed the probing counsel.

"The counsel fees will be no lower because of the compliment," put in Mr. J. H. Spence partner of Mr. Starr who is counsel for Col. Dinnick.

The witness found an item in the records showing that the shareholders had voted to distribute some $3,500 among the directors and the widow of the late manager of the company, A. E. Hill. This he took as knowledge on the shareholders' part of the payment.

RAISED THE VALUE

"In writing up the valuation of the assets that were transferred by the Aid Co. I see you raised their value by $14,105.03?" "Yes."

"Why?" "Well, we fortunately had got the better of the bargain and our own appraisers raised the valuation when they made their examination."

"I might say," he continued when lightly prompted by Mr. Starr, "that these assets consisted largely of mortgages bearing a high rate of interest which made them a very high class security."

"On December a loan of $7,000 was made, marked N. P.—what was that, would it refer to the National Publishing Co?" "It might be. It might have covered the purchase of the stock of the National Publishing Co." Witness added that the company had published a paper. Money and Risks," and one of the reasons why the loan was made was that the Standard Reliance directors had considered the paper might be a good asset as a means of advertising Standard Reliance interests. No dividend had ever been paid on this stock.

PAYING THE DIRECTORS

"Did you pay anything to the directors of the Ontario Industrial Loan and Savings Company, when you took that company into the Standard?"—"I believe a resolution to that effect was passed by our directors."

Mr. Kilmer then read the text of the resolution referred to, dated June 19, 1903, which authorized the payment of $15,000 to the retiring directors of the absorbed company.

"Checks amounting to $10,000 were made payable to you and endorsed by you?"—"Yes."

"And you paid this money out to the directors of the Ontario Industrial Company?" "I can't remember, but I can get you this information later."

The shareholders of the Industrial Loan Company voted $1,000 to be paid their directors in recognition of past services?" "Yes."

ASSETS VALUATION RAISED

The valuation of the Ontario Industrial Co., was shown to have been $304,397.80 when taken over by the Standard. The liabilites were about $193,000 which left a balance of assets for distribution of $111,195. This was paid for in ten year 4 per cent debentures of the Standard Reliance Co., at the rate of 35 cents on the dollar. The valuation of the assets was raised to $354,740 an increase of $60,000 when entered on the Standard Reliance books.

The Standard Reliance Company books for 1903 showed that a profit of $89,000 was declared. Col. Dinnick admitted that this included the item of nearly $61,000 by which the assets of the Ontario Industrial Co., had been increased when transferred to the books of the Standard Reliance.

Due to the delay in finding various items for confirmation in the different books and to Col. Dinnick's unfamiliarity with certain transactions which had transpired almost sixteen years ago, it was decided to give the witness as well as his counsel sufficient time in which to more thoroughly study the books and papers bearing on these transactions.

The inquiry was herefore adjourned until Wednesday, November 19th, it being impossible for the Master-in-Chambers to grant an earlier date.

There will be as sweeping an investigation of the Standard Reliance financial debacle as the liquidator desires. This became feasible to-day when J. R. L. Starr, K.C., acting for former vice-president W. S. Dinnick, withdrew his technical objection to a probe of the events previous to the formation of the company in 1913.

Mr. Starr, however, still maintains that his legal objection to a wider probe made yesterday is sound. He waves his objection at the explicit.

GOVERNMENT SELLING TO SOLDIERS

Under arrangements made through the Dominion Command of the Great War Veterans' Association a proportion of the surplus military stores held by the Government is being reserved for a short time for the benefit of returned soldiers and sailors and widows and dependents of soldiers killed in action. They are to have the privilege of purchasing articles from the stores at very advantageous prices. These military stores comprises a varied assortment of goods, including, bedding, hardware, blankets, leather goods, including wearing apparel, dry goods, furniture, etc. It is the intention to sell a large percentage of the stores by tender to the highest bidder, but the Dominion Command of the G.W.V.A. has arranged that individual returned soldiers or sailors or dependents of soldiers and sailors killed in the war can make whatever purchases they wish through any branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, whether they are members of the G. W. V. A. or not. Orders so placed will be combined, say weekly, and sent to the office of the Dominion Command in Ottawa, from where payment will be made to the Government when the order is placed. There are some bargains to be had from these surplus stores.

For example some are used, cleaned army blankets in good condition at $3.00 each, and $5.00 each for new ones; khaki flannel for shirts at 55c. per yard, etc. The list of articles obtainable and the prices can be seen at any branch of the G. W. V. A. by any member or ex-member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Say Prohibition Caused Strike

Opinion of English Press—Methodist Board Takes Different View.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—That the coal strike in America was caused by prohibition is the belief expressed editorially by several of the leading Conservative newspapers of England.

"The Daily Mail" attributes the men's grievances to enforced abstinence from liquor.

"The Morning Post" sees beneath the surface of the coal strike a social revolution being promulgated by secret anarchist organizations.

"Men who had no social grievances could not turn to thought of revolution," it says. "What social grievances have these American miners? There is one which is obvious to all. Prohibition has been carried through the State and Federal legislature by such a system of organized lobbying and political blackmail as is unequalled in the history of democracy.

"Coal mining is a dry business and the minor deprived of his beer is an angry man. Moreover, the American suspects with very good reason that prohibition is a capitalistic movement. Some of the biggest employers are known to be among the strongest supporters of the movement.

"We don't know whether the secret organization which forced prohibition in America has any social or political aim beyond prohibition, but it might be worth while to investigate whether the organizations which have been working for revolution and those for prohibition have supporters in common.

"Prohibition preceded the revolution in Russia, and prohibition in the United States proceded the biggest attempt at revolution yet made in that country."

Methodists Rebuke Gompers

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The assertion of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, that prohibition was contributing to unrest in the United States, was characterized as "not only unfortunate, but deserving of rebuke," in a statement issued here yesterday by the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Church.

Radicalism in England and France and throughout the continent of Europe," the statement said, "is very much more rife than it is in America, despite the floods of alcohol. Bolshevism is a thing of ignorance; prohibition commands the support of 90 per cent. of Americans with high school educations. Bolshevism is a thing of saloons and slums, prohibition is the product of schools, churches and homes."

"All America concedes everything possible to labor and labor's leaders" the statement added, "but Mr. Gompers is not the uncrowned king of this country. If it is true that foreign-born laborers are rebellious against the county because of pohibition, it may be said that the country is not being run entirely for their benefit. If they do not like the way things are being done, let them go back to Europe. Six weeks after they have landed on that continent they will be begging the churches for passage money back."

H.R.H. Says Au Revoir To The Commoners

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 8.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales cast a ray of sunshine over the two Houses of Parliament at noon yesterday, when he visited the Senate and the Commons, and after shaking hands with the legislators made a brief speech. In both Houses he received a tremendous ovation, members forgetting their differences and joining together in hearty cheers. At the conclusion of his reception in the Commons he graciously met the members of the Parliamentary press gallery and shook hands all around.

"I have had such a wonderful time in Canada and have seen so many wonderful things that I feel it would have been a grave omission if I had not visited you here in Parliament," he said. "I thank you for having asked me to come and for your kind welcome. I hope to be able to hear your debates when I again visit Canada, which I hope will be soon You will then be in more comfortable quarters. So I will say au revoir and not good bye."

Three cheers and a tiger followed from the throats of the legislators.

At the conclusion the Prince with his left hand shook hands with each member as he passed, Mr. Speaker announcing the names.

Election Referendum Cost $1,260,000

This Debit Entry to Face the U. F. O. Government When New Administration Begins.

One of the first duties of the Provincial Treasurer—whoever he may be—in the Drury Government will be to make an entry on the debit side of his ledger.

"Item one, general election and referendum vote, $1,260,000."

The figure is an approximation, but is believed to be fairly near the total cost of the recent election. Accounts from the returning officers throughout the Province are now being received by the auditor of criminal justice accounts.

The cost of the enumeration in August last is estimated at from $600,000 to $650,000, of which $400,000 is made up in salaries and the remainder in printing and other expenses.

The election expenses are difficult to calculate. There were approximately 6,000 polling places throughout the Province. The rent of a polling booth costs $6 or $8, while the deputy returning officer is paid $9, two poll clerks, $6 each and a considerable, $3. These salaries are 50 per cent. higher than those paid in the past, the increase being made in consideration of the extra work involved in making of the referendum vote.

In addition to the above expenses, the chief returning officer in each of the 111 electoral districts, receives remuneration, which varies according to the number of polling sub-divisions in his district. A chief returning officers' account, including all expenses, may average anywhere from $200 to $1,500. The large increase in the electorate, due to the addition of women's names, rendered it difficult to gauge conditions. The election was the first to be held under the system of enumeration.

Union Officials Called To Court

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The scene of action in the soft coal strike controversy was shifted today to Indianapolis where the Government and miners representation will meet in the Federal Court to fight out their issues on a temporary injunction returnable at ten o'clock this morning restraining strike leaders from further activity. It was believed probable that Samuel Gompers would seek another conference today with Attorney-General Palmer in an effort to settle the strike prior to the opening of injunction proceedings in Indianapolis. The material side of the strike as shown by the available reports was not altered noticeably, both sides claiming gains. The Government continued its campaign for coal economy but announced that it had not been contemplated to enforce such war time measures as lightless nights and heatless Mondays.

No One Class Can Rule Canada

Some Comments on Political Situation by Prominent Grain Man.

Mr. George B. Jones of the Judge Jones Grain Co. of Montreal, writes of some comments in The Gazette on the result of the Ontario Election as coming from Ottawa to the effect that result was due to abnormal mentality caused by the war. The Gazette published this under the heading of "An Agricultural View." Mr. Jones writes as follows:

"Now I am at a loss to know what is meant by abnormal mentality. If they mean that the farmers (who did more than anyone else to break up the old party lines) assisted by labor, the women and other right-thinking people have at last awakened to their rights with a determination to have them then I agree, but if they are insinuating that there was any lack of intelligence on the part of the people who carried the election, I don't agree, because I believe the farmer and all people connected with the election are just as intelligent as the average man who has in times past represented us.

"I think people have awakened to the fact that no one class of men can rule a country like Canada. All classes must be represented. While the farmer is the man who feeds us all, I don't think he even should rule, but he, with labor and the manufacturing man must in future be fairly represented in order to keep our country from becoming lop-sided. We must realize that the different classes all have rights and are but a spoke in a big wheel. The elimination of, or weakening of any one, weakens the whole wheel, so we must have co-operation between farmer, labor, manufacturer, capital, including the retail and wholesale dealer and if we had this there would be little if any necessity of Government fixing of prices, restricting of profits and a hundred and one things which often help no one and displeases some.

"Of course the proper place to start is in the school. Teach the laborer's child and the farmer's child and the manufacturer's child and the capitalist's child their relation to each other. As we have not yet introduced this into our schools, the Government might settle much of the present unrest by starting an educational campaign along these lines for the betterment of the conditions of all."

Note: Since the above was written, Mr. Jones has taken up his residence in Belleville, as manager of the Judge Jones Milling Company.

Coalition Leader Making Progress

TORONTO, Iov. 8.—Further progress was made by E. C. Drury, U.F.O.-Labor leader, yesterday, in the formation of his Cabinet, but no intimation was given of his decisions. A report was current yesterday that W. F. Nickle, former member for Kingston, was in line for the Attorney-Generalship. Mr. Nickle was an outstanding member of the Ontario House for some yeas before entering the Federal Parliament, and although he has always been a Conservative, he has never had much regard for the party whip, and at times, both in Queen's Park and at Ottawa, showed his independence by voting against his party. Mr. Nickle was elected as a Unionist, but resigned after the close of the war on the ground that his mandate as a Unionist had expired.

Declines to Commit Himself.

Kingston, Nov. 8.—W. F. Nickle was asked the question as to accepting the Attorney-Generalship of Ontario, but he replied that it was impossible to discuss the matter at the present time.

U.S. Government Will Press Injunction

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

Lewis, acting president of the Miners Union, refused to accede to the government demand that the strike order be recalled pending mediation of controversy.

A better tone was evident on the New York Exchange in the morning, but the closing tone was confused.

Labor Disturbances Industrial Barbarism

SO SAYS REPORT OF COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE STEEL STRIKE—WORKERS AND EMPLOYERS CRITICIZED—NO PLACE FOR INDUSTRIAL DESPOTISM OF LABOR.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Characterizing all strikes as industrial barbarism and declaring that there is no place in this country either for industrial despotism of labor, a committee authorized to investigate the steel strike presented a report today covering its hearings both in Washington and in Pittsburgh, and criticising both workers and employers in the controversy which resulted in at least partial disruption of the steel industry. The committee's main conclusion, concurred in by all members, was expressed in the statement that the public has a right to demand that capital shall not arrogate to itself the right to determine in its own way those industrial questions, and the same principle applies to labor, and the duty is upon Congress to provide some way of adjusting these difficulties.

Cabinets Gratuity Decision Endorsed By Parliament

FINDING OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON THE SOLDIERS' CIVIL RE-ESTABLISHMENT ADOPTED—EVERY MEMBER ON THE CROSS BENCHES VOTED FOR ACCEPTANCE.

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—Having stood throughout the debate on the report of the Special Committee on Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment firmly by its decision that further distribution of cash gratuities to returned soldiers were precluded by the heavy commitments and financial situation of the Dominion, the Government was sustained by a large majority in the Commons to-day. The members of the Government who had participated the debate, particularly Hon. J. A. Calder, chairman of the committee, and Sir George Foster, the Acting Prime Minister, had declared that the Government could not under present conditions accept a proposal involving the raising of several hundred million of dollars for soldiers' bonuses and the payment of a large sum in interest for a period of years. They had urged the acceptance of the recommendation of the committee that some fifty million dollars be expended upon certain necessary and urgent extensions of the scheme of soldiers' civil re-establishment and had asserted that the ears of the Government would not be deaf to suggestions of further improvements. Today the House acted upon the declarations of the Ministers. It rejected by 100 votes to 35, a motion that the report of the Special Committee be referred back to that body for further consideration, and then it passed the motion that the report be received and the expenditure suggested therein be commended to the consideration of the Government.

Bringing Up Father Was Very Pleasing

Gus Hill's Cartoon Show Has Improved Wonderfully Since Its Last Visit.

Not much is expected by the regular theatre-goer from the average "cartoon show" as the musical absurdities based on the comic supplements are called, but these shows draw crowded houses and audiences seldom seen at the play houses at any other time. It is "father, mother and the kids night" when "Bringing Up Father" comes to town, and standing room only is the rule. For this year's version of "Bringing Up Father" Gus Hill has provided a production which is away above the average of cartoon comedy road shows and the audience which packed Griffin's Theatre last evening was greatly amused and thoroughly satisfied. Some changes have been made in the cast since the last visit, for the better, and the entire production has been gingered up until now it is bright and snappy with plenty of pep and enthusiasm. Even Jiggs and Maggie and Dinty Moore put more life into their strenuous parts than usual and that is going some. Every part was well taken and the specialty features were particularly entertaining, including Roland sisters, neat, graceful and modest in eccentric dances, beautifully costumed, and the musical trio, Mr. Bolduc, Misses Coburn and Bolduc, who gave a unique specialty and were recalled again and again until they were too tired to respond farther. The chorus was musical and shapely with beautiful costumes.

Rushing Tabernacle For Trenton Revival

(From our own Correspondent)

TRENTON, Ont., Nov. 7.—Mr. J. D. Evans, C.E., is in Ottawa this week attending the 56th Annual Meeting of the Ontario Entomological Society of which he has been a member (and for a number of years President and Vice-President) for fifty years.

Capt. Jenny of the R.F.C., Ottawa, who has been in town for the last week took several ladies up in his airplane one a a time, yesterday, for a flight over the town. Last week he took Dr Farncomb, Mr. Whittier and several other citizens. Capt. Jenny expects to leave for New York in a day or two his plane.

Work is being rushed on the new skating rink and it is expected that it will be finished sufficiently to hold a Monster Meeting in it on Sunday night in connection with the Evangelistic Campaign now starting here.

His Death Expected
New Brunswick Man Saved

Mr. Isidore Thomas, of Tilley's Road, Gloucester County, N.B., while expecting death, availed himself of help that was offered at random. Here is part of a letter he wrote to us:—

"I beg you to publish my letter, so that people may know what Gin Pills did for me. My case was very serious. I was so sick everybody expected my death any day. Finally, on advice from friends, I tried Gin Pills, and in a short time was well again, and soon had gained 20 pounds."

Kidney and bladder troubles, very often, work in secret ways. A bad condition may exist, with only a backache to indicate it. That is why the slightest pains in back or sides should be investigated. These pains, along with sciatic neuralgia, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, lassitude, lumbago, highly-colored urine, headache, floating specks before the eyes, gravel, indicate kidney trouble. A course of Gin Pills, taken at once, will give relief, and prevent the progress of the disease, enabling the organs to right themselves and restore good health. Gin Pills are the sure, safe, quick remedy. Get a box from your druggist or dealer—50c. Money refunded if no relief found. Send for free sample.

Who's Who And Why In Greater Canada

Interesting Biographical Volume of Canadians Prominent in Business and Public Life.

"Who's Who and Why," for 1919-20, published by the International Press Limited, Toronto, has reached The Intelligencer and this valuable reference work is bigger and better than ever. "Who's Who and Why," is designed by the publishers to provide a record of the men and women who in one capacity or another are contributing to the building up of a greater Canada.

As Canada grows, so grows the "Who's Who and Why" book which is one of the most interesting publications of the day, in addition to being a valuable work of reference.

"Who's Who and Why" is discriminating and those who have the honor to be mentioned in its pages only reach that distinction after a close scrutiny of their business careers, public services and possibilities as potential assets to Canadian citizenship. In the thousands of biographical sketches of leading Canadians found in the current edition of "Who's Who and Why" will be found the names of those prominent in the business and public life of Canada, leaders in the building up of a Bigger and Better Canada.

TEN MONTHS' TIME TO PAY FOR BOND.

The instalment plan in connection with the Victory Loan 1919 makes it possible for the person of most limited means to become a Victory Bond holder. Thousands of the subscribers to the former loans took advantage of the convenient instalment arrangement and are now very glad that they did. They possess valuable securities which they could not have bought had the "cash down" method been imperative.

The Victory Loan 1919 is not a rich man's loan. It is available to everybody. A first payment of $5 is accepted on a $50 bond and the balance can be spread over a period of ten months. It is a great experience in saving from week to week.

It is a very poor person indeed who cannot buy at least one Victory Bond, and fortunately there are but few of that kind of people in Canada today. The Victory Loan of 1919 will keep the Dominion prosperous and the scarcity of poor people will continue.

NEW GOVERNOR TO FIGHT PROHIBITION

Jersey City, Nov. 7.—Governor-elect Edward I. Edwards has announced that he will use all lawful methods to prevent prohibition in New Jersey.

"For its enforcement by the Federal Government I shall not be responsible," he said. "I construe my election as an indication of the feelings of the people of this State against enforcing national prohibition. They are unqualifiedly opposed to it. Holding their mandate, I shall use all the lawful methods to preserve inviolate the sovereignty of the people."

PLAYED JOKE ON THE HUNS

Sioux Indians Had Fun for Three Days Talking Over a Tapped Telephone Wire.

Because of the nature of the country over which American troops fought in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, the Germans found it easy at times to cut in on our field telephone wires.

The commander of one brigade of artillery attached to an American division was particularly annoyed by enemy wire tappers in a heavily wooded section of the Argonne. Code messages from artillery observers were being intercepted by Boche listeners-in, and the commander knew, as all armies know, that no code is impregnable when experts get working on it.

The artillery commander took up with the colonel of one of the line regiments the question of the Huns' wire-tapping activities. And the colonel hit upon an idea.

Two Indians, both of proud Sioux lineage, members of one of his companies, were assigned as telephone operators. One was to go forward with the artillery observer, the other to remain at the brigade receiving end of the wire which the artillery commander was certain the Germans had that day tapped somewhere along the line.

Now, when two Sioux Indians get talking together in their own tongue, what they say sounds very much like code, but isn't. Anyway, it raised hob with the code experts of certain Prussian guard units.

The Sioux stuck on their jobs for three days and nights. They and the artillery commander and their own colonel enjoyed the situation immensely. If the Germans got any fun out of it they kept it to themselves.

Changes Planes In Mid-Air.

The daring maneuver of jumping from one airplane to another while in full flight was recently accomplished by a lieutenant of aviation, and is pictured in Popular Mechanics Magazine. Climbing down to the undercarriage of the machine in which he had left the ground as a passenger, he reached the horizontal bar of the landing chassis. Hanging to this, and executing acrobatic evolutions, he awaited the approach of a second ship flying at a lower level. As it came beneath him, he released his hold and dropped onto its top plane, landing at a point near the middle of the right wing. While he had estimated the relative speeds of the two machines correctly and judged his distance without error, it still remained for him to obtain a firm hold, or possibly suffer the inconvenience of falling 5,000 feet.

BEGIN CHRISTMAS SHOPPING NOW.

Well, the next thing on the program is to begin the Christmas shopping stunt. Terrors of eleventh hour frantic search in jostling crowds for suitable gifts can be entirely eliminated and Christmas shopping made a pleasure by beginning to make selections now when stocks are complete. Articles selected now can be put aside by the merchant for future delivery and both patron and dealer are benefitted. The patron saves weeks of worry and the merchant has an opportunity of replenishing stocks and getting repeat orders filled before the grand final rush when everybody is worked to the limit, wholesaler, retailer, railways and post office.

Better goods, better choice anu better results all round will follow early Christmas shopping.

Merchants should begin Christmas advertising early so as to encourage the early shopping idea. Helpful Hints for Christmas Gifts will be eagerly read, for it is only a few weeks now until the gladsome season when we will again ponder upon the proverb of "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

TESTING CREDULITY.

One's ability to believe the marvels of modern surgery was severely tested recently by the announcement of Dr. Serge Voronoff in Paris that by the grafting of an interstitial gland from a monkey upon an old man he had defeated old age and made true the de Leon dream.

But skepticism, having been fortified during several hundred years against putting too much faith in springs of eternal youth, held its own and the world in a few days lapsed into its customary submission to the belief that men are of few years.

Now comes a further test of credulity, from California, too, supposed to be the land of sunshine and movies, where youth and happiness last always!

It is reported that an interstitial gland has been grafted upon an old man there and with very satisfactory results, as shown by this statement of the graftee: "I am a new man. Already I feel the strength and energy of youth returning."

No one who has been grafted with just one gland could be expected to give stronger endorsement than that. After the Paris report, it would seem that skepticism as well as old age must flee before science. But how did any one in California grow old?

MADE IN BELLEVILLE.

Goods made in Belleville are in demand in all parts of the world, from prepared foodstuffs to shirts, machinery and all kinds of metal manufactures. Even in far-away Labrador the name and fame of Belleville machinery have penetrated and Dr. Grenfell, famous for his medical missionary work among the fisher folk, Indians and Eskimos of the Labrador coast, found in Belleville a manufactured product which can be of great service to him in his splendid work. The expense of the water wheel required by Dr. Grenfell is small and as a matter of worthy philanthropy and good business enterprise Belleville citizens will no doubt hasten to make possible a Belleville gift to the Grenfell Medical Mission which will be greatly appreciated.

The firm manufacturing the turbine wheel offer it for the Grenfell work at cost price, the company donating their profit of twenty-five dollars to the cause.

The Women's Canadian Club have donated thirty-five dollars to the Belleville turbine wheel fund, and one of the prominent lady members of the club will also give twenty-five dollars.

The wheel will be provided by the manufacturers at cost price, $225.

The balance should be easily over-subscribed.

Anyone wishing to help Dr. Grenfell in his great work and send a made-in-Belleville token to him can get in on this by acting quickly.

Miss Fraleck, at the Court House, will receive subscriptions.

THE MAYOR, THE PRINCE AND THE EMPIRE.

Mayor Martin says he is not ashamed to admit that he was so moved that there were tears in his eyes when he bade farewell to the Prince of Wales. Well, he was not more captivated by the personality of the youth who is some day to be our King than were all the rest of us. His Royal Highness has left behind him the personal affection of all. No individual has ever obtained such a hold on the hearts of the people here as has this young Prince, with his fresh, boyish face, his happy smile, his intuitive wisdom, and his charming presence, half-shy and altogether winsome.

His visit here has been a reminder of the precious asset which the Empire possesses in the Crown. Royalty with us has attained the ideal position. It is the binding tie of the Empire—the centre and the symbol of all that the Empire stands for. We needed the visit of the Prince if only to bid us pause for a moment, as he did in that speech of his at the Place Viger luncheon, and reflect upon the fundamentals on which the fabric of Empire rests.

The glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome have passed away, but the liberty and justice that form the basis of British sway should be eternal. There will be no fear of the eclipse of the British Empire, no fear for civilization itself, so long as the British people are true to the traditions recalled to our minds by the Prince—traditions which are the heirloom of the British peoples. The Province of Quebec can be a veritable rock of Empire, and a bulwark against Bolshevism, if the two splendid races that compose its people work in hadmony for the advancement of the British ideals of which His Royal Highness spoke. And what the Mayor has said in this connection is one sign of the good work which the Prince has accomplished.—Montreal Herald.

To the victor belongs the spoil was the old political battle cry. This has been changed by the farmers, and it is now "To the victor belongs the soil."

Six dollars a plate for the dinner, decorations $125, piano $5, cigars $12.50, cigarettes $22.50, and orchestra $28, are among the items of expense in a bill presented to the Hamilton Board of Aldermen for the banquet to the Prince of Wales in that city, at a total expense of $1,758. It must have been a Royal Gorge.

In selecting a site for a recreation park the mistake should not be made of accepting too small an area or a site too distant from the centre of the city. In the near future the present agricultural grounds will be absorbed in the new Albert College site and if the fall exhibition is to be continued new grounds will have to be secured. Now that it has been decided to provide a civic recreation park for athletic events it would be the part of wisdom to secure a site which would serve all purposes.

A bill has been introduced in the United States Congress providing a $5,000 fine and five years' imprisonment for stealing an automobile. Automobile thieves are getting so bold and numerous that drastic penalties are needed to curb this branch of crime. Canada should get busy in an effort to discourage automobile thefts by severe penalties.

When the Prince of Wales wanted a real rest he travelled all the way from Montreal to Toronto to secure it. Which goes to show that Canada has a deserted village all its own, where a man may not buy even a postage stamp on a Sunday. The prince has discovered, like many other individuals, that Toronto is not a bad place to sleep in.—Kingston Whig.

The Statesman ,the Toronto weekly organ of Laurier Liberalism, has come out at last in its true colors. In its latest issue it frankly explains its hatred of "imperialism." The reason is that the imperialists do not want Canada to separate from the empire and become a republic. The Statesman does; hence its quarrel with imperialism. It says that it wishes no worse luck for the Prince of Wales than that he settle as a rancher in Western Canada and be in the running as first President of the Republic of Canada." What do Ontario Liberals say to this? Is the Statesman a faithful exponent of up-to-date Canadian Liberalism?

The Montreal Herald warns the Dominion Senate that unless it rejects the G. T. R. purchase bill it will have to face the wrath of an outraged people and will probably be abolished instanter. That is the voice of Quebec. And the Senate may be sure that if it rejects the bill its action will be counted with its other sins by the people of Ontario and the west. The poor old Senate is in a sorry strait.

One of the planks of the United Farmers' political platform is the abolition of political patronage. It is therefore interesting to learn that Gordon Waldron, a Toronto lawyer who has served the U. F. O. in the capacity of solicitor, is likely to be attorney-general in the new Ontario Cabinet, and that his appointment is being urged by many members of the U.F.O. as a "reward for his services to the organization." As a reward for services' Services to what or to whom? Not to the people of Ontario. No, to the United Farmers' organization. And pray, what difference is there between the appointment of Mr. Waldron to public office as a reward for his services to the farmers' organization, and the appointment of a Grit or Tory office-seeker to public office as a reward for his services to the Grit or Tory party?—Hamilton Herald (Independent).

When a Child is Lost.

Cleveland Press.

The heart of a sympathizing world beats quicker when grief-stricken parents hunt for a lost child and the best wishes of every honest soul go to the father and mother in their search. The child-stealer merits—and receives—the contempt of every decent man and woman, and should receive—what he too often escapes—the severest punishment allotted the criminal. Feeling that way about the kidnapping of babies, it is only human that we—each of us—should be happier when a parent finds his child again; especially so when this comes after years of search and years of heart-breaking sorrow.

Remodelling the Imperial Parliament.

Vancouver World.

In Mr. Asquith's opinion, the parliament of the mother country is not what it used to be. But that is not unusual with parliaments. However, it is true that before the war Parliament was losing authority and prestige, though not perhaps from causes which Mr. Asquith mentions. The chief reason probably was that the House of Commons was hopelessly inefficient because hopelessly congested. Public and private bills costing thousands of pounds were choked to death every session because there was no time to look at them, and reforms, unless so pressing that the Government was obliged to take them up, got short shrift. The remedy has been clear enough. It consists of the devolution of parliamentary powers to subordinate legislatures, as in Canada and other dominions. The lines of that devolution are now being sought. Sixteen members of the House of Commons, with the Speaker at their head, will shortly consider the establishment of minor parliaments in the British Isles with a view of devolving upon them much of the domestic legislation now coming before the Imperial parliament. Such a scheme is long overdue. It will no doubt go far to relieve parliamentary congestion, and give to the present House of Commons what it now lacks, namely, reasonable opportunity to deal with empire and world affairs, and the great policies which in future must be evolved.

THE OLD TOWN.

The city streets are straight and wide and hurrying on every side
The people crowd and cross and ride and elbow past,
Till down the pavement's noise and beat your feet keep time to swifter feet,
The pulses of the city as it hastens fast;
But oh, the little town streets, the rambling up and down streets,
All the twists and turns are just the way they used to be,
You'd think the very dead you knew might round a lane and smile at you
And nod a careless welcome in the old way cheerily.

The city's gay and wild and kind, and full of joy for you to find,
And all its ways that cross and wind
are blithe each one,
It's like a sweetheart beckoning and,
laughing at the reckoning,
You spring to follow after till your youth-time's done;
But glad of you and sad of you, the little wistful lad of you,
Leaps up to greet the old place when you're grown too old to roam!
It's like your mother calling you—
whatever is befalling you,
The little old town's waiting till you're ready to come home.

Economy of Ford Service

WEAR is unavoidable even in the best car, but certain parts wear out more quickly than others. There is no need of scrapping your car because the piston rings have seen their day, because the platinum points of the vibrators are worn out. Probably the rest of the car is as good as new.

Medical men agree that the human body is renewed, cell by cell, every seven years. You can do the same with your Ford Car and prolong its life at minimum cost by replacing worn parts from time to time.

Ford service has been the means of doubling the lives of hundreds of Ford Cars, and cutting down the cost of motoring. The fact that a Ford Touring Car, which costs $690, f. o. b. Ford, Ont., can be purchased part by part separately for $917 is ample proof of the economy of driving a Ford Car.

It will pay you to have your car overhauled during the winter months. 700 Canadian Dealers and over 2,000 Service Garages supply genuine Ford parts and prompt repair service.

LAST OF CANADIAN KNIGHTS IS GEN. MORRISON

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—Major-General E. W. B. Morrison, K.C.M.G., was formally knighted Wednesday morning by the Prince of Wales.

Sir Edward was the last Canadian knight to be gazetted for knighthood on the final list of Canadian title honors.

It is said that General Morrison has also the distinction of being the first man the Prince of Wales has knighted.

Among the war heroes to be decorated by the Prince is the name of the late Major General M. S. Mercer, of Woodstock, who was killed in action. The decoration of Commander of the Bath was presented by His Royal Highness to the late General's two brothers, J. S. and F. T. Mercer, of Woodstock.

After an illness of only a few hours from heart trouble, James Calnan, of the Picton Gazette passed away at his home on Queen Street, Picton, on Saturday night last, at the advanced age of 81 years and 3 months.

The deceased had suffered from heart trouble for some time but was able to take part in all life's activities until the day of his death, almost without interruption.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week he left the office suffering from an attack of his trouble. Thursday he spent at the home but Friday he was again about as usual. On Saturday morning, however, he was taken seriously ill and passed away about nine o'clock in the evening.

Special Subscriptions of $25,000 From Delora Company

VICTORY LOAN TOTALS ARE CLIMBING—TRENTON LEADING BELLEVILLE TOWARD OBJECTIVE—EMPLOYEES OF STEEL COMPANY WIN BANNER—JUVENILE PARADE.

Another special subscription amounting to $25,000 from the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company and the winning of Prince of Wales' Employees' Banners by the C. N. R. at Trenton and the Marsh Engineering Works were the features of yesterday's Victory Loan Canvass in Hastings County. Another banner was won today by the Steel Company of Canada, this making a total of four concerns now having won this coveted honour. Total day's team members' returns of $89,450 brought the total for the County up to $1,107,650 exclusive of $75,000 specials. Our percentage of objective is now 61.53 against 61.10 per centage of time gone.

Trenton and Deseronto highly distinguished themselves yesterday by bringing in applications which boost their per centages to 96.01 and 86.49 respectively. The splendid showing of Trenton during this week has left Belleville a good deal behind and there is little doubt that our neighboring town will beat us out in the competition to be the first to reach our objectives. Deseronto also expects to win its Prince of Wales' Flag today having some big subscriptions on hand for today.

Mr. W. A. McMurray, canvasser for Tudor, Limerick, and Cashel, leads the County districts in highest returns yesterday, he won his second Prince of Wales' crest for his flag, having gained an additional 25 per cent. This makes a total for him of 150 per cent of his objective.

PARADE TODAY

This morning Belleville school children, headed by the 1st Belleville Troop Leader Charles Hayes, paraded the streets led by Marshal J. J. B Flint. They carried placards advertizing the Loan and made an effective showing in bringing the urgent need for the success of the Loan before the people. The parade wound up at the market square where Major Roscoe Vanderwater made a short speech, urging farmers to give their support to this great national issue. For the splendid support of the school children the local Victory Loan organization is giving a $50 bond to the Board of Education to be used as they see fit in the interests of the children. The 1st Belleville Troop is also being made a present for their funds.

General Debility Following Influenza

Strength Can Only Be Regained by Enriching the Blood

Following a wide spread epidemic of influenza, general debility is on the increase, and its effects may be noticed in the worn listless appearance of so many of the men and women you meet. Influenza always leaves behind it impaired vitality, and with the modern conditions of life that use up nerve force so rapidly, general debility becomes one of the most common maladies. The symptoms of debility vary, but weakness is always present. There is poor digestion, langour, weak, aching back, wakefulness at night, often distressing headaches and a feeling of fatigue. These symptom indicate impure and impoverished blood. It is significant of nearly every attack of influenza that it is followed by anaemia and debility.

For all such run-down conditions, new blood is the most reliable cure. Sufferers should at once begin to make thin blood rich and red with Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Under a fair treatment with this medicine they will realize more and more the health-restoring influence of good rich blood and how this new blood brings a feeling of new strength and increased vitality. Proof is given in the case of Mrs. G. Robertson, Wingham, Ont., who says:—"When the Spanish influenza spread over our town I happened to be one of the first attacked, and the attack was a very severe one, and worse still in the after effects of the trouble left me in continuous misery. I had severe pains in my side felt low-spirited, and with no ambition whatever. My head ached almost continually, my eyes felt heavy, and pimples broke out on my face. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking them for a time I felt like my old self able to do my housework, and feeling well and strong. I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams Pink Pills for the serious after-effects of influenza as I am sure they will restore all sufferers to good health."

You can get these Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A note was sent to Germany last Saturday to the allied powers that the peace treaty will not go into effect until Germany's obligations are executed.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Brockville, Nov. 8.—Charles Douglas, aged twenty-six, a former resident of Alexandria Bay, was accidentally shot in the left shoulder while duck-shooting near Oak Point a short distance west of here. With two friends, Douglas was in a small boat and they were chasing a duck which had been shot and in some manner which none of the party is able to explain a gun was discharged, the shot hitting him in the shoulder and badly shattering it.

KIEV WELL WORTH A VISIT

Capital of the Ukraine Remarkable Combination of Old and New Cities.

Kiev contains about five hundred thousand inhabitants, and comprises four distinct districts, which may also be called separate towns. Podol, the commercial quarter, skirts the river Dnieper, and above it, on a steep declivity, is Lipki, the residential quarter, and an enchanting spot in summer, with its handsome villas embowered in dark, luxuriant foliage.

North of that is Kiev proper, which contains the university and the cathedral of St. Sophia, a building erected in the eleventh century, but so constantly repaired and added to that it is now a huge and towering structure with more than a dozen large golden domes.

Here also are the theaters, hotels and shops, which are quite as modern as those of Petrograd or Moscow. Petchersk, the fourth district, is well worth seeing, for it is honeycombed with caves and catacombs that in olden days were used as places of refuge and as monastic cells, and where, during holy festivals, one can scarcely move through the dense crowds of pilgrims, of whom three hundred thousand annually visit this ancient and revered monastery.

Warships May Carry Mail.

Removing their side armor, protective decks, barbettes and guns would change battle cruisers into fine mail liners with plenty of room for passengers. That is the proposal which has the approval of the Swedish minister of marine for application to the Swedish navy's two largest warships. The vessels so pacificated would have 2,000 tons dead-weight capacity with a displacement of 4,300 tons and a speed of 25 to 30 miles an hour. Sweden's navy numbers 69 war craft of all kinds, all of which are well designed and constructed, but rather small for actual war purposes. This appears to be the first serious indication of a possible peaceful use for naval units.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The Baobab Tree.

The gigantic baobab tree of Central Africa, the trunk of which sometimes attains a diameter of forty feet, often serves as a natural cistern, retaining rain water in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top of the broad trunk. Taking the hint thus afforded by nature, the Arabs artificially hollow out the huge baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains, as a provision against the dry season. These cisterns are in many cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter.

TRY TO PROROGUE BY THIS EVENING

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—If the Government can rush through the bills remaining on the order paper in time to prorogue Parliament this evening it will do so.

In stating that this was the desire of the Government, the Hon. C. J. Doherty last night also said that the two prohibition bills would be introduced. The Government now feels that there will be little opposition to these bills from its own membership What the Opposition will do will be shown.

Considerable doubt was expressed by members that the Government would be able to close the session today but there is no doubt a strenuous attempt will be made to do it.

GETTING RESULTS

Reeve R. T. Gray of Marmora Village and Mr. H. W. Sabine, clerk of the village, were this week in Toronto as a deputation from the Council to confer with Sir Adam Beck, chairman, and Mr. Gaby, chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario re Hydro power for Marmora Village. As a result of the interview more progress was made towards arriving at a satisfactory arrangement than has been made by several months of correspondence by letter. By Dec. 1st at the latest, and probably considerably sooner, a complete statement of the proposed arrangement with an estimate of all costs both for additions, improvements and operations, and a comparison of the cost under the present system with the cost under Hydro, will be ready to lay before the electors showing the advantage and disadvantages of the two systems.

ONE TRAIN CANCELLED

Owing to the coal strike and the consequent shortage of the fuel, the G. T. R. has cancelled one train. It is a way freight on the fifth district running between Brockville and Coteau.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Two young people of Marmora had a norrow escape from drowning and Mr. Philip Sopha lost a valuable horse as a result of an unusual accident. Mr. Lawlor Shannon and Miss Deyell were returning to town after a day's outing with some others, and stopped at the watering place this side of Beaver Creek bridge, to water the horse. While drinking the horse suddenly became frightened at a log and plunged into the river. The water is so low there is only a few feet of shallow water along the shore and then there is a very deep hole at that place. For some unaccountable reason the horse apparently died as soon as it reached deep water and immediately went down and the buggy also began to sink. Mr. Shannon and Miss Deyell just managed to get from under the top of the buggy as it went down. The latter was unable to swim, but fortunately she did not get excited or lose her self-control. She held on to her companion in such a way as to enable him to swim freely and in spite of the fact they had their heavy coats and clothing on, they reached the shore without difficulty When they reached the shore and looked back there wasn't a ripple where the horse and buggy had gone down.

WOMEN'S WAR WORK

Women played a great and important part in the great war and this was never more strikingly emphasized or presented with more interest than in the High School Assembly Hall last evening, when Miss Guest charmed a large audience with an account of her work overseas during the war. Miss Guest is a former teacher at the Belleville High School and needless to say her welcome was a warm one from her many friends here. The lecture was in aid of the Memorial Scholarship Fund.

THE MARKET

While considerable farm product was offered for sale upon the market this morning prices did not by any means lower, in fact in some cases they were higher. This was especially the case with strictly fresh eggs, which were sold as high as 75 cents per dozen. A few basket lots were purchased at 70c. and 72c. per dozen. The ruling price for dairy butter was 65 cents per pound. Dressed fowls were plentiful and a large number were disposed of. Belleville High School War Memorial Scholarship Fund

One year ago Tuesday the greatest war mankind has ever experienced was brought to a close. On the first anniversary we are going to give the Citizens of Belleville an opportunity to perpetuate the memory of the 35 Belleville High School boys who gave their lives on the Empire's battle fields for "Freedom, Home and Loved ones dear."

We ask each one to have some part whether great or small in this most worthy cause. We hope those who call on you will receive a generous donation towards this fund.

The canvassers will be students of the High School and will wear their school colors, black, heliotrope and scarlet. Our objective is $1500.00. Let us go over the top and have something to remember those boys in the years that are to come.

Will you do your part?

MADAME HORMIDAS FOISY

"For three years, I was ill and exhausted and I suffered constantly from Kidney Trouble and Liver Disease. My health was miserable and nothing in the way of medicine did me any good. Then I started to use 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effect was remarkable.

I began to improve immediately and this wonderful fruit medicine entirely restored me to health. All the old pains, headaches, Indigestion and constipation were relieved and once more I was well.

To all who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation, Rheumatic Pains or great Fatigue, I advise the use of 'Fruit-a-tives'."

DEANERY CONFERENCE HELD BY W. A. M. S.

Kingston, Nov. 7.—The Woman's Auxiliary to the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada held a Deanery Conference in St. George's Hall. The meeting was well attended and was opened with prayer and a short address by Rural Dean Crisp, after which Mrs. Leech, Wolfe Island, took the chair

Greetings were read from Mrs. Mortimer Atkinson, secretary for Leeds Deanery, who was unable to be present and a very practical paper entitled "Responsibility" written by Mrs. Atkinson was read by Mrs. Jeremy Taylor.

Mrs. T. Austin Smith was elected Deanery Secretary for Frontenac, succeeding Mrs. J. O. Crisp, who was obliged to resign. Mrs. Reynolds, Brockville, Diocesan chairman for the Forward Movement, said a few words, expressing her readiness to explain, if possible, any misunderstanding in connection with the proposed work.

Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, D.C. L., Dominion Secretary of the Woman's branch of the Anglican Forward Movement, spoke of "The Letter Leaflet," the difficulty in procuring the necessary paper and the great increase in price. Interesting and surprising bits of missionary news were given in the course of Mrs. Cummings' short address. The Forward Movement was briefly touched upon as it was to be fully dealt with at the evening meeting.

Reports were read from the Deaneries of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward and Hastings, showing good work done by the various branches of the W. A. Particularly encouraging were the amounts raised for Indian and Eskimo Endowment Funds and for the general Pledge Fund, which in most cases greatly exceeded the objective. At the close of the meeting tea was served by the ladies of the city branches of the W. A. and a social hour spent.

STOVES! - STOVES!

HOW many hours a day do you spend in your kitchen?

SURELY a good many when you get 1,000 meals a year!

YOUR STOVE is either your best friend or your worst enemy—and you spend a large share of every day in its company.

DO YOU KNOW it costs a comparatively small sum to put the RIGHT stove in your kitchen? GOOD TOOLS — GOOD RESULTS. Every man and woman knows this is so!

WITH THESE FACTS in your mind, you must agree that the Kitchen Range is an important factor in your every-day life.

OUR METHOD YOUR SAVING

Our plan gives you the chance to pay only for what you order. We offer you the best stove on the market today at a price as low as it can be made for cash. You see what you are buying—not a pretty picture, but an actual stove.

Other dealers have to think of their slow-paying customers before they set the price they quote for everybody, or they might lose money. Our prices are for the stove itself—and that is all you are asked to pay for. If you want credit or if you want the stove taken home and set up in working order, we will quote you a fair price, and if we set up the stove we will do the job right.

If you buy from a mail-order house, who will take an interest in setting up your stove properly? If you buy from a mail-order house, how can you tell whether the stove will look as good to you as the picture of it did?

A stove calls for special knowledge in making—Sometimes a poor stove looks well—so beware of the department store mail offer. Buy from stove specialists.
Our way is the only fair way—and it is the short cut to stove satisfaction.

Our Guarantee
IF YOUR STOVE, FOR ANY REASON FAILS TO GIVE SATISFACTORY RESULTS, WE AGREE TO REFUND THE PRICE PAID US ON THIS STOVE, ANY TIME WITHIN 100 DAYS OF THE TIME OF PURCHASING.

The above guarantee applies to every stove we sell. Before buying come in and look them over.

Not Your Money But Your Good Will

We want the good will of every car owner in this town.

We want everyone to say what lots of folks say now—"Willard? That's where you get a square deal and value for every dollar."

We'd rather have your good will than an extra dollar or two on a repair job.

We'd rather sell you a battery that will give longer and better service than to make a living by repairing poor batteries.

Of course good repair work and good batteries cost more, but we believe they make friends and buy good will.

Let's get together.

Punctured

By ANDERSON HALEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

P-z-z-zip! B-s-s-sh! With the sickening swish of escaping air and the harsh grinding of brakes the gray roadster came to an abrupt stop. Jack Raynor sprang out and glanced sharply at his front tires. They were unmistakably flat.

"Well, of all the cursed luck!" he exclaimed in dismay. "Both of 'em and not an extra tube or casing. Nothing for it but to vulcanize the holes!"

Then unaware that a pair of startled brown eyes regarded him intently from behind the roadside tangle of bushes, he proceeded to say other things, uncomplimentary things about the road and the people who frequented it, things which it is unnecessary to repeat, but for which he will doubtless be pardoned by the veteran motorist.

For the mercury had already climbed to the "ninety-in-the-shade" mark. Presently, having exhausted his vocabulary, he flung off his coat, collar and tie, rolled back his sleeves and fell to work jacking up the front wheels.

Meanwhile the owner of the brown eyes, sensing the gravity of the situation, slipped unobserved from her hiding place and, berry pail in hand, sped across the adjacent cornfield to the small brown house beyond.

For a moment she lingered hesitatingly in the doorway. Then she disappeared within. When she came out again she was wearing a crisp brown linen dress with a deep white collar, in place of the faded blue calico, and she had on the bronze shoes and stockings ordinarily reserved for Sundays.

"I wonder if I dare," she whispered to herself in suppressed excitement. "But I'm going to, anyhow. It's the least I can do. He'll never guess how it happened. And it is dreadfully hot and dusty out there. Besides," irrelevantly, "he is splendid looking even when he's angry."

Ten minutes later, as Jack Raynor was ruefully contemplating two sharp tacks that explained the flat tires, his attention was attracted by a rustling in the bushes and, even as he looked, a slender girl of nineteen or twenty emerged, carrying a shining tin pail and a basket. His swift appraising glance noted that she was unusually pretty, with shy brown eyes, an abundance of soft brown hair becomingly arranged, and cheeks that glowed pink beneath their healthy tan.

"I thought you might like a fresh drink," she began timidly, extending the pail. "It—it's so warm this morning—and we do have good water—and on the way I picked these peaches—they're just ripe enough to eat," she concluded setting down the basket.

To Jack Raynor, tired and thirsty from his strenuous work, the sight of the sparkling water was indeed welcome. Smiling his thanks, he accepted the pail and drank eagerly.

"I don't know whether you are a wood nymph or just a sort of human angel," he said returning it to her, "but I was longing for a drink, and I more than appreciate your thoughtfulness. I always felt I should know a nymph if I saw her—that like you, she would be all in brown, with a hint of wild roses in her cheeks and sunlight in her hair. Won't you sit down, Wood Nymph?" he added politely, spreading out his coat by the roadside.

"I—I mustn't," she replied, in the same soft voice, "because you see I don't know you and—"

"Oh, if that's all I can soon set you right," he responded gayly. "I'm Jack Raynor of the state highway department. I'm looking up the route for the new state road, and I was getting on pretty well until the Greyhound," indicating the car, with a nod of his head, "picked up a couple of tacks. I was just cursing my luck when you came along to prove the truth of the old adage about the 'silver lining.' And I'd much prefer to have company while I repair damages."

The girl seated herself gracefully and watched him with interest as he took out his vulcanizing outfit, affixed a rubber patch, clamped it into place, and lighted the gasoline in the container. While he was waiting for it to burn out he sat down beside her.

"Now suppose you tell me about yourself. Of course I know you are a wood nymph, but even they must have names—otherwise there would be no end of confusion."

"There's nothing very interesting to tell," she replied quietly, her eyes fixed on the flame. "I'm Rose Carey, and father and I live in the brown house over there. He carries the mail, so I'm alone all day. He used to be a school principal, and then he developed tuberculosis and was ordered to stay out of doors, so we bought this little place and came here to live. With the mail route and the garden we get along. I had to give up high school, but he has taught me evenings. Mother died when I was a baby—there are just two of us—and I wouldn't for anything have him suspect I'm dissatisfied. In summer, with the flowers and berries and chickens, it's not so bad. But winters are lonesome—sometimes, I just long to see the real world."

For a moment Jack Raynor was silent. Then, to hide the depth of his sympathy, he sprang up quickly and busied himself with the vulcanizer.

"Wood Nymph," he inquired presently, "couldn't you be persuaded to have lunch with me? I brought a substantial one along, and it's only fair to share it with you, since you've supplied the drinks and dessert."

Then, taking her acceptance for granted, he fished out a large box from the rear of the car and deposited it beside her with the comment:

"If you like you may set the table while I finish pumping up these tires."

To them both the wayside meal was a delightful adventure, entered into wholeheartedly and in the spirit of comradeship. Jack Raynor found himself more and more impressed by the charm of his companion and she, herself under his approving gaze grew momentarily more radiant. Her face lost its wistfulness and her brown eyes sparkled with fun. He was sorry, when, the lunch hour over, she rose to go.

"It's been a wonderful party, Wood Nymph," he said smiling down at her. "I have you to thank for turning my bad luck into fortune—now that I know where you live, perhaps you'll permit me to stop without the excuse of repairs. Meanwhile here are the fateful tacks to remember me by."

But even as he laughingly extended them a change came over the girl. She drew back with a little shudder and turned her head away. But the gesture was not quick enough to hide the tears in her brown eyes.

"Why, Wood Nymph," he cried in genuine concern, "what's the matter? Have I offended you? Surely you know that I didn't mean to—I——"

"It—it's not you, it's—oh, you'll never want to see me again when I tell you—I put those tacks in the road myself."

"You put them there?" he repeated wonderingly.

"Yes, be-because I—I wanted something to happen, because I was tired of seeing just the dust of the cars and never any of the people—I put the tacks there this morning when I came out after berries—then behind the bushes I waited—when your car came along I heard what you said and realized the damage I'd caused. I was frightened. First I thought I'd run away, but I wanted to make up a little for what I'd done—so I brought the water and the peaches. When you treated me so like a real friend—I—I couldn't bear to explain and spoil it all, but now," she added, miserably, "I can't let you go without confessing. I'm sorry about the tires, and," fumbling in her pocket, "I'd like to pay for them with my berry money, then I wouldn't feel quite so—so like a—a bandit," she finished, helplessly.

"You poor little girl," he said gently. "Don't you realize I'm grateful to those very tacks for helping me to find you—and of course I can't accept your berry money. But I'll tell you what, you can make it up to the Greyhound, if you like, with your own society, say twenty miles per tack."

With relief he observed that the brown eyes were smiling again.

"You see," he went on, "there's a prospect of running the road through your father's land—naturally that would considerably increase its value. I'll be over to talk to him about it some evening soon, and we can arrange about the ride then. Is it a bargain?"

Brief as it was, the handclasp sent a thrill through his veins. With reluctance he released her slim brown fingers.

"Except that it wouldn't be playing fair, I'm mightily tempted to turn bandit myself and carry you off; but I warn you it will take more than tacks to keep me off this road in the future, and just by way of farewell," he said, climbing into the car—he knew he should kiss her in another moment if he didn't—"let me say that you've achieved your wish, Wood Nymph, something has happened, sure enough, but I'm afraid this time it's a puncture that can't be vulcanized."

Rose Carey watched the gray car until it was lost in the white dust of the road. Then, womanlike, because in her heart she knew the answer perfectly well, she said aloud:

"I wonder what he meant by a 'puncture that can't be vulcanized?'"

Suffering Caused by War.

The name "barbed-wire disease" is found by Bing and Vischer to have probably originated in Switzerland, and it applies to a very marked functional mental disorder. The symptoms, recognizable in most men confined more than six months behind barbed-wire fencing, are severe in about 10 per cent of all prisoners. Increased irritability appears first, followed by diminished power of concentration, and there is much complaint of loss of memory of persons and places. Insomnia is a secondary symptom. Some prisoners have diminished eyesight, many grow suspicious, all tend to pessimism, some reaching an extreme in several days at a time of speechless torpor. Forgetfulness of words is very striking.

Got the Drop.

A certain stingy son of Erin, upon seeing another Irishman just going to drink a glass of whisky, exclaimed:

"Hould on Pat; let an ould friend have a drop, the last taste in the wurrld."

His friend passed the glass, and the stingy one emptied it. Pat was naturally annoyed, and said:

"Bedad, I thought you said you only wanted a drop?"

We may guess his feelings when he received the reply:

"The drop I wanted was at the bottom."

Rabbit is Now in Demand

A MOVEMENT is observable in the United States to page the rabbit in an effort to compete with the high price of foodstuffs. Twenty years ago there was a tremendous boom in many parts of the continent, including Canada, to put the Belgian hare on the market. As most people are aware, the Belgian hare is a rabbit of a brownish red color, weighing ten pounds or more, bred primarily for grace of outline and richness of coloring, and, secondly, as a substitute for beef and other meats. In California the Belgian hare boom must have reminded the old-timers of the boom in 1849. Everybody took to breeding Belgian hares. The climate was eminently suitable, for the hares could remain outdoors the year round. Tremendous prices were paid for breeding stock. Several hundred dollars were freely handed over for a prize buck. There were innumerable shows. Then the boom collapsed. It was found that to breed successfully required much skill and attention. This discouraged those who had rushed into the business without any particular aptitude or training for it. In those days, too, meats were cheap, and there was practically no demand for rabbit skins on the part of the Buntings.

The new rabbit boom is caused as much by the insatiable demand for cheap fur as for cheaper food. At the recent New York sales tremendous numbers of rabbit skins were sold. A few years ago, when wild animal furs were more abundant, or when the demand for them was smaller, there was no market for the rabbit skin. It in not a strong skin; it tears easily. Two years of not too careful use would make a rabbit skin coat not worth the moth balls that preserved it from one season to another. In those days when one bought a fur coat he, or rather she, expected it to last for the best part of a lifetime. Now, since styles have seized upon furs as they formerly seized upon silks, ladies get tired of a particular fur coat in a season or two. Durability has no greater attraction for them than piety. They want change, and if a rabbit skin coat will only look smart for a year, it will be held to have given service. As cheapness is another advantage, for a rabbit skin coat can be bought for from $65 to $150.

Ermine and seal are no longer available except for those of great wealth, and every year finds mink and otter and beaver and other furs that once were as common as the old fashioned buffalo robes, becoming more scarce. This has led to the advance in price and fashion of such furs as muskrat, skunk, cat and rabbit. The muskrat, when dyed and clipped, looks very much like seal at a distance of a hundred yards and under the name of Hudson seal sells for several hundred dollars a suit. There is also another difference not visible to the naked eye. A genuine sealskin coat would last almost a lifetime or even longer if it happened to be a short and merry one; a muskrat coat will last about half as long. As observed, a rabbit skin coat may last almost as long as a rabbit that lives next door to a terrier. It is to be noted, too, as Frederic J. Haskin points out in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, that the skin of the American rabbit is too tender for use as coats and it is only the European rabbit skin that can be thus employed.

The tanning of rabbit skins is a brand-new industry, and a result of the war. With the great fur-producing countries, Russia and Canada, engaged in the war, they were practically sealed as sources of supply. This suggested to a Belgian in the United States that use might be made of tanned rabbit skins as trimmings. In Belgium he had been long familiar with the process, and so he hired a barn in New Jersey, advertised for rabbit skins and set to work. In 1915 he is said to have made $250,000. This year he is advertising for 10,000,000 hides. As pointed out, the rabbit, unlike several other domestic animals, is useful both for its pelt and as food. The flesh is delicate and nourishing, and with the prices of pork and beef at their present altitudes, there is a greater demand for rabbit flesh than can be supplied. The rabbits are extremely prolific, as everybody knows, except Mr. Ellis Parker Butler, who wrote an American classic called "Pigs is Pigs," under the delusion obviously that it was not a rabbit but a guinea pig that held the record in this respect.

These domestic rabbits, whether Dutch, Belgian, Siberian, Lop Ear, English or Flemish, are not to be confounded with the true English hare, even though some of them are called hares. Nor is it to be supposed that their names are derived from the countries of their origin. If the Belgian hare ever saw Belgium, there is not much chance at least that the Siberian ever saw Siberia. All these varieties and a dozen more have been bred, some of them for centuries, some for only short times as domestic pets for show purposes. The smallest and prettiest, perhaps, is the Dutch rabbit, with its black, blue, fawn or grey body and ears, its white collar, breast and feet and the white blaze down the face. The largest is the Flemish giant, weighing twenty pounds. Then there is the French rabbit, with its snowy white, fleecy wool, and the English lop ear, which cannot jump high enough to get its ears off the ground. But it is not to be expected that boys will aid in the effort to popularize rabbit flesh and rabbit skins, the boy's idea being that all rabbits ought to die, if at all, through hardening of the arteries, and be buried with pomp and affection in a flower bed.

FEMALE BOOKBINDERS.

Beautiful Volumes Appeal to Many Collectors.

Women are taking up work as bookbinders.

There are more women than men doing fine profession work in binding, illuminating, etc., presumably because it is chiefly the leisure class that interests itself in the work and America can number but few men in that class. Women in England and in France have taken up the work seriously, too, but there are no signs there that men mean to relinquish their hold on it such as we see here. In the Guild of Bookworkers, a New York society, there are eighty women members, more than half the entire membership.

In England the enemies of fine books are considered to be "firewater, bookworms and women craftsmen," and here, too, the same trade union rules prevail to keep a woman from apprenticing herself to a binder in order to perfect herself in the various steps that lead to complete mastery of the art.

Some persons see in the high price of leather no more deprivation than fewer shoes—or perhaps none. There are more esthetic issues involved. What of levant morocco, of niger, of oases, dearer to the heart of the binder than any sole leather for her heels? Such leathers have gone up to four times their pre-war value.

Women are making books for men to buy, for as book collectors women do not figure in the market at all nowadays. It is easy enough to fancy the collection of Du Barry, whose coat of arms adorn many a famous volume. La Pompadour made books herself, and there is in existence a collection of her drawings—or ornaments, vases, etc. — bound in olive morocco in exquisite taste, the whole made by her own hand for Louis XV.

But the only English queen who was a genuine collector and a real book lover was Queen Charlotte, who actually kept a servant trained especially to pick up first editions on old stalls. One of her famous books, richly bound, is "A Plan for Female Education."

There is still work for calligraphers among the makers of editions de luxes and women still do it professionally. There was once an Esther Inglis who wrote marvelous little manuscripts, miniatures, in fact, for royalty. She lived in the fifteenth century and to have her sign her manuscript, no matter if it were the Psalms of David, and sometimes add her picture to the illuminations was evidently acceptable to her princely patrons.

A love of the beautiful book was never easy to gratify except for royal persons or royal fortunes. That may explain why women of average means possessed of that love are taking up the art of bookmaking to-day.

Japan Seeing a Great Light.

As the news comes out of the East, circumstances are apparently moving toward a distinct change of Japanese policy in Korea. A cartoon in the Jiji-shimpo undoubtedly reflects a wider opinion than that of the readers of this one Tokio journal; it shows a Japanese in military uniform trying to quiet a crying infant, and the perpendicular Japanese caption, translated into English, frankly admits that "Grandpa Japan can never quiet Baby Korea till he takes off that rattling sabre." The Jiji-shimpo, incidentally, is credited with being an authority on the Korean question, and is regarded as a conservative journal. All over the nation people are questioning the wisdom of trying to quiet Baby Korea without discarding the sabre, and expressing in various ways their agreement with the article by Prof. Fukudu of the Tokio College of Commerce, printed in the Tokio Asahi. "Korean discontent," he says, "is deep-rooted and widespread. It cannot be dispelled without removing the fundamental cause of our Korean failure. The fundamental cause is the militaristic character of our administration." One may hope, indeed, that Japan officially is on the way to agree, as so many of her citizens and editors evidently agree already, with the Korean Declaration of Independence when it said: "To-day Korean independence would mean not only life and happiness for us, but also it would mean Japan's departure, from an evil way and exaltation to the place of true protector of the East, so that too, China, even in her dreams, would put all fear of Japan aside. This thought," added the Korean declaration, "comes from no minor resentment, but from a large hope for the future."

King Invented Loving Cup.

It is said that the origin of the "loving cup" is traceable to Henry IV of France. While hunting he strayed from his companions, and feeling thirsty called at a wayside inn for a cup of wine. The serving maid, on handing it to him as he sat on horseback, neglected to present the handle. Some wine was spilled, and the king's white gauntlets were soiled. As he was riding home the thought came to him that a two-handled cup would prevent a recurrence of this accident; so he had a two-handled cup made at the royal potteries and sent it to the inn. On his next visit he called again for wine, when to his astonishment the maid, having received instructions from her mistress to be very careful of the king's cup, presented it to him by holding it herself by each of its handles.

At once the idea struck the king that a cup with three handles was the thing needed. The idea was promptly acted upon, for, as his majesty quaintly said, "Surely out of three handles I shall be able to get one."

Until a few years ago the rate of increase in the population of Japan was a little more than 500,000, but last year's increase is put at close to 800,000.

NOISY "COWBOY WEDDING."

New Zealand Couple Travelled 13,000 Miles to Be Married.

A couple were married not far from London the other day, who a few weeks previously had had a "flip" at Hendon together, says Answers. They enjoyed their first aerial trip so much that they booked the aviator to take them on their honeymoon then and there. The machine in which they departed on their wedding trip of two hundred miles was a limousine, and the cabin in which the happy pair were seated tandem fashion—the only drawback—was decorated with a bouquet of roses.

It was two thirty when the machine left the shadow of the church. Luggage was stored in the back of the machine, and the lady had a book to read, although it is not on record whether she read it or not. The machine arrived at Fowey at 7.30, stopping at Bournemouth and Plymouth en route. The actual flying time was two hours and thirty-five minutes.

A honeymoon down a coal pit sounds a bit weird and dark, but that, at least, was the first trip made by bride and bridegroom after the church ceremony. The bridegroom was a coal pit manager, and his new wife had never been down a coal pit or even seen one till the wedding day. At her own request they went from the church, donned suitable attire, stepped into the cage, and were taken to the bottom of the shaft, where they had a rousing reception from miners armed with pick and shovel.

At one of the Canadian camps there was a cowboy wedding lately, and enough cowboy gear — radiant shirts and neckwear, with the inevitable sheepskin "trews," not to mention the six-shooters — could be found to rig out an escorting band which would not have disgraced the Wild West. After the ceremony the cowboys, who were all suitably mounted on untamable buckskin mustangs and bronchos, gave vent to a fearsome yell, and wildly escorted the happy pair to the train, firing salvos all the way. It was said to be the noisiest wedding on record.

A thirteen-thousand mile honeymoon is a pretty long one, but a good many happy brides are having it now in returning to Australia with their colonial husbands. Yet this is not new. Before the war a couple, both hailing from Auckland, New Zealand, came to a little village church in Cumberland to be married. It was the church where the bride's parents had been married just twenty-five years before. The couple had come thirteen thousand miles to be married in that church, and they set off on their honeymoon back to Auckland.

Lord Reading is nothing if not original. His honeymoon was quite unique. He told his friends that after being called to the bar he was to be married and spend his honeymoon in Spain. That sounded extravagant for a budding barrister, probably not over-burdened with pocket money. But he was business-like even then, and it was found later that a certain firm of solicitors had given him as a wedding present a commission to take evidence in Madrid. So he took his wife with him, and combined business and pleasure.

A young professor of physical culture married a beautiful and athletic pupil of his in the suburbs of Paris. The couple appeared before the mayor in tennis costume, and after the ceremony the wedding party sat down to breakfast on the banks of the Seine. Hardly was the coffee finished than, on a given signal, the whole party retired, and reappeared in bathing costume. Fancy the hardihood of a swim after wedding cake! Later the couple started on a bicycle tour for a honeymoon.

A demobilized man had a honeymoon brain-wave the other week during the hot weather. He arranged to spend his honeymoon under canvas, just to let his new wife see how nice it was. They had a perfectly "dry" time, and the young wife thinks she would like to live under canvas always—instead of returning to a house where rooms need cleaning and windows washing. She says a tent saves labor. But, then, her honeymoon was in summer, and there is the winter to face. Her hubby said: "It's all right, my love, but stop till it snows!"

Land for Soldiers.

Portions of nine Indian reserves in the prairie provinces, comprising 68,000 acres, have been secured by the Soldier Settlement Board of Canada and will be made available for soldier settlement.

The land taken over is all of good agricultural quality and within easy reach of transportation facilities. As much of this land was bought en bloc a readjustment of prices will be necessary after subdivision, all the land in the various blocks not being of the same agricultural value. The necessary survey work and sub-division valuation are causing some delay. A special effort, however, is being made to have the land ready for disposal to soldier settlers as early as possible. The price paid to the Indians averaged from $10 to $20 an acre. The nine parcels are located as follows:

Big River Reserve, 980 acres, northwest of Prince Albert. Mistawasis Reserve, 16,548 acres, northwest of Prince Albert. Piapot's Reserve, 11,600 acres, and 14,730 acres north of Regina. Kakeswistahaw Reserve, 1,903 acres, northeast of Broadview, Sask. Cowesses Reserve, 320 acres, northeast of Broadview, Sask. Ochopawace Reserve, 18,240 acres, northeast of Broadview, Sask. Poorman's Reserve, 8,080 acres, Touchwood Hills, west of Yorkton, Sask. Bobtail Reserve, 6,620 acres, south of Edmonton.

The Agile Rhinoceros.

The rhinoceros, notwithstanding its unwieldy shape and short legs, is one of the most agile of beasts. A horseman can scarcely manage to overtake it, and in strength it is perhaps unsurpassed by any animal in the forest. In a single combat no animal but the elephant can stand up against it. To kill a rhinoceros a rifle ball must strike it just behind the shoulder.

DRIFTING TO THE NORTH POLE.

Norwegian Discoverer in Ice-locked Schooner West of Siberia.

Bound for the North Pole, Roald Amundsen, Norwegian discoverer of the South Pole, is at present drifting in his ice-locked schooner, the Maud, somewhere north of Western Siberia, according to beliefs held by the Seattle Norwegian vice-consulate and Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Canadian Arctic explorer, and quoted by the Aircraft Journal, which goes on:

In planning the trip the explorer said he expected after reaching the pole to return either to Grant Land, west of Greenland, or Melville Island, which lies in the Arctic Ocean north of Canada. Should he reach Melville Island he probably would journey by sea to Nome, Alaska, or overland to Dawson, Yukon Territory.

Two airplanes, it is believed, formed part of the Maud's equipment when she left Norway last fall and sailed through the White Sea bound for the icy north. The final dash to the pole may be made in one of the planes. Amundsen, it is believed, may also fly back to civilization in one of the machines.

Nothing has been heard from Amundsen since September 1, 1918, more than a year ago. At that time the Maud was reported taking oil for her motors at Dixson Island, a White Sea point. After taking oil she sailed northeast into the rapidly freezing water of the Arctic Ocean.

From the White Sea, Amundsen expects to drift east with the ice to the New Siberian Islands, which lie in the Arctic off Siberia.

At the New Siberian Islands, it was believed, the drift would carry the boat toward, if not across, the pole. Amundsen intended to use the airplanes if he found the drift would not carry him across the "top of the earth."

Amundsen in a degree followed the footsteps of his countryman, Fridtjof Nansen. In 1895-1896 Nansen in the Fram started on a drift across the pole, but left his boat and tried unsuccessfully to reach the goal on foot. Later the Fram drifted as close to the pole as Nansen got.

The Maud carries wireless sending apparatus, but no receiving instruments. Amundsen said he would not install the receiving apparatus because he did not want to be worried by news from the outside world.

Canada a Real Rival.

For the first time, so far as present recollection goes, the press of Buffalo has begun to realize that, in so far as grain transportation is concerned, the Dominion of Canada, has become a formidable rival of the United States. The News, in giving the view of State Superintendent of Public Works Edward S. Walsh on the Esch-Pomerene bill, now pending in Congress, as it affects the Erie Barge canal, quotes him as saying that in its present form the bill would involve Federal control of the barge canal system and the fixing of through freight rates, thus seriously impairing the enormous investment the state has made for waterways. It further quotes Mr. Walsh as telling the House Committee on Interstate Commerce:

Place your carriers plying the all-water route from the head of the Great Lakes to seaboard, via the New York canals, subject to regulation so that their rates are rigid and inflexible and what will be the result? The Canadian lines to Montreal will be unregulated and uncontrolled. Grain will follow a route offering the smallest fraction of a cent per bushel saving, and there can be no doubt but that the Canadian carriers, being free to make any rate sufficient to attract the business, will offer this saving.

According to the News it would not be long before the evil effects of this bill would be felt by Buffalo. It declares that the elevators in that city would fall into disuse, "because commerce would be directed to the Canadian water route, and Montreal would grow and prosper at the expense of Buffalo." While this is true, it is not all of the truth for such an outcome would also seriously affect the commerce of New York City, and dispel the dream of Troy, with a deepened Upper Hudson channel, taking its place among the tidewater ports. It is also pointed out that the Canadian Government is too wise to impose any measure of control that would embarrass wholesale competition. — Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Forecasting the "Flu."

With a view to combating effectively the next outbreak of influenza, scientists and doctors have been investigating the causes of epidemics, says Answers.

They have proved that influenza travels in waves, which recur at remarkably coincident times all over the world.

The 1918 epidemic started in China. After this the wave spread to the Pacific coast, in the American soldiers' concentration camps. It then passed across the Middle West, and Chicago was badly attacked in March, 1918. Thence it passed to Europe, and laid low 10,000 of our sailors at Scapa Flow. France received the disease later, and the tail-end of the wave was on the Italian front.

Spring, summer and autumn waves of influenza have been experienced in this country, where it is expected to make a reappearance at a period now being worked out by experts. When further records have been made, it may be possible for these epidemics to be timed as fixedly as astronomical observations.

LOYAL TILL DEATH.

South African Ostrich Is a True Monogamist.

Fifty-five years ago the ostrich was not a domesticated bird in South Africa. True, a few wild ostriches had been captured and kept in captivity for private or public exhibition, but no attempt appears to have been made to farm them seriously. The few ostrich feathers that reached European markets were from wild ostriches, and, commercially, were considered much damaged. Nevertheless they fetched very high prices, which naturally drew the attention of South Africa to the possibilities of the ostrich-feather trade.

The more venturesome stock-breeders and speculators practically started the present extensive ostrich farming industry by offering very high prices for eggs, chicks, or full-grown birds. The Kalahari — the favorite haunt of the wild ostrich — was searched for eggs and chicks, but the demand for some time continued to exceed the supply.

In a comparatively very short time hundreds of domesticated or half-wild ostriches were successfully reared, partly with the help of incubators; but the loss by death through lack of experience was for a long time considerable. Fortunately this drawback has since been largely overcome by the application of new methods which, taken in conjunction with greater attention to selection for breeding purposes, has put South African ostrich farming foremost in the world.

In the life of the ostrich there are some characteristics that deserve mention, because they have been frequently mistated or misunderstood.

In the wild or natural state ostriches pair in the spring. Once paired, they remain paired "till death doth them part." The female, or hen bird, makes a shallow hollow in the ground away from water-courses for her nest. During the sitting period the male remains on the nest by night, the female by day. As the eggs are in greater danger of wild animals by night, this mutual arrangement between the parent birds is as obvious as instructive. On the approach of danger, the parent bird sitting on the nest will put its neck and head flat on the ground in front of it, for by doing so it can be easily mistaken for an ant-heap or low bush. Even while going in search of food it may resort to this deception.

In the domestic state they retain the characteristics observed in their wild state, but in a less degree, owing to less dependence on their natural instincts. In course of time they will no doubt cease to be monogamists—a fate that seems ever to await animals selected by man for domestic use.—Family Herald.

The Cercay Papers.

In the Treaty of Peace occurs a mysterious allusion to some papers: the Cercay papers. The clause stipulates that Germany shall return to France all the political papers seized by the German authorities on October 10, 1870, at the country house of Cercay, then the property of M. Rouher, sometime Cabinet Minister. Not much attention appears to have been paid to the clause in the press of the world, but a London paper, the Sunday Times, has now broken the silence. It tells a remarkable story. When, on October 10, 1870, the seventeenth Meckleneberg division arrived at Cercay, the soldiers proceeded, in the approved German way, to turn Rouher's house upside down. In the process they came upon some papers which they would have scattered and destroyed if it had not been for a German officer who, guessing something of their value, reported their existence and was ordered to send them to Versailles, where Bismarck then was. The Chancellor examined the papers himself, would let no one else see them, and ultimately stowed them away in the state archives where no one, not even Treitschke, has ever set eyes on them. Bismarck had discovered that the fortune of war had put in his possession a correspondence which gave him the complete mastery over his enemies, the recalcitrant states of southern Germany. The nature of the correspondence can be gathered from contemporary history; it was also pretty clearly divulged in a letter published in the Kolnische Zeitung. The writer, "M. von D." Dalwigk, Minister of the Grand Duchy of Hesse, wrote " Though Germany does not actually desire a French invasion, the French if they did come, would be received with open arms." With such letters in his possession Bismarck held the cards. "I cannot help thinking," says a German historian, Ruville, "that we have there the key to the foundation of the German Empire." A French paper, Le Peuple Francais, known to have been inspired by Rouher, declared in so many words that "the confidential correspondence exchanged in 1865 and 1866 between the French Government and the Ministers of Bavaria and Wurtemberg had also been left at Cercay, and are in Prince Bismarck's hands."

Tropical Repartee.

The native West Indian is the greatest controversialist of the tropic world, according to George O. Miller, author of "Prowling About Panama." He illustrates: "A young West Indian woman on the train in Costa Rica left her seat to speak to a friend and another girl slipped in next to the window. When the visitor returned, claims, charges, and counter charges began as to the ownership of the seat. With indescribable scorn the usurper said, 'Do you want a seat in my lap?' which provoked, 'Ah, now I see how you was raised!' 'Indeed, and you have no manners at all.' Back and forth the duel rages until the first claimant finds another seat, saying, 'I certainly does respect myself too highly to sit by the likes of you.' All this with the wholly inimitable British-Jamaican accent."

Breakfast Food.

"What kind of breakfast food have you?" the dyspeptic traveling salesman asked the rural waitress. "We've got all the reg'lar kinds," said she, "ham and eggs, fried steak, fried bacon, griddle cakes, doughnuts an' apple pie. What'll it be?"

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS

CANADA WILL GET MORE AS RESULT OF WAR.

It Is Hoped That the Effect of the Sending of Young Canadians to Oxford Will Prove More Beneficial Now Than It Did Before 1914.

THERE is no escaping the fact that the Rhodes scholars who had gone to Oxford University from Canada before the war had not succeeded, through their efforts at the great English centre of learning or by their achievements after completion of their studies there, in dispelling the doubt in Great Britain, if not in Canada, that the Cecil Rhodes education scheme could have all the good effects contemplated by its founder. Neither in scholarship nor in social influence had the Canadians made themselves preeminent in the Oxford community. Their proficiency in athletics, while acknowledged and employed to advantage in university contests, was not accepted altogether as a creditable asset. They were in some quarters accused of a tendency to hold themselves aloof from the university life, and critics who readily admitted their general qualifications of character and courtesy were inclined to feel that they went rather too definitely for the main chance, concentrating where they might well have expanded, with perhaps overemphasis on frugality where the Rhodes idea could have been more definitely furthered by a regard for comradeship.

All this must be considered, however, as relating to the rarefied days of the period before the war. War conditions brought an enforced cessation of the migrations of Rhodes students; in fact, so far as Germany was concerned, a permanent estoppage by act of Parliament. Now that the war is over, the postponed scholarships are to be filled, and, under revised regulations and changed conditions, possibly Canadian nominees will be progressively more successful in their Oxford relationship. For one thing, they will undoubtedly enjoy, on the whole, a more sincere cordiality of feeling, as between Britons and Canadians, than any which the Rhodes scholars of pre-war days customarily encountered. The very understanding which Cecil Rhodes foresaw as desirable, and aimed so definitely at promoting, has been cultivated by the experiences of the war to a growth which, for many observers, makes the continuance of the Rhodes scholarships appear in a measure superfluous. Of course, such a view is too superficial. The scholarships are desirable and should be maintained. Whatever lack of full fruition could be noted concerning them before the war is enough to emphasize the desirability of continuing them now. And while the war has brought to light the peculiar similarities of Canadians and Britons, it has no less advantageously set forth that there are differentiating characteristics and habits of thought. That so much has been gained of better understanding and more intimate appreciation, by either one for the other, is all the more reason why the Rhodes arrangement should be carried on.

Modifications may be required. Some, that were imperative, have already been made. Scholarships that of old would have taken German students to Oxford will hereafter be the means of increasing the representation from outlying portions of the British Empire. The reasonableness of this decision can hardly be challenged, in view of the impossibility of making the scholarships that are available cover a considerable number of countries other than those of English speech. There is nothing to prevent the German scholarships from going again to Germans, if future developments shall warrant the restoration; but in the meantime they well may go to communities like the Transvaal and the Orange Free State in South Africa, Saskatchewan in Canada, and even Kimberley, the city where Cecil Rhodes became famous.

It was in October, when less than twenty pounds remained to them, that something at last turned up. Turquand had learnt that a subeditor was required on 'The World and his Wife', a weekly journal recently started for the benefit of the English and Americans in Paris. The editor was familiarly known as 'Billy' Beaufort and the backer was a sporting Baronet who had reduced his income from fourteen thousand per annum to eight by financing, and providing with the diamonds which were the brightest feature of her performances, al ady who fancied she was an actress. Beaufort had been the one dramatic critic who did not say she was painful, and it was Beaufort, who had latterly assured the Baronet that 'The World and his Wife' would realize a fortune. He had gone about London assuring people that various enterprises would realize a fortune for thirteen years—that was his business—but the Baronet was the first person who believed him. Then Billy Beaufort took his watch and his scarf-pin and his sleeve-links away from Attenborough's—when in funds he could always pawn himself for a considerable amount—and turned up at the club, whose secretary had been writing him unkind letters on the subject of his subscription, resplendent again. The only alloy to his complacence, though it did not diminish it to any appreciable degree, was that he was scarcely more qualified to edit a paper than he was a landsman to navigate a ship. He described himself as a journalist and the description was probably as accurate as any other he could have furnished of a definite order; but he was a journalist whose attainments were limited to puffing a prospectus and serving up a rechauffe from Truth He was ever attached to a paper for longer than two or three months, but while he was so he was usually attached to a woman too. He drove in hansoms every day of the year; always appeared to have bought his hat half an hour ago; affected a big picotee as a buttonhole, and lived, heaven alone knew how. While he was ridiculed in Fleet Street as a penman, he was treated with deference there on account of his reputed smartness in the City, and—while the City laughed at his business pretensions—there he was respected for his supposed abilities in Fleet Street. So he beamed out of th hansoms perkily and drove from one amosphere of esteem to another waving a gloved hand to clever men who envied him enroute.

In days gone by he had tasted a spell of actual prosperity. By what coup he had made the money and how he had lost it, are details, but he had onw developed the fatal symptom of lovin gto dwell upon that period when he had been so lucky and so courted, and so rich. There is hope for the man who boasts of the thousands he means to make in the future; there is hope for the bore who proses ever so mendaciously about his successes in the present. But the man whose passion it is to brag about his past is doomed he is a man who will succeed no more. If the sporting Baronet had observed this fact, 'The World and his Wife' would never have been started and Billy Beaufort would not have been looking for a subeditor to do the work of it.

Kent obtained the post. Beaufort believed in Turquand's opinion and had always thought him a fool for being so shabby, knowing him to have ten times the brain-power he possessed himself and Turquand had blown Humphrey's rumpet sturdily. He did more than merely recommend him; he declared—wih a recollection of the nurse and baby—that Kent was the man to get, but he aws afraid it would not be worth his while to accept less than seven pounds a week. When the matter was settled, Humphrey sought his friend again, and, wringing his hand, exclaimed:

"You're a pal; but—but, I say, what are a sub-editor's duties?"

All Toronto Is Rushing To Be Vaccinated

EPIDEMIC OF MILD FORM OF SMALLPOX ALARMS RESIDENTS—MAY BE 3,000 CASES OF SMALLPOX IN THE CITY, SAYS M.H.O.—CITY MAY HAVE TO BE QUARANTINED.

Vaccination has become so popular in Toronto that the people are being inoculated against smallpox at the rate of 500 an hour, thirteen doctors officiating at the City Hall. The smallpox epidemic is of course the cause and with free vaccination depots opened all over the city people are taking no chances and are not waiting for compulsion.

The following summary of Toronto's epidemic of a mild form of smallpox was given on Saturday at noon:

Small Pox Statistics.

Diagnosed cases reported, 130.

Cases reported this afternoon, 11.

Estimated number of cases in ciy 2,000 to 3,000.

Vaccination stations open, 8.

Rate of vaccination at City Hall, 500 hour.

Toronto may be quarantined if epidemic is not controlled, says Dr. Hastings.

Dr. Hastings' Warning.

Dr. Hastings put the case strongly in a letter to the Board of Health. He said in part:

"We have been putting forth all possible efforts to control the present outbreak of smallpox which has reached a magnitude far beyond what anyone could have any conception of ten days ago. In my judgment a conservative estimate of the number of cases in the city at the present time would be between two and three thousand. The disease is mild in character. There have not been any deaths nor even any alarming symptoms among those afflicted. However, we may expect in connection with this epidemic a repetition of that which has been observed in all epidemics in the past, and that it that they have gained a foothold for the most part as a result of the mild unrecognized or undiagnosed cases in the early stages of the game.

"What has occurred in the past will unquestionably occur in the future, and the epidemic which is mild in character now, if not gotten under control, which can only be accomplished by efficient vaccination of our people, is likely to assume a virulent form at any time, in the event of which it would become the duty of the Provincial Board to place the city of Toronto under tight quarantine, not permitting either personal traffic or commerce to pass to and from the city during the period of the epidemic.

The time to act is now, after our epidemic has assumed a much more alarming character."

Fines Lindsay Jew For Having Wine

Toronto Rabbi Testifies for Iits Necessity for Religious Purposes.

LINDSAY, Nav. 8.—The matter of wine and its necessity at Jewish religious celebrations came up in the courts here, when a Jew named Applebaum appeared for having homemade wine in his house. L. V. O'Connor, counsel for Applebaum, thought it strange that the first case against a Jew for having wine should be taken up by the Ontario License Board in Lindsay. Lindsay is the home of J. D. Flavelle, Chairman of the License Commissioners.

Detective Lewis of the License Department found a barrel of homemade wine in Applebaum's house. The defendant said it was for religious purposes. Rabbi Jacob Gordon of Toronto testified that according to the law of Moses, which was the law of the Jews, good Hebrews had to have "old, pure" wine for sanctification purposes on Saturdays ond Sundays, especially during the Passover. He admitted that in Toronto wine for such purposes was as old as seven years and over 35 per cent. alcohol.

For the last Passover in Toronto he had secured an order from J. D. Flavelle to use pure wine. If a Jew was poos and could not buy wine he must sell even his garment to secure it. Substitutes were not proper, not even watered wine unless it was impossible to get the pure wine.

The prosecuting counsel admitted

The prosecuting counsel admitted that he did not think Applebaun was trying to break the law. Counsel for the defense said he could not see why Applebaum should be singled out for prosecution any more than any person of another religion might be singled out for partaking of sacramental wnie which, he said, was over two and a half per cent.

Magistrate Bradford said his sympathy was with Applebaum but the act was explicit, and he could not do otherwise than fine the minimum of $300 and costs. He said the defendant might put in an appeal to the Ontario License Board for remission of the fine.

MILK PRICE TOO HIGH.

Kingston, Nov. 10.—The Toronto office of the Canadian Board of Commerce, which looks after complaints within the province, has sent a complete list of all milk dealers and producers who supply milk to the citizens of Kingston. Mayor Newman has also forwarded a list of those comprising the Milk Producers' Association here. The secretary of the Toronto board in his reply to the first complaint, states definitely that the price of milk could not be increased without first having obtained the consent of the Board of Commerce. This the producers and dealers failed to do and citizens are advised to refuse to pay higher rates until they have been endorsed by the Board of Commerce.

Huge Paper Plant For Port Arthur

Great Lakes Paper Co. Will Establish One Costing Four to Five Millions.

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 10—The Great Lakes Paper Company is to commence immediately the erection of a huge plant costing between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, just east of Port Arthur city limits. The plant is to consist of a groundwood mill with an annual output of 30,000 tons a sulphite mill, annual capacity of 7,500 tons, and a newsprint paper mill of 3,300 to 3,500 tons annual output. Power from the Hydro Electric plant at Nipigon will be used, from 12,000 to 16,000 h. p. being contracted for delivery at the plant at a cost of $17.50 per h.p. by Dec. 31, 1920.

Engineers headed by Hardy Ferguson of New York are to be on the ground within a few days. Foundations will be commenced at once if weather permits. The plant is to be in full operation by June , 1921.

The personnel of the company is: Lewis L. Alstead, President Combined Locks Paper Co., Wis.; George Seaman, President Seaman Paper Co., Chicago and James Whalen, President, Port Arthur Shipbuilding Co.

The firm is to employ thousands of men in construction and operation. A site of 100 acres has been given free by J. J. Carrick out of his 600-acre holdings immediately east of Port Arthur. Port Arthur will extend its street railway to the site.

No Homework Before Junior III. Grade

In the opinion of the Department of Education, homework, in the strictest sense of the term, should not be begun before the Junior III. grade is reached. Before that time, however, it is pointed out in a circular issued, the little ones would be glad to have occasional short exercises to do at home in imitation of their elder brothers and sisters. The home exercises of the senior pupils, it is also stated, should consist mainly of interesting reading, a moderate amount of memory work and simple applications of principles already taught, together with written exercises in language. Supervised work in the classroom may well be substituted for many of the exercises that pupils are at present required to do at home.

It is also announced in this circular that the department has under way the alteration and revision of the text-books in grammar, geography, history and arithmetic. Meanwhile, until these books are ready, the department makes certain suggestion in order to lighten the duties of the students, and stress is laid on the importance of teaching the fundamentals—reading, writing, practical arithmetic and spelling.

Lite Sentence For Vile Crime

Justice Kelly Declares Drastic Measures Necessary to Protect Public.

TORONTO, Nov. 8—"The sentence I shall give I intend shall shock the prisoner and may shock the public and the people, who will not do right for right's sake," Mr. Justice Kelly declared in the Assizes before passing a life sentence on Michael O'Hara found guilty by a jury of possibly the worst offence which could be placed on a criminal calendar short of murder. At the outset His Lordship stated that he had failed to find one redeeming feature in the evidence which might help the prisoner who had ordered his life in the vilest lawless manner. The crime of which he was guilty was sufficient to shock the public, and if the community could be shocked it would be the sentence he intended to pass.

"I never in my life before put in a week like the present, which has practically settled with evidence of immorality and such a seance has led me to be very careful and to do my duty," said his Lordship, who agreed with the verdict of the jury which found that O'Hara was the man who committed a dastardly fiendish act against a young woman, without provocation, without any suggestion and in cold blood. The fact that he was arrested at the scene of his crime was, in his Lordship's opinion, a sufficient suggestion that the prisoner intended to commit a similar act. No person was safe with such a man at liberty and because of the extreme gravity of the offence, the fact that the Government recognized that it would be punishable by death, because the public must be protected and the community taught that offences of the kind must cease. "I shall impose a sentence which will perhaps shock yourself and the community I therefore order you to be sentenced to imprisonment for life."

O'Hara accepted his fate without showing any outward sign that he was surprised.

Memorial Service For Heroic Brethern

PTE. BROWN.

PTE. COBOURN.

CAPT. W. H. HUDSON

Members of the two Loyal Orange Lodges of this city on Sunday afternoon attended a memorial service at St. Thomas' Church to commemorate the lives of three of their brethren whose bodies rest in Flanders' fields where poppies grow. There was a good turnout of the members and the service was most appropriate. Headed by the Salvation Army band, playing suitable music, they proceeded to the church. Rev. A. L. Geen, of this city, Past Grand Chaplain for Ontario East, conducted the service and delivered an address worthy of the occasion. Adjutant Goodhew, of the Salvation Army, read the lesson and at an appropriate place in the discourse the names of the three members of the lodges who had made the supreme sacrifice were read, and the last post was sounded by a member of the Salvation Army band. The hymns sung and prayers said were most appropriate.

Rev. Mr. Geen's text was from Rev. xiv:13—"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

In his opening remarks the speaker said they were assembled to honor the memory of the brethren who went forth to fight for King and country and who would not return. They sleep in Flanders' fields. It was a source of thankfulness that so many returned home. A fundamental principle of the Orange Society was loyalty, and the members who went forth obeyed that teaching. The principles of Orangeism were not understood by outsiders. There is no bitterness or hatred, as some think. The teachings of the order are to speak evil of no one, but rather to honor all men, love the brotherhood, fear God, honor the King. We art taught to honor God and also to honor the earthly King. Our brethren went forth imbued with that spirit. The great majority of our brethren have returned home from the war, but no great gathering has yet been tendered them by the municipality. No greater sacrifice does a man perform that when he lays down his life for his brother. They went to defend the grand old flag. A few of them will not return. The words of the text are not those of man, but an angel's voice from heaven. The spirit of God endorses the statement made by the angel. When man was made he came from the hands of the Creator pure, but sin entered into his heart and there was an estrangement from God. The wages of sin is death, but blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. The Lord Jesus Christ says Whoever believeth in Me shall never die, but have eternal life. When God Who loves us saw that man was separated from Him He gave His only Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life. Jesus Christ is the Saviour of mankind. He hath life eternal. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors. Those brothers of ours who went forth to fight our battles, what rest did they receive. Theirs was a constant time of watching. What rest must mean to those who have passed away! And their works shall follow them. They did their work and their deeds live on. Their labor was not in vain To depart and be with Christ is blessed. They have crossed the bar and are face to face with the Pilot of their salvation. They will be forever with the Lord.

"Were the whole realm of nature mine
That were an offering far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my life, my soul, my all."

While the offering was being received the choir rendered a suitable selection. Prof. Wheatley presided at the organ and prefaced the service by playing the Dead March.

Three Lives Lost In Big Fire

Feared That Many More Perished When Georgia Hotel Was Burned—Woman Killed by Leaping to Street.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 8—At least three persons lost their lives and nearly a score injured, several seriously, in a fire at the Wilson Hotel here. Scores of men and women were rescued by firemen. One of the dead was a woman who leaped to the street before the firemenl arrived. Fire Chief Cody said he feared that more bodies might be found in the building.

The flames when discovered had burst out of the windows along the side of the building and five minutes later were sucked up towards the roof. By the time the firemen arrived scores of men and women were hanging out of windows screaming for help. One woman leaped to her death but the others who escaped the flames were brought down on fire ladders. None of the guests were able to save more than a few personal belongings hastily grabbed up, and most of them wore only their night clothes. The injured were rushed to the city hospital where it was said two or three might die.

Closing Session of Parliament

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—Hon. Mr. Doherty, leader of the government, stated in the House of Commons this morning that the Governor-General would attend at four-thirty this afternoon for the purpose of proroguing parliament. Mr. Doherty also stated that while a date had not been fixed parliament would meet again early in 1920. The Government also told Hon. MacKenzie King that so far as he knew Sir Robert Borden was recovering, but he could not say when the Premier would return to Ottawa.

In the Senate Sir James Lougheed moved the second reading of the House of Commons act to amend the Temperance Act and considerable discussion followed. At lunch adjournment the second reading had not been agreed to.

Silent Homage To The Glorious Dead

LONDON, Nov. 9.—King George's proposal that silent homage be paid to the memory of the glorious dead on the first anniversary of the armistice has been welcomed by the nation. There can be no doubt about the unaninimity of the response that may be expected. At 11 o'clock Tuesday morning the nation will cease work for two minutes—the housewife and the servant in the kitchen, the business man in his office, the laborer in the field, the shopman behind his counter, the busman, and the cab driver, and the men and women walking along the street. Even the ships on the ocean highways will slow down and the crews will come to attention for a two-minutes' silence.

Canada Temperance Act Amended By Commons

IMPORTATION OF LIQUOR INTO PROVINCE UNDER PROHIBITION WILL ONLY CEASE WHEN THE PEOPLE OF THAT PROVINCE DECLARE, THROUGH A PLEBISCITE, THAT THEY WISH SUCH IMPORTATION FORBIDDEN.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—The outstanding results of Saturday's sitting of the House of Commons were the passage of the Government's two bills dealing with the subject of prohibition and the acceptance of the Senate's amendments to the bill authorizing the Government to acquire control of the Grand Trunk Railway system. The more important of the two prohibition measures, that to amend the Canada Temperance Act, was not reached until the evening, and was the last item of business discussed. It excited a rather lively debate, and was amended in some respects before it was read a third time. The bill in its original form provided machinery whereby a province might prevent the manufacture of liquor within its territory and importation from other provinces. The legislation provided that a Provincial Legislature, by resolution, might petition the Dominion for a plebiscite upon one or both of the questions, whether or not manufacture of liquor within the province should be prohibited, and whether or not importation of liquor into the province should be forbidden. Within three months of receipt of the petition by the Secretary of State, the Dominion Government was to submit the question or questions to the people and the view of the majority of the voters at the plebiscite, was to rule.

On Saturday the provision for a plebiscite on the question of manufacture was deleted as unnecessary. It was understood clearly that manufacture for export was not to be prohibited, and that the other temperance bill which was passed during the sitting that to amend the Doherty Act, forbids manufacture of liquor when it is known that it will be used in violation of the law of the province in which it is manufactured.

Three Years Between Petitions.

During the discussion in committee of the whole, moreover, the bill was amended to make it clear its machinery could only be available for use by provinces which had already prohibited the sale of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes. Another amendment was inserted in provide that three years must elapse between petitions from any one province. That is to say, if one effort to stop all importations of liquor, except for sacramental, medicinal and industrial purposes, fails, another cannot be made for a period of three years. Still another change in the bill makes provision for repeal of prohibition by the vote of the people at a plebiscite.

Opposed by Porter.

The chief opposition to the bill came from a Unionist, E. Guss Porter, of West Hastings, who, however, stated that the amendments to the legislation remove some of his greatest objections to it. He opposed the bill on the ground that it was a violation of a section of the British North America Act, stipulating that there should be free interchange of products between the provinces, and would likely lead to much litigation, that the Dominion Parliament had no right to delegate its powers to the provinces, that such legislation was not wanted, as indicated by the fate of the Hearst Government, and that the effort to shift responsibility to the province was a bad precedent.

Humbug, Says King.

Hon. W. L. M. Mackenzie King objected that the bill was neither Dominion nor provincial legislation, and was, therefore, simply humbug.

To these objections, Hon. C. J. Doherty replied that the bill was "a measure of conditional prohibition, which the people of a province could have if they wanted it."

He denied that there was any relegation of Federal powers. Because it was impossible to secure a petition of 25 per cent. of the voters of a province, the Dominion was selecting the Provincial Legislatures composed of representatives of the people as a designating body. When the Legislature of any province petitioned for a plebiscite, the Dominion Government acted upon that request. It was simply local option in enlarged areas. The bill to amend the Doherty Act, entitled the Act in aid of provincial prohibitory legislation, which permits the punishment of persons manufacturing liquor intended for use in violation of provincial laws, was passed after comparatively brief debate.

Coal Strike Is A Rebellion In Opinion Of Judge Anderson

THE MOST LAWLESS THING HE EVER SAW—RULES THAT THE UNITED STATES IS LEGALLY STILL AT WAR—GOVERNMENT SUPERIOR TO UNIONS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 10.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America were ordered by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson to withdraw their order calling 400,000 members to strike. The judge also made the restraining order preventing them from furthering the strike a temporary injunction. The union leaders were allowed until six o'clock Nov. 11 to withdraw the strike order.

The judge interrupted arguments of attorneys for the mines to state that his mind was made up on the questions involved. "I think this is the most lawless thing I ever saw in my life," he said. "I consider this rebellion. That is what it is. This Government is supreme even to the Labor unions."

Wedding Bells

OINSCUP—MURPHY

At the Presbytery of the Holy Family Church, at Toronto, Father Coyle officiating, the marriage was celebrated of Katharine Murphy, daughter of the late Dr. John B. Murphy, formerly of Belleville, and Mrs. Murphy, 1247 King Street, Parkdale and Captain Gilbert Osincup, D.S.O., M.C., of the American Army Medical Corps. The bride was attired in a French suit of brown hand-embroidered duvetyn with hat of taupe, and wore a corsage bouquet of sweetheart roses and violets. Her attendant was her sister, Miss Marguerite Murphy, who was gowned in French grey and black with hat to match, and wore Ophelia roses. Captain Louis Des Prez of Florence, Alabama, supported the groom. After the ceremony the guests adjourned to the home of the bride's mother, where the wedding breakfast was served, and then the happy couple left for New York, whence they proceed to their home at

Last Week Of Campaign
$100,000,000 More From Ontario

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION OF $25,000 FROM BELLEVILLE CITY COUNCIL — TRENTON REACHES OBJECTIVE FIRST, WINNING FLAG—TYENDINAGA WINS CREST TO FLAG—PREMIER-ELECT DRURY'S APPEAL.

With 100 per cent. of special subscriptions and a total of $1,236,200 team members subscriptions amounting to 68.67 per cent. of objective, Hastings County has commenced the last and most important week of the Victory Loan campaign. We have a lead of two points on our percentage of time gone, and with the enthusiasm created it looks as if we would substantially oversubscribe.

On this last week Ontario is being asked to buy $100,000,000 worth of Victory Bonds. This means that Hastings must do its part and as canvassers have started out today to go all over their ground again no one will miss the opportunity. The local committee wishes it to be known that if they should be missed by a canvasser bonds can always be bought at County Headquarters, 194 Front Street, or at any bank. In order to subscribe our share everyone must carefully consider how much money they can put into Victory Bonds. The question of security no longer enters into the appeal. It simply becomes a matter of everybody putting in as much money as they possibly can.

$25,000 From City.

A special subscription of $25,000 from the City of Belleville has brought Hastings county up to 100 per cent. of its Special Subscriptions objective. The splendid lead taken by the City Fathers is a splendid example for all citizens. In spite of this fine local rally, Trenton has beaten us in the Prince of Wales Flag race. The neighboring town on Saturday attained its objective and now is 101.65 per cent., while Belleville is only 59.50. Five canvassing districts now have won the Prince's flag and on Saturday Tyendinaga won a crest, having got an additional 25 per cent. Several districts are expected to win their flags by tomorrow evening. Messrs. J. F. Hinchey and G. N. Spafford, Tyendinaga, brought in the highest returns on Saturday.

Appeal from Premier.

One of the first acts of the new Premier-elect, Mr. E. C. Drury, has been to appeal to the people of Ontario to back up the Victory Loan. In an open letter he writes:

"The purchase of Victory Bonds is not only a patriotic duty, but an investment opportunity of most unusual merit. The bonds constitute the best and safest investment in Canada.

"I unqualifiedly commend the Victory Loan to the farmers of Ontario and hope all classes will unite in this patriotic endeavor to make the Loan an overwhelming success."

(Signed) E. C. Drury.
Toronto, Nov. 6th, 1919.

Armistice Night.

Major Roscoe Vanderwater, of Chatterton, will address the big Citizens' Armistice Celebration in the Armouries tomorrow night on behalf of the loan. As a returned soldier with a splendid war record, his message should be most interesting. Everything is in readiness at the Armouries for one of the largest crowds ever gathered together in Belleville. As a free entertainment given by some of the most talented artists locally known followed by a free dance with excellent music, it should be a regular community celebration somewhat of the nature of that held a year ago.

21 Battalion Club Plans Big Dinner

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—At a well attended meeting of the 21st Battalion Club held last evening in the G. W. V. A. annex, final arrangements were made for the battalion banquet to be held in the Russell Hotel on Armistice Day. Old members of the battalion are coming here for the occasion from all over the province, and the affair will doubtless be one of the bigest military entertainments held this year.

Lieut.-Col. H. E. Ponse, D.S.O., M.C., will bring the largest outside contingent. It is to come from Kingston. Major (Rev.) W. E. Kidd, M.C., Cornwall, will bring in a party from that town, and Lieut.-Col. Caldwell, Perth, a well known ex-member of the 21st, will come with a large party from his town and district. Lieut. P. Geen and Lieut. A. Johnstone, Belleville, will bring the party from there. Other towns will be represented, but names of those coming have not yet been definitely secured.

Reports from the various committees working on the preparations were received at last night's meeting, and an exceptionally encouraging one was submitted by the banquet committee. A large number of tickets were reported sold, but more are still available, and ex-members of the battalion are advised to communicate with either Mr. A. Trippitt, 314 York street, or Capt., F. H. Westbeare, 290 Lyon street, to obtain them. Comrade G. O'Keefe presided.

DOCTOR'S RECIPE TO KEEP OLD AGE AT ARM'S LENGTH

Dr. Josiah Oldfield, of London, Eng., known internationally as a physician and writer, has published a prescription for keeping old age at bay.

According to him it is not a question of operation, but a daily diet, which includes dandelion leaves, fowls' eggs, grapes, lettuce, cow's milk, watercress, honey and salads (uncooked).

"Old age," he says, "is largely caused by deposits in the blood vessels and cells of the body of waste matter. So, by adopting a part fruitarian diet, a man, however old, may become young again, because every cell in the body will be replaced by new young cells."

Dr. Oldfield considers that a normal person rightly fed should live to be from 90 to 105 years of age.

Commons Will Discuss The Russian Situation

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Great Britain has no intention of opening peace negotiations with Lenine and Trotsky until the House of Commons has had an opportunity to discuss the subject, Bonar Law declared in the Commons to-day. Bonar Law made this statement in answering questions with reference to Premier Lloyd George's speech at Guildhall on Saturday in which he was supposed to have hinted at an attempt to negotiate peace with the Bolsheviki in Russia. He declared the premier had simply expressed the hope that there would be some method of achieving peace with Russia.

Use of Coal Will Be Restricted

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—In order to obtain more American coal than is needed for emergencies, Canada must adopt restrictions on the use of coal similar to those in effect in the United States. This statement was made today by the railroad administration's central coal committee after the members had read a complaint in the Canadian House of Commons by the Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways, that citizens of Alberta were suffering from lack of fuel. Replying to Mr. Reid's statement that nearly 45,000 Canadian railway cars were held on this side of the boundary against 23,000 American cars in Canada, the railroad administration officials said that the movement of cars was as free and unrestricted as before the strike began. Many of these cars were sent from Canadian roads to coal producing districts of this country before the strike began, it was stated, and they will be returned to their home roads as rapidly as traffic conditions permit.

Shorter Hours Mean Less World Output

Suicidal for Canada to Adopt 8-Hour Law Till U. S. in Agreement

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—S. R. Parsons, Canadian Employers' delegate, has frankly stated the case of Canadian employers on the eight-hour day.

Unless the United States first assented to any such international convention—so Mr. Parsons informed the International Labor Conference—it would be suicidal for Canada to assent.

"We have in Canada," Mr. Parsons said, 'eight or nine million of population. Our industries are young They lack capital. We are struggling. We are alongside a magnificent country of one hundred and ten millions of population, with great industries and great wealth. Until the United States has spoken, Canada must keep silent.

Mr. Parsons did not object to the eight-hour day per se. He objected on the ground of present world-wide conditions and the necessity of production.

To Wreck Civilization

"We cannot," he went on, "bring forward in any country of the world today any regulations which are not based on a proper economic footing and do with them what we call social justice. The thing cannot be done. The two things do not work together.

"Let me just state that if we attempt this it is the surest way of wrecking our civilization, and we have the best civilization today that the world has ever brought forth. Let us take care of it and mend it here and there, but not destroy it."

Mr. Parsons declared that he could not subscribe to the proposals submitted by Mr. Marjoribanks, British Employers' delegate. Further, the proposed international convention was as though a ready-made suit of clothes had been handed out to the different countries, irrespective of the size and condition.

Future is Mortgaged

Mr. Parsons stressed present shortage of man-power and of foodstuffs in all countries. There were huge national obligations which must be met. The countries of the world had mortgaged their futures. Now consideration ought to be given to the question how the mortgages would be paid. The world was not suffering to-day on account of long hours It was suffering for lack of food and clothing.

It had been shown that since the introduction of the eight hour day in France production had fallen off; that a reduction of from ten to eight hours a day meant twenty per cent of a reduction in production.

"Have you ever thought," he asked, "that if we are to have a maximum of hours of work, it might be also wise to have a minimum, in consideration of the world's great need?"

Draw Workers to City

Mr. Barnes, the British Government delegate, in speaking of the proposed 48-hour week convention, had emphasizied that agriculture was excluded. But Mr. [illegible] argued shorter hours to draw workers from the farmers to the cities and workers themselves would suffer as a result of the consequental shortage of foodstuffs and higher prices. Farmers were bound to suffer in another way. Shorter hours in towns and industries would mean dearer agricultural implements and the farmer would have to pay more for his food and clothing. Thus the farmer would be hit in two ways—first, he would not have men enough to work his farm; secondly, because all the farmer used in manufactured articles would be greatly increased in price. If there were a shortage of foodstuffs in the agricultural districts of the North American Continent, workers all over the world were bound to suffer.

Moreover, in Canada there were great seasonal occupations, as lumbering, for instance. There were, in the Dominion great differences of climatic conditions under the proposed convention. There would, therefore, be so many industries and workers excepted on account of climatic and other conditions that the workers who were expected would become utterly dissatisfied. Those having to work over eight hours a day would be discontented, and again production would be reduced.

In Mr. Parsons' view, there was another serious objection to the proposed draft convention. It was, he said, an attempt to deal by legislation with business matters. "This," he contended, "is an economic problem, and I fear that if we try to settle it in our own executive halls, and in a political way, it will get a political and not an economic answer"

In his opinion, too, and attempt to limit the hours of work would mean a death blow to smaller industries and would prevent the establishment of new industries.

Favor Larger Nations

"That," Mr. Parsons continued, "is likewise true of the small and newer nations. It will be the larger nations, if we go into this universal eight-hour day, which will have the great benefit of capital. They will have the benefit of transportation, and, therefore, they, like the great industrial corporations, will cut the melon."

Latest Forecast of Drury Cabinet

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—It is assumed on all sides that E. C. Drury has completed his Cabinet. The Premier-elect is his own guard against premature disclosure of the allotment of his portfolios, but the personnel of the Cabinet is of necessity knowledge that he must share with others.

There is still doubt about the Minister of Education; but with this doubt in mind, the World offers this forecast of the new Cabinet:

President of the Council and Premier—E. C. Drury.

Attorney-General—William F. Nickle, K.C.

Treasurer of the Province—Peter Smith, South Perth.

Provincial Secretary—H. C. Nixon, North Brant.

Minister of Education—Geo. H. Locke, Toronto, or R. H. Grant, Carleton.

Minister of Agriculture—Manning Doherty.

Minister of Public Works—F. C. Biggs, Wentworth.

Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines—Beniah Bowman, Manitoulin.

Minister of Labor—W. R. Rollo, Hamilton.

Without portfolio—Lieut.-Col. Carmichael.

Peter Smith of South Perth has had ample experience in municipal finance to qualify him, and has a personality that is in itself an efficiency bond. Mr. Biggs also has satisfactory qualifications and experience to conduct the public works department, and Mr. Grant, of Carleton, is able to take over either the education department or another. Should education be offered to Mr. Locke, interchange of the two portfolios might follow.

On something like this personnel there would be seven members of the Farmers' party and one Labor man in the Cabinet, and two outsiders. After the by-elections that will have to be held the Government and Labor members would have a clear majority of two.

On the almost certainty that Mr. Drury will have a new cabinet formed some time this week, and the Farmers' party undertake the government of the province, it may be necessary to call an immediate meeting of the legislature in order to make certain amendments to the election act that will enable resignations of seats of members-elect who are willing to make way for the new Premier and some of his colleagues, and the vacancies thus created be filled. At least three and probably five seats may thus be opened.

Mr. Drury could fairly ask Mr. Hartley Dewart and the Conservatives, who, with the Liberal leader's followers constitute the opposition, to consent to such legislation going through at an emergency meeting of the legislature to be called at the earliest possible date. If this legislation is given, the House could then adjourn for thirty days, or whatever time would be necessary to have the elections over, and permit all the members of the new government, as it may be announced this week, to secure seats and prepare a programme of legislation to be submitted at an adjourned session early in the new year.

In regard to the above forecast of the new Cabinet, Mr. Drury said on Saturday that his announcement of the Cabinet would likely be made on Wednesday. And he added that he had already asked Mr. Doherty to be Minister of Agriculture, and Mr. Bowman to head the department of lands, forests and mines, and that both had accepted.

Famous Russian Radical Describes the Suffering Under the Bolshevik Rule

IT is the habit of the admirers and supporters of Bolshevism to regard every report coming from Russia about conditions there which suggests that that country is not a paradise under the benign administration of Lenine and Trotsky as a "lie" concocted by the "capitalist press." The following description of Petrograd under the administration of the Bolshevist dictators is, however, from the pen of Maxim Gorky, the greatest living Russian writer; it has been translated from the papers which he publishes in Petrograd:

"In the men's ward of the Obuchov hospital the famous physicist, Nicholas Alexandrowich Hesechus, was brought in the other day and classified as suffering from 'symptoms of acute exhaustion due to undernourishment.' Prof. Hesechus was formerly so popular as a scientist that many an able student in physics was frequently given the title of 'Hesechus' in honor of the old man. To-day he is 72 years old, and lies in the Obuchov hospital swollen from hunger, his limbs distorted by dropsy.

"This fact does not call for special comment or lamentations. I merely wish to recall that the great French revolution, while it indeed beheaded the great chemist of Lavoisier, still did not permit the other scholars to die from hunger. However, almost anything can be expected from our moral inertia. I should not even be surprised to find a cynic remark here or there:

"'Well, the professor is 72 years old.'

"But even the coarsest of cynics should find himself disarmed in the face of the tragic fact that in the men's ward of the Obuchov hospital there are 134 patients whose sickness is the 'result of insufficient and subnormal nourishment.' Of these patients 59 are under 30 years of age and 30 are under 20 years of age. They are all men accustomed to doing physical labor, who in normal life needed 3,000 calories, but who under the existing rationing of food get only 500 calories, which is less than one-quarter of what they require. Consideration must also be given to the fact that not all of these 500 calories of nourishment that they take is being absorbed by the system. The bread baked out of straw flour, the heads of herring and similar articles of food hurt more than they help.

"Hunger in Petrograd is increasing at frightful speed. Daily people are found in the streets who have fallen in a faint from weakness. Here a driver falls to the pavement, there a major-general, here an officer who is selling newspapers, there a seamstress.

"More horrible, however, than the physical hunger is the ever growing mental exhaustion. Physicians are lately drawing attention to the alarming decline in weight of people who do intellectual labor. This class of men need a thousand calories of food a day less than the man doing hard physical labor, but it is just among them that the loss in weight is becoming alarming. Physicians are warning that these men are rapidly reaching a stage when all their mental energies will be exhausted.

"Petrograd is dying as a city; it is also dying as the centre of intellectual life. In this process of dying there shows itself an almost gruesome submissiveness to fate, the typically Russian passive relation to life."

STRONG SENSE OF HONESTY

Of Course It Was That, and No Other Reason, Which Caused Volunteer's Action.

Loton Horton, the milk magnate, was talking about the terrific New York milk strike.

"Oh, well," he said, apropos of an opponent's honesty—"oh, well, we're all honest when it pays to be. We're all more or less like the volunteer."

"The volunteer?" said the reporter.

"It's a story," Mr. Horton explained. "A movie actress, the prettiest movie actress in Los Angeles, was conducting a recruiting campaign at a bazar, and she guaranteed to kiss every young man who would volunteer to fight for Uncle Sam.

"Well, there were lots of volunteers, of course, and the actress permitted each of them to kiss her, and they did so, while the crowd laughed and applauded, in a polite, gentlemanly manner.

"But one volunteer seemed to lose his head. He threw his arms about the lovely actress and kissed her with such abandon that she was almost suffocated, and had to push him away. Yes, she pushed him away, her eyes blazing, but he stalked off to the recruiting office without a word of apology.

"An hour later the fellow dashed into the hall again, seized the actress once more in his arms, and pressed his lips to hers in a kiss more passionate than before. Again she pushed him off.

"'You fresh chump,' she hissed, 'what do you mean? You had your kiss an hour ago!'

"'But the recruiting office turned me down,' he said, 'and so, like an honest man, I had to give it back to you, didn't I?'"

DRANK TOAST TO WILHELM

Field Marshal Hindenburg and Army Staff Observed the Birthday of the Former Kaiser.

From a report of the Cassel Allgemeine Zeitung, as cited in the Vossiche Zeitung, it appears that, despite all denials, the ex-kaiser's birthday was celebrated at the Germany army headquarters. The journal says that Marshal von Hindenburg referred to the ex-kaiser as follows:

"Even people of different views would consider it cowardice and disloyalty if we should hesitate to admit frankly that we are thinking today with love, gratitude, reverence and great sorrow of the kaiser, to whom we have hitherto devoted our lives and our actions, and for whom we were ever ready to stake our blood and our treasure for the welfare of the fatherland. May God bless him and give him strength to bear the heavy burden which God's inscrutable will has placed upon him. Let us drink a silent toast to his health with this sincere wish from our loyal hearts."

HE FEELS NO PAIN.

Extraordinary Canadian Who Mystifies Hospital Authorities.

Nothing more serious than mumps was the cause of a Canadian soldier being discovered who is claimed to be the most remarkable man in the world. This is an unquestionable conclusion to be drawn from a description of the extraordinary warrior given in the London Lancet.

The man was originally a Breton sailor. He emigrated to Canada eight years ago, and enlisted in the Canadian army. Later he developed mumps and was sent to a military hospital, where his remarkable qualities were discovered.

It was observed that the patient was a well-developed, powerful-looking man of a very cheerful, even temperament, good natured and far removed from the neurotic or hysterical type. But he was found to be almost entirely devoid of sensation.

He is insensible to pain and has undergone serious operations without any anaesthetic. His body is plentifully strewn with the scars of wounds and burns that he has inflicted on himself for bets or to astonish the onlookers. The author of the account in the Lancet tells of seeing him hold a burning match against the skin of his arm and then pick off the charred fibre. He has never suffered from headache, toothache, or pain of any other description.

The patient possesses no sense of touch. He cannot distinguish between heat or cold, whether in the temperature of food or of the weather, and fever and chills cause him to perspire or shiver, but without any sensation of cold or heat.

No sense of muscular position seems present and the man says that he can not tell whether his arms or legs are moving or not. He has no sense of fatigue and the only way that he is made aware of failing strength after prolonged and violent effort is by his falling to the ground.

He is unable to find his nose without guiding his hands by sight and if he be moved about when his eyes are closed he is ignorant of the fact.

All notion of smell is absent. Even fuming nitric acid was ineffective when strongly inhaled.

The man is mentally sound and rather above than below the average of intelligence. As a child he appears to have had a slight sense of touch, and he dates its complete disappearance from the time when he had an attack of yellow fever in Sangal at the age of seventeen. His sight and hearing, however, seem to be normal.

Double Bottoms Put to Work.

For many years a few steamships from the far east have brought fuel oil back to Britain in the ballast space between their inner and outer hulls. The practice never became general, however, and "tankers" continued to handle the bulk of the trade. But in June, 1917, increased submarine activity and the expansion of the allied fleets made immediate additions to tank tonnage so imperative that not a few, but hundreds, of British and American "double bottoms" were fitted for this auxiliary cargo. Apart from its war-time results this new practice has taught marine engineers many lessons that will guide them in designing the oil-burning ships of tomorrow.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

IN STRIKING COLOR SCHEME

Rainbow Effect Employed for Many Things Besides the Costumes for Bridals and Parties.

Rainbow effects are much in vogue, and there are rainbow weddings now at which the bridesmaids all appear in gowns of the same design, but each is a different hue. And there are rainbow party dresses that are much in demand among the younger girls. But these rainbows are not always of the regulation sort. The people who plan them have a different color scheme.

Take, for instance, a very charming trousseau set offered in one of the smart shops. It contains, aside from the usual supply of lingerie, so-called, all sorts of dainties for the boudoir—chaise longue covers, clothes hangers, shoe trees, cushions, bags, etc. These are developed in a rainbow that consists of pastel green, yellow, blue, ivory white and shell pink. Not a bad combination of colors, to be sure, and perhaps under the circumstances a better color scheme than nature's own.

BOTH PRETTY AND DURABLE

Home-Knit Towel That Was a Favorite in the Days When Grandmother Was Young.

This is the kind of towel used by our ancestors, the directions for making it being copied from a Godey's Magazine, dated 1850.

Buy or spin a few skeins or balls of heavy cotton yarn. No. 4 wears well, but finer can be used if desired. Cast 65 or 70 stitches on long needles; knit plain back and forth until you have it the desired length.

A pretty colored border can be knit in if you wish to have it quite fancy; blue or pink or yellow, or all three in stripes make a real pretty border. Heavy lace can be crocheted on each end if preferred. These towels if well knit of good yarn will last for years used for a bath towel. Do not knit too tightly.

REMOVING WAR SHACKLES FROM TRADE.

Canada has removed nearly all import and export restrictions which owed their origin to enemy trading regulations. During the war it was necessary to prohibit all trading with the enemy, directly or indirectly. On the conclusion of peace with Germany the necessity for this prohibition ceased. Exports are untrammelled now so far as war restrictions are concerned, except certain war material to a few European countries and a wide range of commodities to Russia. Export licenses are freely granted for shipments to Asiatic Russia and those parts of European Russia not under Bolshevik control.

There are, of course, a few commodities, wheat and wheat products, sugar, hides and leather, narcotics, gold and Russian rouble notes, the export of which to all countries can be made only under license.

There are no import restrictions based on war conditions, except in regard to Russian rouble notes. A few commodities including wheat and wheat products, sugars, narcotics, liquors, fire arms, oleomargarine, are controlled imports from all countries.

NATIONAL FISH DAY.

Keeping in view the great asset Canada has in her fisheries, the action of the Canadian Fisheries Association in setting apart one day in the year to be known as "National Fish Day" is an appropriate one.

This year Tuesday, November 11th—Armistice Day—has been so set apart, and efforts are being made to have fish used and especially featured in every home, hotel, dining car, etc., that day, with the object of drawing special attention to the desirability of the general use of fish as food in this country.

One of Canada's greatest natural resources are her fisheries. They are now worth to this country over fifty million dollars annually and they give employment to about one hundred thousand people; but keeping in view that Canada has fisheries that are second to none anywhere, not only in their extensiveness, but in their quality, variety and abundance, there is every reason why fisheries productions should be rapidly expanded.

From a food standpoint fish is equally as nourishing as meat; when it is properly cooked it is quite as palatable and it is much cheaper. There is, therefore, virtue in the slogan of the Association—"Eat Fish and Reduce the Cost of Living."

Fish and particularly sea fish should always be plentiful and cheap. At the point of production it is very cheap today; but as the demand for it in the interior parts of the country is not yet large enough to enable it, as a general thing, to be shipped in carload lots, the cost of transportation is now at the maximum. Also the retailers as a usual thing do not handle fish in great volume and so require a larger margin of profit than would otherwise be the case. Therefore, unlike most other foods the greater the demand for fish the cheaper it can be supplied, as fish costs nothing to produce beyond the value of the equipment and the labor employed in catching it.

Another piece of sound public advice is to not confine use of fish to a few well known varieties such as cod, haddock, halibut, etc. There are several other species such as flounders, locally known as plaice, soles, dabs, etc.,—skate, the wings of which are excellent food, pollock, hake, cusk, etc., which are plentiful and cheap, because they are not yet in much demand. Such fish find a ready market in the older countries and should in Canada.

It is perfectly feasible to have fish in one form or another continually available in all parts of Canada. Where fresh fish on ice cannot always be delivered in perfect condition, frozen fresh fish, or canned fresh fish can be, in addition to all kinds of the cured article.

There is an unwarranted prejudice against frozen fish. Investigation has shown beyond question that a fish firm and fresh from the water that is properly frozen forthwith, that is shipped frozen in refrigerator cars and never thawed out until it is defrosted slowly in cold water in the kitchen of the consumer is the very next best thing to the same fish when it leaves the fisherman's boat. The general use of frozen fish in this country at all times of the year would, in a large measure, solve transportation problems, and would enable fish to reach the consumer always in perfect condition and at lower prices.

Also attention should be given to the excellence of canned fish. The firm fresh fish direct from the cold water, after being thoroughly cleaned and washed, are placed in the cans and are hermetically sealed and cooked with absolute thoroughness. In this form they will keep practically an unlimited period without any deterioration regardless of weather condition, and in using them there is no waste but the can.

The Fisheries Branch of the Department of the Naval Service, which is doing much to promote the general use of fish, strongly endorses "National Fish Day."

FELLOW-FEELING.

It kind of helps a fellow
When his luck has hit him hard
And the hand of fate has dealt him
One by one a losing card
Till it seems the game's agin him,
And he's had a crooked deal,
Just to have a chap come up and say
"I know just how you feel."

And it kind of helps a fellow
When his biz is on the blink
And the bank has put the screws on Till it's either swim or sink,
When his creditors and bailiff
Are hooked to make a double steal,
Just to get a friendly handshake with
"I know just how you feel."

And it kind of helps a fellow
When he's played a no-count game,
And the umpire calls "Strike three; you're out!"
And he knows he is to blame,
While he's walking to the side-lines
And his shame he can't conceal,
Just to hear a fellow-player say
"I know, Bud, how you feel."

The Northland Of Romance

Robert W. Service is the wonderful exponent and interpreter of the great lone Northland of Canada, the land of unlimited possibilities, with its snow-capped mountains, verdure-clad valleys, mighty streams whose depths disclose veins of gold, silver, copper and various minerals, the land of silences, only broken by the roar of the tempests, the stealthy tread of animals, and the stately march of thousands of caribou, the land where crimson and golden splendors of the Aurora Borealis fill the sky with an effulgence of beauty, only disclosed to those who traverse its valleys and mountains.

The enclosed poem was written by H. A. Cody, and is styled "The Lilt of the Northland."—J. J. B. Flint.

THE LILT OF THE NORTHLAND

By H. A. Cody.

("The magnitude of Canada's possibilities is but faintly comprehended." —Newspaper).

This is the lilt of the Northland,
The song with its far-pulsing thrill,
The strong, glad call of the freeland,
Of forest, of mountain, and rill.

Wrapped in a mystic enchantment, silent for ages I've lain,
Nursing my manifold offspring, treasures of mountain and plain.
Now I have roused from my slumber, now I have sprung from my lair,
Sinewy, lithesome, and fearless, eager to do and to dare.
Fresh as the bloom of the morning, glad as the heart of a child;
Strong as the great surging ocean, strange as the moods of the wild,
Bear, winds of heaven, a message; hearken, ye nations out-worn,
Far to the lone sweeping Northland, stands an empire greeting the morn.

Strong are my towering mountains, rock-ribbed from summit to base,
Scarred by the play of the ages, with Eternity stamped in their face.
Lashed by the tempests of heaven, crested by legions of snow;
Cradles of wild rushing rivers, founts for the valleys below.
They who would conquer my mountains, they who would climb my rough stairs,
Come from the lowlands of labor, valleys of patience and prayers.
Nealed in the furnace of trial, stung by a larger hope,
These are the men I am calling, calling my mountains to cope.

Grand are my clear flowing rivers, flung through a great land, and free;
Veins of a vast throbbing purpose, chains in an ageless decree;
Creeping through wild rolling lowlands, pulsing through stark solitudes,
Clanging through grim flinty canyons, snarling in rapids' wild moods.
These are my untamed rivers, these for the untamed men,
Anaks who know not the kennel, who know not the brothel or "pen".
Suckled by Spartan-like mothers, reared to the strains of great themes,
These are the men I am calling, calling to harness my streams.

Come, 'tis a giant that's calling, flung are the gates ajar;
Come, 'tis a Great Heart pleading, pleading to near and to far.
Treasures are here for the asking, manifold, priceless, untold,
Waiting the keys of the vanguard, Tarshish-like spirits, and bold;
Land for your cities and gardens, gold for your coffers rare;
Steel for the thews of the stripling, wine for the cheeks of the fair.
Come, I am calling and waiting, flung are my gates ajar;
Come, for the long trail is ready; track up by the great compass star.

A Laugh or Two

Made a Difference.

They had just been introduced to each other at the reception. Presently the younger girl, glancing at a man who had recently entered, remarked: "I can't think what's the matter with that tall, dark man over there. Just before you came he was staring hard at me, and looked as though he wanted to be introduced. Now he's turned his back on me. I wonder why."

"Perhaps," said the other, "it's because he saw me come in. I'm his wife!"

One for Two.

Embarrassed Young Man: "Have you—er—got any cradles?"

Shopman—"Yes, sir."

Young Man (becoming still more embarrassed)—"In cases where—when it wasn't just—just what you expected you know—and—and you have to buy cradles, you know, is it customary to buy two cradles or—or one cradle big enough for both of 'em?"

His Suggestion.

"We'll have to economize this Christmas, my dear."

"Yes, but how?"

"Ive an idea. Let's give your relatives the same kind of cheap gifts we always give my folks."

What He Came For.

Mrs. Backpay—"Good morning, sir! Will you take a chair?"

Instalment Collector—"No, thank you, ma'am, I've come to take the piano."

OTTAWA WINTER FAIR.

A big profitable stock, meat and produce trade is open to Canada, overseas and the success of the live stock industry in this country depends upon the extent and variety of our export trade. Our live stock and live stock products available for export at the present time, fall a long way short of meeting the demand so that the extension of all branches of the live stock business and the number of those engaged in it is very important at the present time.

Live Stock Exhibitions and Fat Stock Shows occupy a very important position in the improvement of our live stock industry and can do a great deal towards improving the industry during the reconstruction period. It is our show rings that develop breed type, and set standards for the various classes of live stock, and where the breeders exhibit, the results of their breeding ideals and feeding ability, and it is here also that the young breeder and farmer learn the type of the different breeds and the requirements of the market. The Ottawa Winter Fair plays a very important part in the development of our live stock industry in this connection in stimulating breeding of better live stock and in properly finishing animals for market. The Board of Directors are doing everything possible to make the show to be held in January next of the greatest possible benefit to all classes and to encourage the development of our live stock industry at this critical time. People from all parts of Ontario attending the Winter Fair will undoubtedly see the greatest fat stock and poultry show ever held in the east.

The prize lists for the Ottawa Winter Fair will be ready about Nov. 15th and may be obtained on application to the Secretary. See advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

LEONARD MERRICK

Exhilaration and misgivings were mixed in equal parts in his breast.

Turquand laughed, as nearly as he could be said to ever approach a laugh.

"The sub on 'The World and his Wife' will have o cut 'pars' out of the English society journals and the Paris 'dailes' and 'put 'em all in different language—the more indifferent, the better,' He must handle the scissors without fatigue and arrange with some one on this side to supply a column of London theatrical news every week—out of the previous Saturday's Telegraph. Say with me. It's worth a guinea and I may as well have it as anybody else."

"You are appointed our London dramatic critic," said Kent. "Won't you have thirty bob?"

"A guinea's the market price; and I can have some cards printed, and go to the theatres for nothing, you see, when I feel like it. They don't take any stock in 'The Outpost'. He must attend the representations generales himself and make all the acquaintances he can "against the time" when the rag "busts.""

""Busts!"" echoed Kent. "Is it going to bust ?"

"Oh, it will live, my boy. If it had been a permanent job, I shouldn't have handed it over to you I'm not a philanthropist. But it will give you a chance to turn round, and an enlightened publisher may discern the merits of 'The Eye of the Beholder' in the meanwhile. You'd better go on looking for something while you are on the thing; perhaps you'll be able to get the Paris Correspondence for a paper, if you try."

"What more? What besides the scissors—nothing?"

"There's the paste; I don't imagine you'll need much else."

"You're a trump!" repeated!" repeased Kent gratefully. "I feel an awful fraud taking such a berth, Turk; but in this world one has to do what one———"

"Can't!"

"Exacly; and, by George! it seems a better paid line than what one can though I sholud have thought it was more overcrowded."

"There is always room at the top, you know," said Turquand. "When you rise in what you can't do, the emolument is dazzling!"

Beaufort was returning to Paris the same day and he was anxious for Kent to join him there with all possible speed. Kent's first intention was to go alone ,and let Cynthia follow him at her leisure; but when he reached home and cried, 'Mary, you shall ride in your carriage, and Charles shall go to Eton' she would not hear of it.

"I can be ready by Wednesday or Thursday at the latest," she exclaimed delightedly, when the explanation was forthcoming. "What did you mean by 'Charles' and 'Mary?' Oh, Humphrey, didn't I tell you it would all come all right! How lovely! and how astonished mamma and papa will be!"

"Yes, I fancy it will surprise 'em a trifle," he said. "We'll go round there this evening, shall we? And we'll put the salary in francs—it sounds more." He hesitated. "I say, do you think nurse will mind living in Paris?"

Cynthia paled.

"I must ask her; I hadn't thought of that. Oh......oh, I dare say I will be able to get her. It's rather a hurry for her, though, isn't it? She does so dislike being hurried."

"Tell her at once, then" he suggested; "she'll have all the more time to prepare in. Run up to her now."

"Let—let us think," murmured Cynthia; "we'll consider....Ann must be sent away, and we shall have to give her a month's wages instead of notice."

"She's no loss," he observed. "I don't know that your mother ever saw in her. She can't even cook a steak, the wench!"

"She fries them, dear.

"I know she does," said Kent. "A woman who'd fry a steak would do a murder! Well, we shall have to give her a month's wages instead of notice—it's an iniquitous law! But what about nurse?"

"Perhaps," said Cynthia, nervously "if you were to mention it to her, darling—if you don't mind———"

"Of course I don't mind," he answered, but without alacrity. "What an idea! Tell Ann to send her down."

She entered presently, an important young person in a stiff white frock: and he played with the newspaper, trying to feel that he had grown quite accustomed to seeing an important young person in his service.

"You wished to speak to me, madam, but baby will be waking directly."

"I shan't keep you a moment," said Kent. "Er—er—your mistress and I are going to Paris; we shall be there for some time, I suppose it's all the same to you where you live? We want you to be ready by Thursday, nurse."

"To Paris!" said nurse, with cold amazement, and a pause that said even more.

Cynthia became immediately engrossed by a bowl of flowers over which she had been bending and Kent felt that after all, Paris was a long way off.

"I suppose it's all the same to you where you are?" he said again though he no longer supposed anything of the sort. "And there are three days for you to pack in, you know—three nice full days."

"Three days sir," she echoed reproachfully, "to go abroad! May I ask if you would be staying in a place like that all the winter, sir?"

"Yes, certainly through the winter—or probably so. It might not be so long; it depends."

"I could not undertake to leave home for good air," said the nurse "I am engaged! Which my friend lives in 'Olloway, and———"

"Oh, it wouldn't be for good," declared Cynthia ingratiatingly; "we couldn't stay there for good ourselves—oh no! And of course, if you found we stopped too long to suit you, nurse why, you could leave us when you liked, couldn't you? Though Mr. Kent and I would both be very sorry to lose you, I'm sure."

They looked at her pleadingly while she meditated.

"What baby will do, I dunno, madam," she said; "a-changing his cow, poor little dear!"

"Will it hurt him?" demanded the mother and father, in a breath.

"If you have the doctor's consent, madam, you may chance it. It isn't a thing that Hi would hever advise."

"Well, well, look here," said Kent; "we'll see Dr. Roberts about it to-day and if he says there's no risk, that'll settle it. You will get ready to start Thursday morning, nurse."

"I will hendeavor to do so, sir," she said with dignity.

They felt that on the whole she had been gracious and Kent, having obtained Dr. Roberts' sanction to change the cow, commissioned a house-agent to try to let No. 64 furnished at four guineas a week.

AFTER-EFFECTS OF "FLU"

KAMLOOPS MAN SUFFERING FROM RHEUMATISM AND ASTHMA FINDS RELIEF IN T.R.C.'S.

"On recovering from the 'flu,' I was subject to severe pains in my hips and loins," writes Mr. Charles Vanhear of Kamloops, B.C. "I got steadily worse until finally I was carried to the General Hospital helpless with Rheumatism. There I got worse instead of better. My weight fell to 107 pounds. Some months before I had read about T.R.C.'s. I wrote you, stating my case. You sent me a large box of T.R.C.'s. Though still in hospital I began using them. In three weeks I was up and walking. When I had finished the box I felt completely cured.

"A few weeks later, however, the pains returned. I sent for two small boxes. When they came I was in bad shape from Rheumatism and Asthma. I hadn't slept for nights without inhaling herb-smoke. One day's treatment this time stopped my pains, and also to my astonishment completely rid me of asthma, and I have not been troubled since." Ask your druggist for T.R.C.'s. DOCTOR SUGGESTS AIRSHIPS AS CONSUMPTION SANATORIA

London, Nov. 10.—The employment of airships as sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis and other diseases is advocated by a doctor who was attached to the British Air Force during the war, according to the Globe. The patients, it is pointed out, would be able to live for several days, or even weeks, at a height of about 5000 feet, enjoying complete rest and breathing air as pure and invigorating as that of any of the famous mountain resorts, which only the rich can afford to visit. The big airships built by Great Britain for war purposes, the

Come on Everybody! Shove the Indicator Forward

YOU dare not let Canada's Prosperity Indicator slip back; you must keep shoving it forward. Every dollar added shoves it over that much nearer to Continued Prosperity.

Great Britain is prepared to place large orders in Canada, but she is temporarily unable to pay cash for them.

Canada can get these orders if sh gives Great Britain credit. Canada can give this credit if you provide the money to pay the workers on these orders.

You will provide the money through your purchase of Victory Bonds.

Therefore the more Victory Bonds you buy the more orders Canada will get—the more money there will be to distribute among our workers—the more money there will be put in circulation for the benefit of all.

Canada's Prosperity will be in proportion to Canada's purchase of Victory Bonds.

There are only five more days.

Shove the indicator over into Continued Prosperity.

S. BURROWS, BELLEVILLE

Crown Prince of Italy, Who Is Going to England, Idolized by His Countrymen

PRINCE HUMBERT, or Umberto as they say in Italy, who is going to England to learn English, is absolutely idolized by the Italians. Though he is not yet fifteen, he has won a place in the affections of his future subjects which is almost as great as that of the king himself.

The soldiers have a special toast for the prince, "The boy who wants to fight," as they affectionately call him. As soon, in fact, as Italy entered the war he asked to be allowed to go to the front, though only twelve years old.

"I want to fight for my father and my country," he told his tutor, and it was only when he showed how disappointed he was at not getting his wish that his father promised him, as a birthday present, he should be allowed to visit the Italian front There the soldiers cheered him to the echo.

The prince is a Boy Scout, and the most enthusiastic Boy Scout in Italy. He is out in all weathers in his scouting uniform taking part in the training, and, until the armistice was signed, talking always of the time when he could take part in the fighting and put his scouting knowledge to greater use.

CROWN PRINCE OF ITALY.

Once, however, that sunny smile came off. It was at a fete held at the Royal Palace in aid of the Red Cross. That afternoon he looked as glum as a boy can look.

Dressed in a spotlessly white sailor suit, with white shoes and stockings, and a white sailor hat, he looked very different from the uniformed Boy Scout whose photograph was to be seen all over Italy. But the thing which made him so glum was that he had a number of Boy Scouts as his escort, and he could not keep from them the disgust at his own attire.

He was given a big basket of photographs of himself to sell for the Red Cross, and he complained bitterly to his mother that he wanted to be a boy and be treated like other boys, and not like a girl. Nothing in fact would satisfy him till he was allowed to change into Boy Scouts' uniform.

Moving Silhouettes.

A new pleasure impends for the patrons of the motion picture theatre, and, for all one knows, a new form of entertainment which may develop a wider scope than one might at first imagine. Everybody is more or less acquainted with the amusing quality of pictured silhouettes, those comic shadows which are almost invariably decorative as well as entertaining; and now that the way has been found to impart movement to them on the picture screen, the results can hardly fail to give pleasure to large numbers of people. As the thing is done mechanically, the actors perform in front of a brightly illuminated screen, and the motion picture camera takes them as silhouettes. By combining silhouettes that have been drawn by hand with those made by the actors the field of shadow drama is opened to all sorts of fantastic effects. Here one may foresee "movies" for children to which no critic can object.

Knew Nearly Everybody.

An Erie man took his nine-year-old daughter along with him to K. C. the other day. Arriving at the Union Station they started uptown and, when two blocks from the depot, this Erie man said to his daughter:

"Hold my suitcase, dear, there's a man in here I know."

They walked past three more buildings and again it was, "Hold my suitcase, dear, there's a man in here I know." And then they walked on to the corner and dad once more said:

"Hold my suitcase, dear, there's a man in here I know." When he came from the building this time the nine-year-old Erie girl looked up in her father's face and said:

"Dad, you must know nearly everybody in Kansas City."

Shot Him In Afternoon.

The young ladies were writing a story of adventure, it being necessary to describe the shooting of a leopard.

Alice—Would you say that Julius raised his gun and shot him on the spot?

Lucy—Lemme see! No, better say shot him through the heart. Somebody might ask which spot.

TO DISTRIBUTE FUND OF 59TH BATTALION

One of the Canadian regiments which managed to come through the war with a considerable regimental fund was the 59th Battalion, principally of Kingston and Ottawa district. Its friends raised a large amount at the start, which was banked with trustees and carefully handled, so that at the close of the war the fund remained at about $25,000. The Trust Agreement provided

"That the fund shall be applied for the benefit of disabled members of the 59th Battalion, or for the assistance of bonafied dependents of any members of the 59th Battalion, who were killed in action, or who have died of some cause which was directly due to service overseas."

At a meeting just held in Kingston of the Trustees, namely Lt.-Col. H. J. Dawson, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lt.-Col. H. Craig, and G. H. Smythe, of Kingston, Major W. L. Grant, of Toronto, and P. D. Ross, of Ottawa, it was resolved to begin distribution of the fund on Jan. 1st next. Circulars stating this have been sent by the trustees to every member of the Battalion or next of kin whose address could be obtained, but any one concerned who has not been reached by the trustees can obtain full information by addressing Captain R. H. Waddell, 75 Lower Union street, Kingston. It is to be noted that the only claims which may beh considered are those from wounded or disabled dependents of deceased former members of the 59th Battalion.

The 59th lost over 1,200 killed or wounded in France.

PROTEST AGAINST PROHIBITION

Cobalt, Ont., Nov. 10.—Informing the Premier of Canada that the citizens are neither "Siwash Indians or nigger slaves," but members of the Anglo-Saxon race whose forefathers died for liberty, and requesting him not to forget "the fate of the Hearst Government," the local Citizens' Liberty League has sent a telegram to Sir Robert Borden protesting against the "reported prohibition legislation," by the Parilament of the Dominion. The League members, states the telegram, pledge themselves to oppose any government which would enact such fanatical legislation and declare that as originators of the league, they will more fully organise the country and unfurl "the flag of liberty" in all its corners.

A movement has been started in Jamaica to get the Government to legislate on anti-trust and anti- monopoly lines.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result.

MY HEAD!

When the head feels thick or aches, when one feels all out-of-sorts—perhaps a coated tongue—it is the signal that poisons are accumulating in the system, and should be cleaned out at once.

Auto-intoxication can be best ascribed to our own neglect or carelessness. When the organs fail in the discharge of their duties, the putrefactive germs set in and generate toxins—actual poisons, which fill one's own body.

Sleepiness after meals, flushing of the face, extreme lassitude, biliousness, dizziness, sick headache, acidity of the stomach, heartburn, offensive breath, anemia, loss of weight and muscular power, decrease of vitality or lowering of resistance to infectious diseases, disturbance of the eye, dyspepsia, indigestion, gastritis, many forms of catarrh, asthma, ear affections and allied ailments result from auto-intoxication or self-poisoning.

Take castor oil, or procure at the drug store, a pleasant vegetable laxative, called Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, composed of May-apple, aloes and jalap.

MINDEN MAN SHOT A WOLF

Mr. Harry Welch, Sr., of Minden, was quite surprised to procure a good sized wolf, not two miles from the village. He will be pleased to receive the bounty on the wolf, but would rather catch a nice black fox. He may do that yet.

CABLE BROKEN

The cable which extends from the police station to the bell in the city building tower was broken on Friday evening when an alarm of fire was being sounded. Repairs to the same is in progress.

APPOINTED PRINCIPAL

Deciding to establish a continuation school the Walkerville School Board has appointed Robert Meade, B.A., inspector of Windsor public schools, and formerly of Brockville, as principal of the new school at $3,000 per annum. The establishment of this school will mean that Walkerville pupils will gradually be withdrawn from the Windsor Collegiate Institute. Mr. Meade was at one time principal of the Brockville public schools and later inspector of the Walkerville schools.

GANANOQUE WORKERS REFUSE OFFER

A largely attended meeting of Gananoque lodge, No. 4, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America, was held at their lodge room in the I. O. O. F. temple when the report of their executive committee on the offer made by the business managers of the various manufacturing plants of the town offering a minimum wage of 33 cents an hour to all married men with families, 30 cents an hour to unmarried men over 18 years of age, and to married men without families, and 20 cents an hour to employees under 16 years of age. It was unanimously decided to reject the offer.

HOW HE WON THE D.S.O.

The London Gazette of October 3 gives the following citation for the award of the Distinguished Service Order to Major Charles B. Price, of the 14th Royal Montreal Battalion, son of C. E. Price Brockville: "In the attack on the Canal du Nord, on September 27, 1918, he successfully gained all his objectives, and captured and cleared up the village of Sins-les-Marquion, and, although wounded, refused to be evacuated until his colonel arriving opportunely, from leave as the barrage started, arrived on the scene and relieved him. He had complete grasp of the situation at all times."

ORANGE LODGE AT HOME.

The Cannifton Loyal Orange Lodge No. 2120 held an at home, in their lodge room on November 7th in honor of the six brethren who enlisted from that lodge to fight for King and Country. There was a good attendance and a pleasant evening was spent in games. After supper had been served and all enjoyed the good things provided by the ladies, the Worshipful Master of the lodge, Bro. W. J. Cole, took the chair and a good program was given, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and readings by several of the young people. All voted that at home a success and hope to have another in the near future.

A CIVIC PROCLAMATION

Acting Mayor Woodley has issued a proclamation requesting the suspension of all business for two minutes at the hour of 11 o'clock tomorrow morning Armistice Day, also that flags be displaced from all business places and residences.

BEACHBELLES STRANDED

George Stevoff, manager of a "one-night stand" show, was arrested by Detective Thomson of Toronto, on a charge of passing a worthless cheque for $35 at Cobourg several days ago. Stevoff found himself and company of twelve stranded, and cast the bank for the part of the prodigal's father. He had no account, it was claimed, and the hotel-keeper who received the cheque laid the complaint which led to his arrest. Stevoff was in Belleville on Friday, October 31st as the advance agent of the Beachbelle's Musical Company which gave a performance in the City Hall on the evening of Saturday 1st inst.

TOMORROW NIGHT'S ENTERTAINMENT

Everything is being arranged for a big night at the Armouries tomorow night when an Armistice Day entertainment will be put on and presentation made to the members of the G. T. R. baseball team of this city, champions of Ontario Amateur League. In addition to a gift to each of the players two valuable cups will be presented, representing the championship of the Central Ontario League and the Provincial League. Prominent officials of the league will be present.

HOLD UP MAN IDENTIFIED

On Saturday night the 1st inst. a Chinese cafe at Campbellford was invaded by two young men, and at the point of a revolver the proprietor was relieved of $15. It was surmised that the two young men who did a similar act in this city on Tuesday last were the offenders. A young man named Simpson was arrested here and on Saturday was identified by the Chinaman of Campbellford as one of the parties who held him up. Brown, who made a get away, has not yet been located.

Entrance Courses Are Announced

Canada's Part in the War to be Emphasized in History Study.

A statement of the courses in history, geography, grammar and arithmetic which will be the basis of the junior High School entrance examination next year was issued by Hon. Dr. Cody. The Canadian history course for the junior grade of form four is in ten divisions, the last two of which are new, "Canada's Part in the Great War" and "Civics; the Rights and Duties of Citizenship."

Upon this point the Minister urges on the teachers the importance of inculcating patriotism and emphasizing the extent, power and responsibilities of the British Empire, its contributions to the highest form of civilization, and the increasingly important place Canada holds amongst the Overseas Dominions.

The requirements of the entrance examination in geography will call for a less detailed study than hitherto of physical geography, and will emphasize simple phenomena and their general effects rather than exact scientific explanations. The geography of the British Empire will be an important feature. In the grammar examination emphasis will be placed upon the application of the principles of correct speech to composition. In arithmetic the teachers are advised to discontinue the labored grind upon long mechanical exercises and use only problems and exercises as are of practical value.

Captain Cooke Feels Fine Now

Veteran Conductor Praises Tanlac For Overcoming His Troubles.

"A few bottles of Tanlac has made me feel just like a new man," was the statement made by Capt. F. M. Cooke, residing at 144 East Winnifrod St., St. Paul, Minn., recently. Captain Cooke has been a conductor on the Great Northern Railroad for fifteen years, and is one of the most popular men in the service of the company.

"For years," continued Captain Cooke, I suffered from stomach trouble and had scarcely any appetite, and what little I ate disagreed with me so that I would become terribly nauseated. Gas would form on my stomach and affect my heart so I could hardly breathe. I had terrible headaches that would last for two or three weeks at a time and nearly drive me wild, and I would become so dizzy at times that I would have to grab hold of something to keep from falling. My nerves got in such bad shape I could sleep very little, and I would get up in the morning feling dull and all run down.

'Nothing I tried seemed to do me any good and I kept getting worse all the time. A few weeks ago some one suggested that I try Tanlac and I got a bottle and began taking it, and after taking two bottles I felt a great deal better. I have a fine appetite now, and what I eat agrees with me perfectly. Gas has quit forming in my stomach and I am not troubled with shortness of breath. I never have any more headaches or dizzy spells and can sleep fine, and get up in the morning feeling full of life and energy. I never felt better in my life, and feel at least ten years younger. I am very grateful for what this Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vinse, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

NEW HOCKEY LEAGUE

Brockville hockeyists favor a league to include Smith Falls, Perth, Brockville and Belleville. Formerly Brockville and the northern teams were members of the Central Canada Hockey Association and in discussing this year's prospects the Brockville Recorder says:

'The main idea of the proposed league was to form at least seven four-team groups to play during the season for the right to play off at Ottawa for the Frank Plant trophy and the Ottawa Citizen shield. In the groupings drafted originally Brockville was linked up with Perth, Smith Falls and Carleton Place.

A short time ago the local secretary was in touch with Smith's Falls and Perth and learned that the hockey teams of these two towns are extremely anxious to play in a group against Brockville team as a gate-pulling power is recognized in Perth and Smith's Falls and no one will deny that the teams from those towns never failed to pull a big gate here. It is practically certain that the fans here will decree that Perth, Smith's Falls and Brockville form a league regardless of what action is taken concerning affiliation with the C. C. H. A. The boys to the north of Brockville do not favor the inclusion of Cornwall in their group as it would mean that practically all money gathered in the home games would be eaten up in expenses. Two days would be taken up in order that Perth and Smith's Falls would be able to go to Cornwall for their games. As far as Belleville is concerned Perth, Smith's Falls and Brockville teams could go there during an afternoon, play their games and leave on the return trip the same night. In that way a large saving in expenses could be effected.'

New Canadian Coat of Arms.

The Canadian government is considering adopting a new coat of arms for the dominion—one which shall represent all the provinces in the confederation. The present coat of arms is representative of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick only, for those were the original provinces; and since it was adopted in 1858 Prince Edward Island and British Columbia have entered the federation, and finally Saskatchewan and Alberta have been carved out of what were the Northwest territories. When a design emblematic of these nine provinces has been chosen by the committee and approved by the government it will be submitted to the royal college of heralds in England to be registered. A royal warrant declaring it the official arms of Canada will then be issued.

Had Some Merit.

A well-known clergyman in Liverpool used to tell a story of a fishing experience he had in Shetland. He was out fishing for sea trout, accompanied by a local youth, when his foot slipped on a stone and he overbalanced. As he was encumbered with heavy waders, which quickly filled with water, he was in considerable danger of drowning, but after a good deal of struggling he managed at last to reach safety, though in a very exhausted condition. When he managed to recover his breath, he said very reproachfully to the youth, who had stood stolidly all the time watching him, "I noticed you never tried to help me." "Na," came the reply, "but it wasna because I wasna thinkin' o't."

"We Are Americans, And Cannot Fight Our Gov't

SAID PRESIDENT OF STRIKING COAL MINERS IN ANNOUNCING DECISION TO OBEY COURT ORDER AND CALL OF STRIKE OF OVER 400,000 COAL MINERS—SERIOUS PROBLEM SOLVED BY PATRIOTIC ACTION OF UNION OFFICIALS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 11.—The United Mine Workers of America, through its general committee, decided early today to obey the mandate of the United States District Judge, A. B. Anderson, which means a recall order for the strike of 425,000 bituminous coal miners. The decision was reached at 4.10 this morning after more than 17 hours' discussion. The conference then adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon. Acting President John Lewis, of the Mine Workers, made the following statement: "Gentlemen, we will comply with the mandate of the court; we do it under protest; we are Americans; we cannot fight our Government. That is all."

Home Set Afire But Lives Saved

Prominent Referendum Worker in Port Hope, With Family, Has Narrow Escape.

PORT HOPE, Nov. 11.—The home of J. Whetstone, a prominent worker on the Referendum Committee here, was set on fire at an early hour Sunday morning and it was only by a narrow margin that the lives of the entire family were not lost.

Mr. Whetstone attended a meeting of the Referendum Committee Friday night and during the meeting someone threw a stone through a window of the place where it was held. He reurned to his home about 10.30 and retired, but it was not long past midnight when his little girl was awakened by the noise of glass crackling in the porch. She roused the rest of the family and it was found that the porch was ablaze, the heat having caused the glass in the door to crack and fall out.

The porch, the front door and the walls of the cottage above the door were all burning and a sack was found containing shingles and paper saturated with coal oil, while the porch itselff was saturated with gasoline and burned more quickly than the kindling.

Had Mr. Whetstone gone to send in a fire alarm the whole house would have been burned down. As it was, how he managed to put out the fire himself is a marvel.

Many Broken Heads In French Election

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The political campaign continues with unabated vigor throughout France. M. Brisson, one of most extreme socialist deputies in the last chamber, who is seeking re-election, said at Moulans yesterday, "Peasants, the land is yours, you must take it, no more chateaux, no more landlords.'

Although many riots and personal encounters have taken place no deaths have yet been reported, but there have been many broken heads and hospital cases. The National Council of Women of France under the presidency of Madame Siegfreid, wife of the former member for Havre, has issued an appeal to the voters demanding the right of women to vote. This will be placarded through the country. Absolute prohibition is one of the planks of their platform.

ALL RAILROADS WOULD USE SAME BROCKVILLE STATION

Brockville, Nov. 11.—In railroad circles here it is regarded as highly probable that with the acquisation by the Government of the Grand Trunk Railway System one of the developments important to Brockville will be the union of terminals if the G. T. R. and the Brockville and Westport branch of the Canadian National lines which up to the present has maintained its own depot and shops here. The proposition at present is to use the G.T.R. terminals. All three transcontinental systems the G. T. R., C. P. R., and C. N. R. lines might also be effected. The conclusion of the scheme hinges, it is said, upon what disposition may be made of the proposal to electrify the B. and W. Division of the Canadian National Railways, introduced some months ago by Mayor Lewis, of Brockville and regarding which the municipalities along the route of railway are being interested.

Senators Make A Kick Over The Supply Bill

Say $62,000,000 is Too Much—Turriff Says Pro-Gratuity Men are "Hot-Heads."

OTTAWA; Nov. 11.—The Senate reassembled at two o'clock yesterday with a small attendance, and at first devoted itself to the approval of the Government's supply bill of $62,000,000. Senator Bostock thought it a very large amount in view of the fact that this was the second session of the year, and that last session an enormous amount was appropriated. The total would place a tremendous burden on the shoulders of the taxpayers.

Senator Turriff declared himself as absolutely opposed to the proposed expenditure of 20 million dollars for soldiers' land settlement. "It is an absolutely foolish expenditure," he said. He congratulated the Government on having had the nerve to refuse the demand e of a few hot-heads for further gratuities. In fact, if the Government had been less free with the gratuities it might have been better for all concerned. "There are hundreds of men," he said, "who instead of getting down to work, have not done a tap since they started to get their gratuities."

Senator Power thought that $40,000,000 was an enormous amount for a Government to appropriate for the further assistance of returned soldiers, especially as Canada had already dealt more liberally with her soldiers than any other country in the world. "It seems to me that the returned soldier should return to work," he said, "instead of asking for more money, which must be squeezed out of the working people."

Proclamation Date Is Still Uncertain

Ottawa Does Not Think That the Official Word Will Come Tuesday.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—There is no certainty in official circles here whatever as to when the proclamation of peace, for which all the world and in particular certain classes of thirsty individuals are awaiting, will issue. The rumor that it will come on the anniversary of Armistice Day, which falls tomorrow, finds no confirmation here.

The general official impression here is that there can be no proclamation of peace until all the enemy nations have been dealt with, including Turkey, and the treaties with them ratified.

NOTE OF DISCORD HEARD IN KITCHENER

KITCHENER, Ont., Nov. 11.—The seeds of discord sown by the Anti-Name Changers in May, 1916, produced such an enormous crop that when put on the threshing floor at the municipal election in January, 1917, an ugly riot took place which did the town no good.

The old skeleton may emerge from the closet, and, on the eve of the first anniversary of the signing of the armistice, which settled that terrible conflict in Europe, citizens are circulating petitions, which pray the City Council to submit a by-law to the people at the next municipal election to vote on a change of name for the municipality.

What action will be taken and what power will be given to the question are questions that interest everyone.

Order-In-Council Still Remains

Present Situation With Regard to Liquor Importation.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—The bill to amend the Canada Temperance Act passed by the Commons yesterday leaves to provinces which have prohibited the sale of liquor for beverage purposes the right to determine whether or not importation of liquor for domestic consumption shall also be forbidden. To make the new Federal legislation operative to prevent such importations it is necessary, first, for the Provincial Legislature to pass a resolution asking the Dominion Government to hold a plebiscite on the question; and, second, for the Dominion Government to take the vote and proclaim its result.

This procedure cannot be initiated until the new Ontario legislature meets. It would seem then that the new Federal legislation could not be put into operation before the proclamation of peace unless that proclamation is delayed for some months. In the meantime a Federal order-in-Council now prohibits shipment of liquor into dry provinces. By its terms it is to be effective for a year from the proclamation of peace. The most prevalent opinion, however, is that the order will become inoperative simultaneously with the War Measures Act upon the proclamation of peace.

If this view of the legal situation is correct it may be possible for Ontario people to import liquor for their own use after the proclamation of peace and before action is taken—if it ever is taken—by the Provincial Assembly under the new Dominion legislation. At the same time it has never been definitely decided that the order-in-Council will become ineffective upon the proclamation of peace, and unless the order is repealed by the Government here, a test case in the courts might be needed to determine its validity or invalidity.

There have been rumors that, having placed the new legislation on the statute books, the Government may settle the question by repealing the order when peace is proclaimed. In that event the Ontario Temperance Act which specifically permits importation of liquor for consumption in private dwelling houses would govern until such time as the new Federal measure was invoked.

Toronto Newsboys For Victory Loan

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—Toronto newsboys have subscribed for $25,000 worth of Victory Bonds, or to be strictly correct, they actually bought $24,500 worth and $500 was added by Controller McBride who promised to subscribe for an additional $100 for every $1,000 taken by the newsies in excess of their objective which had been set at $20,000. The objective was quickly passed at the meeting of the Newsboys' Union at the Labor Temple yesterday afternoon. The total reached was $22,800 and the balance represents the subscriptions of the boys who attended the first meeting, but who were absent yesterday.

Farmers After Scalp Of Hon W.L.M. King

NEWMARKET, Nov. 10.—United Farmers of North York will try their fortunate in Dominion politics. At a meeting Saturday afternoon in their club rooms here they decided to enter a candidate in the Federal arena, but left the matter of calling a convention in the hands of the Executive. If Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Leader of the Liberal party, adheres to his intention of seeking election in North York, the Farmers believe they can defeat him. A good organization has been built up in North York, and much of the time of the meeting Saturday was spent in perfecting it.

HUNDRED REAL EGG LAYERS ON EACH OF 750,000 FARMS

Winnipeg, Nov. 11.—One hundred real 'egg layers' on each of the 750,000 farms in Canada is the slogan adopted by a Poultry Club just formed here, as announced by R. J. Young, Secretary. Allowing a net profit of a dollar per hen, this would mean an annual revenue of $75,000,000 he declared. An elaborate campaign to forward this project will be waged.

Long Prison Term For Taxi Driver

Sentenced to Nine Years in Penitentiary for Attempted Murder.

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—In passing sentence of nine years' imprisonment in the Assizes on Saturday upon Nicholas Masters, an Italian taxi-driver convicted by a jury of shooting John Mossop with intent to murder him Mr. Justice Kelly sai dit was not the prisoner's fault that he had not been tried for murder, for if the revolver had discharged as Masters had intended it should, Mossop would in all probability have been killed. People not only of the prisoner's nationality, but of all other countries had to respect the law and Masters had no right to take the law into his own hands and go to Mossop's house with a loaded revolver with the deliberate intention of taking vengeance on him.

U. S. BEER "KICKLESS" SAYS EXPERIMENTERS

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 11.—Six authorities on alcohol and its effect, after ests on men and women, regular drinkers, occasional drinkers and total abstaiers, have found:

Two cups of coffee have as much "kick" as twenty-one pints of one half of one per cent beer.

A stomach full of "2.5" is only enough for one-quarter of one drunk.

Twenty-one and a half quarts of one-half of one per cent beer at a sitting is necessary for intoxication, but the human stomach will only hold one-seventeenth of that quantity.

Six pints of one-half of one per cent beer rapidly consumed is the same as one teaspoonful of alcohol.

These facts are contained in affidavits filed by the six authorities, including Dr. John Marshall, Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology in the University of Pennsylvania. The affidavits were filed in the Federal Court here in support of the application of St. Louis brewers to restrain enforcement of the Volstead prohibition enforcement law..

An employee of a Toronto rifle gallery was arrested on a charge of shooting a little girl because she failed to obey his order to go away.

Liquor Imports Upon Peace Proclamation

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press Limited.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—Inquiries received here indicate that confusion exists in the popular mind as to the status of inter-provincial liquor shipments. The belief seems to be held that war-time prohibition orders were made effective for twelve months after the declaration of peace, but legislation with that purpose in view was never passed and therefore as soon as peace has been proclaimed importation of liquor by private persons will be permissable until such time as a provincial plebiscite held by the Dominion Government upon the request of the provincial legislature declares against such importation and the Dominion Government thereupon issues a proclamation forbidding it.

Senate Upholds Dry Bill Delay Amendment Lost

DIVISION BELL RINGS AT 3.30 IN AFTERNOON AND THE RESULT SUSTAINED THE MEASURE BY THE COMMONS —HOW THE SENATE VOTED.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—The Senate yesterday afternoon resumed debate on the Prohibition bill. Hon. Senator MacDonald had the floor; but as he was not present, Sir James Lougheed undertook to finish the debate.

The Canada Temperance Act, had a generation ago, been on the statute book, but at that time prohibition sentiment had not been as articulate as it was, so that the Act was only made to apply to areas of Provinces. It was now proposed to put it into effect by Provinces and not by areas.

It was not possible, he said, for this or any other Parliament to stem the tide of public sentiment which was sweeping the whole world on the matter of prohibition. Prohibtiion was in force in all Provinces, except Quebec, where a "certain latitude was given, which, in my opinion, is not inconsistent with a live and sane prohibition sentiment."

DOESN'T RESTRICT C.T.A.

Sir James Lougheed concluded by declaring that the legislation in no way restricted or repealed the Canada Temperance Act as it originally stood. A Province could have it applied in its original form if it desired.

Senator Ross declared that any member could vote for his amendment without declarig on the merits or demerits of the bill at all. "The honorable Senator Tanner is faced with the fear that he may one day give an independent judgment and forthwith be abolished. If this House is to be no more than a rubber stamp for the Commons then it should be wiped off the face of God's earth as being more useless than any drug upon the earth. I intend to express my views here with regard for any agitation."

Senator Ross declared that there were two views on the question and that both should have a chance to be heard. He proceeded to read an opinion by Mr. Ben Spence of the Dominion Alliance, who opposed the bill on the ground that conflict on constitutional jurisdiction as between Provinces and Dominion would ensue from it and it would result in duplication which would lead to confusion. In many points the Canada Temperance Act covered the same ground as the Ontario Temperance Act and there would be sure to be conflict on enforcement.

GOES INTO COMMITTEE

At 3.30 the division bell rang to call in the members. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 18 to 12 or by a majority of six and the bill carried into committee on the same division reversed.

Those who voted for the holding over of the bill till next session were: Senators Macdonell, Milne, Ross, Pringle, White (Montreal), Bostock Power McSweeey, Prowse, McHugh, Dessaulles ad Cloran.

Those who voted for the bill and against the amendment were: Mr. Speaker Bolduc, Senators Lougheed, Gordon, Murphy, Sharpe, Foster, Turiff, Blain, Tanner, Girroir, Webster, White (Pembroke', Proudfoot, Thompson, Watson, King, Yeo and Beith.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—Parliament, which assembled in special session chiefly to approve the Treaty of Peace between the Allied power and Germany, and which found itself called upon to deal with three other important and more difficult questions, was prorogued by his Excellency the Duke of Devonshire this afternoon. Its members met, doubtful if deliberations would occupy them for one month. They dispersed after having been seventy-one days in attendance and fifty days actually engaged in the transaction of business.

Attention was centred on the final day of the session upon the Senate. The Commons had cleared their order paper on Saturday and prorogation waited on the Upper House. The Senate had before it the two Government bills whereby Provinces which have already prohibited the sale of liquor for beverage purposes may if their people will it, go "bone dry" by stopping manufacture and importation of alcoholic drinks. It had also before it the bill embodying the proposals for extending the work of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, the supply bill calling for the appropriation of approximately sixty-three million dollars, and several measures of less importance. The major portion of the day was devoted to the discussion of the two prohibition bills, which were finally adopted.

Six Months' Hoist Defeated

The bill to amend the Canada Temperance Act, which permits the holding of plebiscite in any "dry" Province, the question of importation of liquor, upon a petition from the Provincial Legislature, was passed after an amendment seeking to post pone further consideration until next session had been defeated by 18 votes to 12.

The bill to amend the Act in aid of Provincial prohibitory legislation known as the Doherty Act which is designed to stop the manufacture in any Province of liquor intended for use in violation of Provincial laws, was hotly attacked by Senator Ross, of Nova Scotia. Senator Ross denounced the bill as "damnable legislation which would not have been enacted in Russia under the leadership of the Czars, but might be imposed under the regime of Trotsky and Lenine." The Nova Scotia Senator moved the six months' hoist, but his motion was defeated by 15 votes to 12.

Several Ontario Senators, including Hon. A. C. Macdonell and Hon. Clive Pringle, voted for the six months' hoist.

Some debate took place in the bill to amend the Act respecting the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. During this discussion, Senator Turiff, of Saskatchewan, expressed the opinion that Canada had dealt generously with her returned soldiers, and congratulated the Government and the Commons upon their stand against a further distribution of cash gratuities.

Soldiers And Civilians Fight On Streets Of Cork

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CORK, Nov. 11.—Constant collisions between the military and civilians here culminated in serious rioting last night when soldiers, enraged in consequence of frequent attacks upon them, broke through the police and came into conflict with the crowds. Sticks and stones were freely used and belts were removed and forcefully swung. There were also a few revolver shots. A captain and a private of the troops were badly wounded. The police eventually dispersed the crowds and got the soldiers back to their barracks.

Hastings County totals lept to $1,361,950 with a splendid day's Victory Loan canvass of $135,000. This brings us up another notch above our percentage of time gone, our lead now being 3.44. With the most productive days of the campaign ahead it is assured that we will have a large over-subscription when the campaign closes next Saturday night. Although nearly every district is doing splendidly there are still a few which are holding our totals back, among these being Belleville which has not started yet to bring in the big returns expected.

ARMISTICE CELEBRATION

All is in readiness for the big Citizens' Armistice Celebration at the Armouries to-night. A splendid orchestra has been engaged for dancing and comfortable arrangements made for all those who attend. Being purely an evening of entertainment for citizens no money is to be made from proceeds. Admission is free. The only money which can be spent will be on the splendid home-made refreshments which are to be sold at cost price and in the Elimination dance Numerous enquiries have been made about this event, many people being under the impression that the $50 Bond prize would go to the best dancing couple. This is not the case. In order to enter this event, couples will be asked to pay an entrance fee of one dollar for which they will receive a ticket with two numbers, both corresponding, on it. One number will be placed in a box and the other kept. As the dance proceeds the music will stop from time to time and several numbers will be picked at random and called. People will gradually be eliminated to one couple who will receive the $50 Bond prize. The proceeds from this dance will go to pay fifty one dollar entrance fees are not for the prize and any money left over will go towards the evening's expenses. This event will not be held if less than fifty on dollar entrance fees are not paid.

Sad Surprise For Thirsty Demand Swamps Dealers

THOUSANDS OF ORDERS AND CASH SENT TO MONTREAL FOR LIQUOR—NOT ENOUGH TO GO ROUND—CASH BEING RETURNED—LID NOT REMOVED YET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 11.—Local shippers of alcoholic liquors are almost snowed under with orders from every point in Canada, following the announcement of new temperance legislation from Ottawa. Anticipation that the present order in Council which prohibits the importation into "dry" provinces for personal use, and which went into effect on April 1, 1918, as a war measure, will be automatically null and void when Canada officially signs the Peace Treaty within the next few days, has also produced a tremendous crop of orders.

Ontario Most Thirsty.

"Dry" Ontario is in the van, with orders from every town and hamlet, a number, paradoxically enough, from Walkerville. Cheques for advance payment are coming in by every mail. Every hour brings its quota of orders by wire.

Apparently the heavy stocks laid in prior to April 1, 1918, by individuals were insufficient and cellars are obviously bare.

Can't Supply Demand.

A sad surprise is in store for the waiting thousands all over Canada. Montreal houses, at least, have not sufficient stocks on hand to supply the demand, nor do they expect to be able to obtain sufficient supplies until next summer. War-time legislation in the Old Country has cut the export of whiskey down to 30 per cent. of the normal amount. The effects of the war-time measures to save grain have resulted now in scanty supplies. War time conditions have curtailed the liquor output of the rest of Europe. Brandy is scarce, and port wine is almost impossible to secure from Portugal.

Returning Cheques.

The result of it all is that many dry districts of necessity must remain very day. Shippers are regretfully returning cheques and refusing to book orders, because their own stocks are insufficient to supply the demand. Shippers point out that under the new prohibition legislation passed by the Senate would-be purchasers will have many months in which to place their orders. They expect, therefore, the present hurry will subside in a day or two, and that individuals will stock up at leisure.

It will be some months, at least, say the shippers, before the legal machinery provided for in the new law to prevent the importation of liquor into "dry" Provinces (if such Provinces so desire it) can be put into force. In the meantime the right of transportation from Province to Province will be unquestioned.

The Provinces will have ample time to close their borders to the importation of liquor by legislation before the distilled liquors can be brought in normal quantities from the other side, say the shippers.

Dainty Blilie Burke In Eve's Daughter

Week Opens With Good Programs at Local Theatres—Little Ann Pennington at Palace.

A splendid varied program of photoplays was exhibited before a large audience at Griffin's last night. The feature photoplay offering, "Eve's Daughter," with Billie Burke and Thomas Meehan in the stellar roles, proved a splendid vehicle for the talented stars, holding one's attention riveted throughout to the final surprising climax. "Her First Kiss," a funny Fox sunshine comedy, Gaumont World-Wide News, revealing many important happenings, and an original and amusing Joe Martin monkey comedy entitled "Monkey Stuff," completes the program, all of which will be repeated again tonight and Wednesday night.

ANN PENNINGTON IN "SUNSHINE ANN"

Ann Pennington's admirers were in evidence yesterday at the Palace where the little star is appearing after many months absence from the screen—in a fine offering of youth and springtime aptly termed S"unshine Ann." A roster of players high in public favor support Miss Pennington in Richard Barthelmess, Johnny Hines, Lloyd Crisp and others. Pathe Review, showing many beauty spots in England and France in Pathe-color; "Dutiful Dub," a funny Luke comedy, and a thrilling and interesting chapter of the adventure serial, "Perils of Thunder Mountain," are also being shown on the same program.

FINE MEDICAL STUDENTS $2,000

The discipline committee of the Students' Administrative Council, University of Toronto, at its meeting last Saturday recommended that the first and second year medical students should be fined $2,000 for taking part in a parade and 'affair' at the Gayety Theatre without the authorization of the proper authorities. It further recommended that the three students who came out on the platform at the theatre should be suspended and that the person who threw the lighted cigar which inflicted injury to the eye of one of the actresses should be expelled.

Peps
What are they?

Peps are handy little tablets which provide the newest, surest and most scientific treatment for coughs, colds and throat and chest troubles. If you have a cough or a cold, why dose your stomach with liquid preparations? Your stomach is not ailing! Peps provide a better way.

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve slowly. As it does so, certain healing fumes it contains turn into vapor, and you breathe this medicinal vapor direct to your lungs and air passages. On its way it bathes the delicate membranes thoroughly in its healing ingredients, kills the germs of disease, cures the irritation and inflammation which cause your cough and ends the trouble.

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and throat and chest troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Another great advantage in Peps is their entire freedom from opium, morphine or other poison, thus making Peps the best and safest remedy for childrens coughs and colds.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

THE SOLDIERS' GRATUITY

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—The net result of the legislati passed this session in the direction of civil re-establishment of the soldiers will be to provide about fifty millions; for new gratuities to British reservists and for Canadians in the British army and naval forces, and for airmen; to provode loans and other advances to returned men; to provide employment; to extend in several ways aid to the men and improved pensions.

And notwithstanding the declaration of the government that they have done all that they could do at this stage, because of the financial commitments of the country, it is quite certain that the government have been compelled by the fight that was put up in the Commons for more generous treatment of the men, and the final statements made by the administration, the door is left open for further consideration at the coming session early in 1920.

McCREA'S LEAD CUT TO 142

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 11.—The recount in the election here concluded with a net result of decreasing Charles McCrea's majority by three from the previous count fixing it at 142. The recount was held before Judge Kehoe and had been going since Thursday morning.

DURING the last few years people have had to be content with many lines of goods that were inferior in quality to those procurable before the war.

To-day, people are demanding the better grades again. Those who from a mistaken idea of economy tried to be satisfied with common teas are coming back to Red Rose Tea. They realize that they cannot be satisfied with anything less than Red Rose Quality.

And Red Rose probably will cost them no more than common tea, because Red Rose not only tastes better—it goes farther.

Consisting chiefly of Assam teas—the richest and strongest grown—three teaspoonfuls of Red Rose goes as far as five of ordinary tea. A brewing will prove it.

Y.M.C.A. Notes

On Friday evening the Board of Directors and Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held a reception and gave an evening's entertainment and games to the Faculty and Students of Albert College.

The Y. M. C. A. lounges and Gymnasium, where the reception and games took place were most suitably decorated with palms, bunting and flags.

The students arrived in two bodies about eight o'clock and were received by several directors and by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

After the students had assembled in the Gymnasium and had given several of their college yells, Mr. P. F. Brockel General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. opened the evening's program with a few words of welcome and introduced Mr. Gordon Mason, an Albert boy who took charge of the games. During the evening Mrs. Wilmot and Mr. Wrightmeyer rendered several vocal selections which were enthusiastically received.

After the refreshment period, Prof. Staples tendered the thanks of the Faculty and students created a great deal of merriment in his presentation of the prizes won by the various students. After an evening adjudged by all to have been a genuine success the program was brought to a close by the company joining hands in the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Called by Death

LAWRENCE HALL

On Friday the third day of October there passed away, after an illness of several months borne with true Christian fortitude, Mr. Lawrence Hall of this city, at the ripe old age of seventy-nine years. For many years previous to coming to Belleville, Mr. Hall was a prosperous farmer on the Front of Sidney, where his steady industrious and sterling Christian character won for him the respect and esteem of all. Earlier in life he had resided in Prince Edward County, where in the year 1860 he was happily married to Deborah Ann Conklin. Mrs. Hall died in 1897, leaving a family of nine children to cherish the memory of a most loving and devoted mother: Mrs. Emma Lang, Toronto; Mrs. John Fair, Sidney Township; Mrs. Corcullen, Thurlow; Chas. W. Hall, David A. Hall and Virgil Hall of Sidney, George H. and William J. Hall of Prince Edward and Ernest A. Hall of Thurlow. Besides these Mr. Hall left one sister, Mrs. Jewell of Ann Arbor, Michigan, and two brothers, George and John of Toronto.

In 1900 Mr. Hall married Miss Louisa Barnum of Wallbridge, Ont., who survives him, and who proved a most loyal and congenial partner of life's joys and sorrows. Our late friend was one of the most happy Christians we have met, ever ready to bear witness to the power of the religion he loved; ever ready to show his faith by his works. To be entertained in his home was a delight, with warmhearted hospitality he welcomed all; in him his pastor found a true helper. His cheery word and bright smile will not soon be forgotten.

The funeral service was conducted at his late residence?, 266 Coleman St., by his pastor Rev. A. H. Foster, assisted by Rev. F. G. Joblin of Seagrave, who spoke of the happy associations with Bro. Hall on the Bayside circuit. The floral offerings were very beautiful. The remains were laid to rest in Belleville Cemetery to await the resurrection of the just.

Washington Investigation Shows Wide Organization Membership Reached 7,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—In the course of their investigations, Government agents, according to Mr. Palmer's announcement, have found that the union of Russian workers is conducting an active propaganda for a "Social revolution", the aliens arrested were all leaders in this union, which was described as the worst anarchistic organization in the country. Its membership numbers more than 7,000, with many locals, estimated by officials to run well above 100, scattered throughout the nation.

Of the activities of the members of the union of Russian workers, Mr. Palmer's statement said:

"The union of Russian workers is even more radical than the Bolsheviki.

"It was organized in New York in 1907 by a group of eleven men led by William Szatow, at present the chief of police of Petrograd. The purpose of the society was to amalgamate all Russian groups in the United States into one organization. The various locals are organized for the sole purpose of spreading the doctrine of the organization among the Russian immigrants working in the mines, shops, factories, logging camps and sawmills and other centres of labor, and the propaganda is continued by means of literature and lectures.

Included among the material and literature seized by Government agents in the raids were quantities of articles used in making bombs, a complete counterfeiting plant, a large supply of counterfeit bank notes, thousands of pieces of literature described as of the most inflammatory nature, and scores of red flags, rifles and revolvers.

Membership of the union, as estimated by Mr. Palmer was 7,000 with upwards of 100 locals scattered throughout the country. The union also has ramifications in Canada and "representatives" from among Russians in that country attended the first convention of the union in Detroit in 1914.

PRINTERS' STRIKE.

New York, Nov. 11.—Typographical Union members, No. 6, whose members have gone on "vacations" during the strike and lockout in the printing industry here, yesterday voted unanimously to reopen negotiations with the employing printers and re-endorsed the demands for a $50 weekly wage and 44-hour week.

The men decided that under no condition would they arbitrate the hour question. The demands had been placed in the hands of the wage scale committee for revision, but were returned in their original form for ratification or defeat.

Asserting that the strike is "in the twilight stage," International officials predicted that many of the "vacationists" would resume work before the end of the week.

EVERYONE'S CREDIT GOOD AT THE BANK.

Although the Victory Loan is going to find more profitable use for millions of dollars now on deposit in the savings banks, the bank people thoroughly realize the necessity for the loan reaching enormous proportions. The bankers will give valuable assistance to purchasers of bonds who cannot pay cash down, through the plan to buy on instalments which has been arranged with the Minister of Finance.

With this convenient instalment system the buyer has ten months in which to complete payment for the purchase of the bonds. It is not requisite that the purchaser should already be a customer of a bank. The plan is open to everybody. The necessary form may be obtained at any chartered bank and the transaction put through without any trouble.

This is an incentive to save in a simple manner and at the same time help your country while you are helping yourself. The interest charged to you by the bank for the accommodation is balanced by the interest you get on your Victory bonds during the time you are paying for them.

Do not miss this opportunity to buy Victory Bonds, because you do not happen to have the ready cash handy.

THE PRINCE AND MALACHI MALONE.

Malachi Malone, scathed and scarred from war experiences and waterfront brawls, with only one eye, battered nose, and a piece of his right ear missing, will be entertaining the Prince of Wales when His Royal Highness finishes up his grand tour and has a long, lazy rest in which to pick out the bright spots of his memories of Canada—Canada from a car window, an observation platform and a million City Halls, more or less. Then will the heir to the Empire's throne turn to Malachi Malone for relaxation, inspiration and intertainment.

Malachi, old, deformed, and ugly, is a great spinner of yarns of the period of 1812 and was conjured up out of the mystery of history and romance which surrounds that stirring period by C. H. J. Snider, newspaperman and sailor, of Toronto.

Malachi is preserved and presented in the pages of "In the Wake of the Enghteen Twelvers," the historical romance written by Mr. Snider which has received so much favorable attention. Malachi Malone spins the yarns of the naval engagements on the Great Lakes to his mates of the forecastle and all is duly chronicled by one "Jerry" Snider with his feet under the City Editor's desk, but his mind and heart away out on the dancing waves of Lake Ontario with a full sheet, a firm grip of the tiller and a "wind that follows fast."

"In the Wake of the Eighteen-Twelvers" was presented to the Prince of Wales by a Toronto barrister as a memento of his visit and an intimate revelation of romantic historical events on the inland seas of Canada, believing that the Prince would enjoy the pen pictures to an even greater extent after having personally visited the along-shore scenes, at least, of Malachi's interesting yarns.

Stirring Days of 1812.

A Canadian book about Canadians and by a Canadian where history and romance are delightfully interwoven—such is the latest gift which has been presented to the Prince of Wales. Flowers and fruit and fudge galore, to say nothing of pictures and addresses have been given His Royal Highness by admiring Canadians, but it was Mr. James Roaf, K.C., of Toronto, who had the happy thought of giving him "In the Wake of the Eighteen-Twelvers," by C. H. J. Snider.

"In the Wake of the Eighteen-Twelvers" was described in one review as "the story book which got into the school bag," as Chief Inspector Cowley, of Toronto, was so pleased with it that he recommended it among others to be placed upon the list of supplementary reading for the schools of the city. It is a history of the fresh water fights in the War of 1812, history as detailed and accurate as ever was hammered into the heads of boys who had Marryat hidden in their desks. And yet, the history is told in that very thrilling vein of continued action which gives fiction its great grip.

In this book the Prince will learn how, early in the war, the American Commodore Chauncey was cock-of-the-walk on Lake Ontario; how he bombarded Kingston, drove the "Royal George" to shelter, sank the "Simcoe" when she tried to run the gauntlet of his fleet, and held up the convoy that carried the body of the dead hero, Isaac Brock.

At the end of the war—and the book—the Prince will find Chauncey cooped up by the wonderful hundred-gun ship the "St. Lawrence," which ended the contest on Lake Ontario without having fired a shot. But between the first and last chapters lies a zig-zag war-wake, from Michillimackinac to Lake Champlain, and after Royal Edward has followed it he will know all about the hardest fighting and bravest work of the three years' war a hundred years ago on the Great Lakes.

There are dashes of romance in the tale of the young commodore, who was gallant to a widow and lost the Battle of Lake Erie, and in the story of the young lieutenant, whose ambition for a lady's glove brought about the capture of two schooners under the guns of an American battery. In the story of the Battle of Lake Erie is told how young Robert Heriot Barclay, the British commander, was dazzled by the light of a lady's eyes until his foe, whom he had blockaded, slipped out of port, gained command of the lake and blockaded him in turn.

Love Lost the Battle.

'Twas the lady herself who brought the adventurous sailor back to his blockading with the gentle reminder of that motto under which he had fought at Trafalgar—"England Expects That Every Man This Day Will Do His Duty"—but, alas, he returned too late. The description of the battle is vivid to the point of horror. Thunderous as the broadsides which rent the September air, and gory as the blood-seething decks of the ships engaged, the realism of the story can yet be justified by the honest frankness with which it sets forth the horror of carnage.

More of the romance and daring of this fresh water wartime is given in "The Captain's Gig Goes Glove-Hunting." One friend won death and the other glory through the hare-brained determination of two young British officers to find the missing mate for a lady's glove. There was nothing British afloat above the Falls of Niagara at this particular time. How the two made good the deficiency and won King George two men-of-war in the bargain will keep H.R.H. with pulses throbbing.

People come and people go in the book much as the Prince has found they do in his visit to Canada—a glimpse and they are past, or rather he is. One character, though not often mentioned, stands out prominently—Malachi Malone, narrator of many of the adventures. Malachi is old, deformed and ugly, but these very things seem necessary and almost harmonious in him. He was very old, very gnarled and very ugly, lean and stooped. War experiences, water-front brawls had left him scathed and scarred, with only one eye, battered nose and the lower half of his right ear missing. Eagerly will the Prince follow Malachi's tales of the war of 1812, and the aged sinner will no doubt become as much revered as a story-book hero as he was by his comrades, who only left off listening when the first mate would be heard calling:

"Heigho, below, you sleepers!
Don't you hear the news?
It's eight b-e-l-l-s!"

Malachi Malone's Creator.

"Jerry" Snider, creator of Malachi Malone, is a Toronto newspaperman. In his cub reporter days, it is said that his assignments oft became entangled with his love of the water-front and when he should have been digging out some particularly dry and dusty information at City Hall or Osgoode, his legs frequently carried him to the poop of some old stonehooker where dread of the city editor vanished in the dancing sunbeams and sparkling reflections from the waters of Toronto bay. Born a sailor, circumstances made "Jerry" Snider a slave to the desk, but his spare moments were all spent when possible on the "Blue Peter" scudding before the wind or tacking for the run home. At long last "Jerry" became himself, that fearsome creature "THE CITY EDITOR," and here he trod the quarter-deck of his newspaper sloop with ever an eagle eye for malingering or mutiny, and woe to the cub or scrub who failed to toe the mark. No deep sea master was ever more insistent upon iron discipline than Capt. Jerry and no more venturesome in seeking more valuable cargoes. While he wasn't exactly revered by the crew as a saint, yet he was always respected as one who had a habit of producing the goods.

Afloat and Ashore.

"Jerry" Snider afloat and "Jerry" Snider ashore have much in common, but yet are miles apart, as anyone knows who sails in the Blue Peter upon calm or stormy seas.

Here's hoping that H.R.H. will like this Canadian book by a Canadian author and give it such a vogue that a million copies or so will be necessary to supply the overseas demand, and Jerry with the proceeds can buy him a sloop and like Jack London lose himself for a time among the isles of the sea, where life seems eternal and the grave a myth of crowded cities, unreal and unnecessary.

The declaration of Sergeant McNamara, who was elected to the Legislature for one of the Toronto seats is striking evidence of "the state of mind" that prevails in many parts of Ontario today. Sergeant McNamara in a statement to the press declared that he owes his election to nobody and then went on to say:—"The fact is, I attended a public meeting and made a speech in which I attacked everybody and everything, including myself, and the result is I find myself elected to Queen's Park."

A New Era For Ontario.

The Farmers' Sun.

The change in government which has taken place in Ontario is wholly different from that which would have occurred had Mr. Dewart and his followers obtained a majority in the new Assembly. That would have been merely a change of control from one party to another party bearing a different name but with the same general viewpoint. As events really have developed, power has passed from the hands of professional politicians to those of the people. The term "the people" is used advisedly, because the element that will control the new Administration does not represent merely one class, or even two classes. It is true candidates for the Legislature nominated by the U. F. O. will form the largest body in the new Legislature. It is also true that representatives of Organized Labor will have a place in the new Administration. But these men have been entrusted with the government of the Province, not because of their class affiliations, but for the reason that the great mass of the people of Ontario were tired of the old party politician and his ways and demanded a new deal under which meaningless partisanship would be eliminated and a real effort made to give the Province a sane and honest administration of affairs for the benefit of all legitimate interests. This fact is recognized both by Mr. Drury and those who will stand behind him in the Legislature. There will be no attempt to introduce class rule, but there is a determination to make the general good the one consideration. While agriculture will not be ignored as it has been in the past no injustice will be done to those engaged in other callings.

Trying to Be Wicked.

New York Times.

Alarm that will be felt by the pious upon hearing that the head of the Episcopalian Church Temperance Society intends to make that body's saloon-substitutes "as wicked as we can have them" must be tempered by the reflection that the reverend gentleman will probably be unable to make them so very wicked. Indeed, a study of the principal features of the new meeting places which the Church hopes to substitute for the old bar rooms—on the same premises and with the same fixtures wherever possible—does not reveal anything that would seem especially wicked to the sensibilities of the layman. Women, clergymen in uniform, and sightseers are to be excluded; but this no guarantee of wickedness. Swearing, smoking and card playing will be permitted if the visitors to the poor man's club feel so inclined; but even so these are not of necessity fatal to the soul, however detrimental some may consider them.

Justifiable Larceny.

Detroit News.

A Detroit judge dismissed the case against a man who was charged with stealing a cornet. We have been unable, as we go to press, to establish the truth of a current report that the judge is a neighbor of the man who owned it.

THE GLORIOUS DEAD

"Lest We Forget"

Whoever you may be, go into your room to-day and sit quietly for a few minutes. Canada asks you for these minutes in Meditation upon Her Immortals.

Their spirit, the spirit of devotion to duty, of love of Canada and of home that illuminated their lives and made glorious their death, still lives. May it live in you and in me. May we be so inspired that from now onward, constrained by the love of Canada, we may ever advance her interests, ever work for a greater and more glorious Canada.

To-day is a day of memory, of thanksgiving, and to-day Canada has indeed the right to require from you a thanks offering. But no such demand is made. Canada simply asks you to the fullest extent of your capacity to advance her trade, production, and prosperity, and by so doing help yourself, protect your family, increase your income and all without risk.

CHAPTER XIV.

In case he should feel elated, 'The Eye of the Beholder' came back on Wednesday afternoon, but this time he did not post it to another firm instanter. He could not very well ask for it to be returned to Paris, and he felt it with Turquand when he bade him good-bye. 'Send it where you like,' he begged ;'perhaps you might try Farqueharsen next. Yes, I've rather a fancy for Farqueharsen; but let it make the round, old chap, and drop me a line when there aren't any more publishers for it to go to.'

The nurse's 'endeavor' had been crowned by success, and the Walfords having congratulated him so warmly that he almost began to think they were nice people again, the departure was made on Thursday morning as arranged.

They traveled, of course, by the Newhaven route, and reached the Gare St. Lazare after dark on a rainy evening. The amount of luggage they possessed among them made Kent stare, as he watched half a dozen porters hoisting trunks, and a perambulator, and a bassinet on to the bus, and it seemed as if they would never get out of the station. At last they rattled away, however, through the wet streets, the baby whimpering, and the nurse flustered, and he and Cynthia very tired. They drove to a little hotel near Madeleine, where they intended to stay until they found a suitable pension, and, where dinner and the warmth of 'grave' was very grateful. Nurse also picked up after the waiters' appearance with her tray and a half-bottle of vin compris, and, as their fatigue passed, exhilaration was in the ascendant once more. Cynthia recovered so much that, finding the rain had ceased and the moon was shining, she wanted to go out and look at the boulevards. So Humphrey and she took a stroll for an hour, and said how strange it was . to think they should have come to live in Paris, and how funnily things happened; and they had a curacoa each at a cafe, and went back to their fusty red room on the third-floor, with the inevitable gilt clock and the festooned bedstead, quite gaily.

The chambermaid brought in their chocolate at eight o'clock next morning, and her brisk 'Bon jour m'sieur et madame!' sounded far more cheerful to them both than Ann's knock at the door, with "The 'ot water, mum!' to which they were accustomed. The sun streamed in brilliantly as she parted the window-curtains, and, after the chocolate and rolls were finished, Kent proceeded to dress, and, leaving Cynthia in bed, betook himself to the office of the paper in the Rue du 4 Septembre.

Beaufort had not come yet, and, pending his chief's arrival, he occupied himself by examining a copy. The tone of the notes struck him as decidedly poor, and a lengthy 'interview' with one of the prominent French actresses abounded in all the well-worn cliches of the amateur. The 'luxurious' apartment into which the interview was ushered, the lady's 'mock' despair, which gave place to 'graceful' resignation and 'fragrant' cigarettes, made him sick. Beaufort was very cordial when he entered, though, and it was reassuring to the new sub to see how light he made of eveything. The work was as easy as A, B, C. 'Turf Topics' was contributed by a fellow called Jordan, and, really, Mr. Kent would find a few hours daily more than enough to prepare an issue. They went into his private room, where a bottle of vermouth and a pile of French and English journals, marked and mutilated, were the most conspicuous features of the writingtable; and Kent came to the conclusion that his editor was an extremely pleasant man, as the vermouth was sipped and they chatted over two excellent cigars.

At first the duties did not prove quite so simple as they had promised to one who had never had anything to do with producing a paper before, and the printer worried him a good deal. But Beaufort, who had been aware he was engaging zeal rather than experience, was highly satisfied. The novice was swift to grasp details, and took such an infinity of pains in seasoning and amplifying the rechauffes, that really his stuff read almost like original matter. As he began to feel his feet, too, he put forth ideas, and, finding that the other was quite ready to listen respectfully to them, gained confidence, and was not without a mistaken belief that in so quickly mastering the mysteries of a weekly and painfully exiguous little print, of which four-fifths were electric, he had displayed ability of a brilliant order.

Primarily the labor he devoted to the task was ludicrously disproportionate to the result, but by degrees he got through it with more rapidity. When a month had passed since the morning he sat down in the subeditorial chair of The World and his Wife, he discovered that he was doing in an afternoon what it had formerly taken him two days to accomplish, and marveled how he could have been so stupid. The work had developed upon him almost entirely by now, for Beaufort, having shown him the way in which he should go, dropped in late, and withdrew early, and did little but drink vermouth, and say, 'Yes, certainly, capital!' while he was there. Kent proposed the subject for the week's 'interview,' wrote—or re-wrote—the causerie, and secured the majority of the few advertisements that they obtained. Also, when the subject of the semi-biographical sketch was not a good-loking woman, it was he who interviewed her. When the lady was attractive 'Billy' Beaufort attended to that department himself.

Cynthia found a pension in the Madeleine quarter, which had been highly recommended for a permanency, and here they had removed. They had two fairly large bedrooms, communicating au quatrieme, and paid a hundred and fifty francs a week. It did not leave much surplus out of the salary for incidental expenses, after reckoning the nurses's wages; but it was supposed to be very cheap, and Madame Garin and her vivacious daughter, who skipped a good deal for thirty years of age, and was voluble in bad English, begged them on no account to let any of the other boarders know they were received at such terms, for that would certainly be the commencement of Madame Garin's and her daughter's ruin. The establishment was well patronized, and the meals, with which about twenty-five French people down the long table appeared contented, would have been pronounced execrable in a third-rate boarding house in Bloomsbury. The twenty-five people were waited on by a leisurely and abstracted Italian, and the intervals between the meagre courses were of such duration that Kent swore he had generally forgotten what the soup had been called by the time the cold entree reached him.

Yet they were not uncomfortable. Their room was cozy in the lamplight when the winter set in, and Etienne had made a fire, and the curtains of the windows were drawn to hide the view of snowy roofs; and though the dinner often left them hungry, they could go out before retiring, and have chocolate and cakes. As a pressman, too, Kent got tickets for the theatres and the concerts. It was livelier than Leamington Road, to say the least of it—more lively for him than for Cynthia, perhaps; but an improvement for her as well since one or two of the women were companionable, and did to take walks with, while he was at the office, or to polish her French on in the chilly salon.

One afternoon when he was sitting at his desk and Beaufort had gone, the clerk came in to him with a card that bore the name of Mrs. Deane-Pitt. She was staying in Paris and the editor had accepted his suggestion that it might be a good idea to interview a novelist for a change. Kent had sent the proofs to her the day before; but he had never seen her. He told the clerk to show her in with some satisfaction, and wished he had had his other jacket on; for the authoress, of "Two and a Passion" was a woman to meet

In Memoriam

In sad and loving memory of my darling, and only girl Georgia Russell, who died November 11h, 1918, age 4 years, 8 months.

Jesus called you little Georgia,
Called you in the early bloom,
Picking one of the fairest flowers
For to be his own.

Oh, how we miss your smiling face,
The babe, I loved so dear;
The voice that was so kind and sweet
I can no longer hear.

It was so hard to see you suffer,
It was so sad for us to part;
Jesus called you, little Georgia
And left us here with a broken heart.

Thou art safe in Jesus
Away from all sin and pain,
Waiting for the loved ones
Never to part again.

Sweetest, fairest, brightest flower,
Darling of our hearts' fond love;
Oh, how we miss thee every hour
Since Jesus called you home above.

Mother and family, Mrs. Bryant

CASHIER WOUNDED BY HOLD-UP MEN

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—Held up in his cage at Walton's uptown luncheon St. Catharine and Peel streets ,and ordered to hand over the money, the cashier, Joe Ginsberg, refused, and was shot through the breast above the heart by a man who made his escape in the commotion which followed.

Ginsberg, who is 32, was taken to the Montreal General Hospital, where the doctors stated he was in no immediate danger. The bullet penetrated the breast and came out through the shoulder at the back.

HOME-MADE BREAD

Home bread-making reduces the high cost of living by lessening the amount of expensive meats required to supply the necessary nourishment to the body. The increased nutritious value of bread made in the home with should be sufficient incentive to the thoughtful housewife to give this important food item the attention to which it is justly entitled. Bread made with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other.

Pains About the Heart

ANY derangement of the heart's action is alarming. Frequently pains, about the heart are caused by the formation of gas arising from indigestion.

Relief from this condition is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chronic indigestion results from sluggish liver action, constipation of the bowels and inactive kidneys.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills arouse these organs to activity they thoroughly cure indigestion and overcome the many annoying symptoms.

FRACTURED RIBS

Mr. W. Rich of Mariposa Tp., a brother of Dr. Rich, of Lindsay, met with a peculiar accident Sunday evening, while walking in a field and looking up some cattle. While not watching his step he tripped over a piece of stump and fell with sufficient force to fracture two or three ribs.

SAVING EXPENSES

To discover a means of publishing the assessment roll of the town without any extra expense has been solved in Port Hope. The assesment of each ratepayer is put in the voters' list for the first time this year, and by this means a more equitable assessment is bound to result.—Port Hope Guide.

KINGSTON WELL SUPPLIED

The coal situation in Kingston is very satisfactory. The public utilities and manufacturing concerns in the city have enough bituminous coal to carry them through til lthe end of the year and possibly till the beginning of March. Regarding the supply of hard coal, there is enough in Kingston to supply citizens till the first of March, and possibly the first of April.

MOVING TO BELLEVILLE.

Tweed News: Tweed has been hit pretty hard lately in the removal of a number of its very best citizens to other places. We are soon to lose another well-established and representative family of this place in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gartley, who are soon to occupy their new home in Belleville. Mr. Gartley has certainly been one of our best business men. He is known all over the country. Gartley's pumps are found on every farm for miles around and the name of Gartley and Tweed have been so closely associated for so long that the breaking of these old associations will not be a tender and painless operation by any means. Mr. Gartley of course, like all other successful hustlers, is looking for a bigger place in the sun and of course we must submit to his decision. We are sorry they are going but the best wishes will follow them.

PURCHASED TIMBER RIGHTS.

Messrs. James L. Legree, of Calabogie, and John Craig, Darling, have made a purchase of timber rights on the old Rathbun limits up at the Chain rapids and are putting in a camp, with John K. Culhane, of Ashdod, as foreman. Since lumbering operations by the Deseronto company ceased there, what that firm left standing has grown considerably, and Messrs. Legree and Craig will doubtless take off much good timber for sale in a constantly rising market.

Each player will be the recipient of a gold watch, suitably inscribed. In addition the championship cup will be presented by Mr. F. Robbins, President of the League, and the Central Ontario Championship trophy by Mr. Johnson, President. An attractive programme of events has been arranged and will wind up with an eliminated dance. A Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entrelly. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications wil completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair fill be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and sofe, and look and feel a hundred times better.

New Orleans, Nov. 11.—Approximately 15,000,000 pounds of sugar will be released for marketing with the unloading of steamers held here, some of them for a month, unable to discharge cargoes because of the longshoremen's strike. The men went back to work today, having voted on Saturday to call off the walkout which began on October 10, pending action by the National Adjustment Commission on their wage demands. The proposition adopted by the men, however, reserved the right to vote on acceptance of the commission's award.

Four Soldiers Murdered By Western Radicals

SECRETARY OF I.W.W. LYNCHED BY MOB IN REVENGE FOR ASSASSINATION OF SOLDIERS — STATE TROOPS RESTORED ORDER IN CENTRALIA.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited

CENTRALIA, Washington, Nov. 12.—State troops today patrolled this city, where during the Armistice Day celebration four members of the American Legion were shot and killed by men said to be members of the Industrial Workers of World, and Britt Smith, secretary of the local branch of the Industrial Workers, was hanged by a mob. The reason for the attack had not developed today, but it was said that evidence had been obtained that it was premeditated. One of the twenty men arrested in a sweeping search for I.W.W., following the attack, was said to have confessed that plans were made months ago to "get" Warren Grimm and C. Arthur McElfresh, two of those killed, and William Schales and Capt. David Livingstone. The four had been active in suppressing radical activities in this community.

Centralia, Wash., Nov. 11.—Three former soldiers were killed and a number injured today by snipers, said to have been Industrial Workers of the World, who fired on an Armistice Day parade marching through the street of the city.

Shots poured from the roofs of buildings as the parade reached Tower avenue, Centralia's main street, and Second avenue. Arthur E. McElfresh fell dead, and William O. Grimm, attorney, and former University of Michigan football star, and Ben Cassagrana, real estate man, suffered wounds from which they later died. All three were residents of Centralia. Four others, sustaining less severe wounds, were: George Stevens and Dale Hubbard of Centralia, and two men from Chehalis, Washington, whose last names were given as Friscus and Watt.

The parade of veterans of the world war broke up quickly, while the uniformed marchers made a dash to raid the I. W. W. hall and round up all suspicious characters.

The service men soon stripped the hall of all furniture and documents and arrested six men. These, thrown into jail, were guarded by the former soldiers to prevent their escape and at the same time to prevent them from lynching.

A mob, seeking the prisoners was fought back by the overseas men, who stood guard at the jail to see that officials made no efforts to take the suspects away.

A quantity of arms and ammunition was seized when the mob ransacked the I.W.W. headquarters, near which the shooting took place, knocked down the building front and threw into the street and burned all the organization's literature and property which could be found. Posses scoured the timber camps and searched feverishly among the town's 8,000 inhabitants for other radicals.

Threats of lynching were frequent. One man was taken from the police and preparations made to hang him, but he was rescued by officers.

Mob "Got" One Man.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 11—About eight o'clock the mob surrounding the Centralia Jail succeeded in getting one of the I.W.W.'s arrested out of the jail and into an automobile, rushing him away before guards could prevent it, telephone reports here said.

According to a report telephoned to the Associated Press here tonight from The Centralia Chronicle, the mob took the alleged I.W.W. from jail, escorted him to a point just outside of the city limits, and hanged him on a bridge on what is known as the old Chehalis military road.

The man's body is now hanging on a rope under the bridge about ten feet from the water," the telephone message said. "The I.W.W. the mob lynched was the one who shot Dave Hubbard during the fight in the riverbed."

Prune Juice For Fighting Whiskey

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—A revelation of the method of manufacturing illicit whiskey was made by Lieutenant-Colonel Daniel L. Porter, in charge of internal revenue officers in New York who desired to make it known that persons under the impression that they are buying whiskey, risk their lives when they drink the concoction for which they pay exhoribtant prices.

Lieut.-Col. Porter who returned yesterday from Washington said the law was being adhered to loyally in New York because there is no real whiskey to be had, but that the beverage sold under the name for 30 to 40 cents a drink was not whiskey, he said, but a non-beverage alcohol that was permitted under the food control law during the war for use in the manufacture of cologne, hair tonics and certain patent medicines, was seized upon by the saloon men in their extremity and they proceeded to convert it into beverage alcohol.

The non-beverage alcohol is 165 proof and costs $240 a barrel. When the saloon man gets hold of it, Mr. Porter explained his first operation is to acquire a half dozen empty barrels, a quantity of prune juice, or caramel for coloring matter. It is then a simple matter to manufacture 'whiskey' that will tear the lining of the stomach. The barrels are filled with water, diluted with the commercial alcohol and coloring whiskey. The proof of the alcohol is of course, materially reduced in the process but it still retains power for considerable damage to the drinker.

Toledo Citizens Were Forced To Walk

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 12.—The city awoke Sunday to the seriousness of the street car ouster ordinance which was approved by a plurality of 811 votes at last Tuesday's election. Not a street car wheel has turned since 1.30 o'clock Sunday morning.

There is not a street car in the city—every one having been spirited over the State line into Michigan, and it may be days before any attempt is made to operate the cars again. Officials of the Toledo Railways & Light Company took the people of Toledo completely by surprise.

At midnight Saturday the removal of the cars from the city's streets began. Cars were run in long trains to Toledo Beach, Mich., seventeen miles away, and over the tracks of the Toledo & Western Interurban Line to Adrian and Morenci, Michigan.

The company shipped not only every street car it had in operation, but took antiquated summer cars, snow-sweepers and other traffic appurtenances away.

The action was taken by the officials after President Henry L. Doherty arrived secretly in the city Saturday and conferred with other officials of the Traction company. Only a few employees were cognizant of the drastic move.

Action of the company came more un aware to citizens as street railway officials had previously stated they would ac only when the city officially ordered them to cease operating the cars. act only when the city officially orderfound none of the large manufacturers or retail merchants prepared, but by superhuman effort and splendid organization corps of trucks were organized found none of the large manufacturers more swiftly about the city than ever before, albeit they are forced to pay ten cents a ride, but the difference in service compensates for that, they assert.

Stockmen Face Big Loss In West

Minister of Agriculture to Complain to Railway Board.

CALGARY, Nov. 12.—Dr. Tolmie Dominion Minister of Agriculture has put it straight up to the Railway Commission and the C.P.R. to provide cars for the shipment of stock in southern Alberta to relieve the feed situation, which is alarming.

During his visit here Saturday he conferred with stock men on the matter and wired immediately to the Railway Commission and head officials of the C.P.R. to see to it that relief was provided.

The situation is alarming. The early commencement of winter with no grass for feed has placed the stock in a very precarious position and estimation of loss of stock during the coming winter run as high as 75 per cent. The U.F.A. Executive is to see the Dominion Railway Board.

Big Masonic Evening at Trenton——Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master and District Deputy Visit Trent Lodge.

Trenton was the Mecca of many Masons from Belleville and the surrounding country last evening, on foot, in motor cars, busses and on trains. The occasion was the visit of the Grand Master, F. W. Harcourt, K.C., Col. W. N. Ponton, Deputy Grand Master and C. J. Symons, D.D.G.M. to Trent Lodge, No. 38, A.F. & A.M.

Grand Master Harcourt is a very pleasing speaker, his wit and humor and exceptional talent in story-telling evoking constant laughter. Deputy Grand Master Ponton, in eloquent periods spoke of the Armistice anniversary and the many memories of stirring events, sad, stern and thrilling which the day brought back. He also gave a very entertaining sketch of early history of this district with Masonic references.

D. D. G. M. Symons made a brief, but very interesting and eloquent address. Mr. R. Spencer replied to the toast of the local lodge.

The speeches were interspersed with delightful musical selections Mayor Ireland, the genial and popular legislative member for West Hastings showing his versatility in a rousing vocal solo; Dr. McCrea, Lieut. Wilkins, Capt. (Rev.) Boyle, Mr. Jack Shurie also contributed vocal solos in a very acceptable manner while Messrs. Gray and J. O. Herity gave recitations.

How Much Tobacco Will My Heart Stand

A Question Vital to Every Man Who Smokes or Chews

IT MAY COST A PRECIOUS LIFE TO FIND OUT BY EXPERIMENT.

The heart of every user of tobacco bears a double burden. It does its allotted task and then fights nicotine for supremacy. As long as the heart wins he lives; when it loses he dies, but before the final victory of nicotine you pass through many stages of decline and decay and suffer many pangs. Hearts are like human beings—some are stronger than others; therefore, some hearts will stand more tobacco than others, but there is a limit to what any heart can stand. The man who puts this additional strain on his heart a dozen times a day by smoking cigarettes, a pipe or cigars—or chewing tobacco—is taking a madman's chance with health and life to lose and nothing to win but the chance that he may not lose them. He is indulging in a costly habit at the expense of precious health. Ask any doctor anywhere, and he will tell you that using tobacco is injurious and that it is far better to quit the habit than to experiment to find how much tobacco your heart will stand without serious results.

But the thought of quitting is unpleasant to most men—even to those who know that tobacco injures them—and to really quit takes more will-power than they have, and causes more suffering than they can voluntarily endure. To quit the habit make it easy for yourself by getting Nicotol tablets and taking them as directed. The habit really quits you, and its departure is a pleasure equal to its indulgence.

If you want to know how much easier it is to quit the habit with Nicotol than without it, go twenty-four hours without tobacco and note what an effort it costs you; then begin using it as usual and take Nicotol tablets. At the end of a week discontinue smoking or chewing for a day, and it is probable you will have no desire to resume. At least your desire will be greatly diminished, and another week or two should make it not only possible, but a pleasure, to quit.

Note.—Dr. Conner, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, under whose advice Nicotol has often been used, said when this statement was shown to him: "I have known Nicotol to conquer the tobacco habit in less than ten days' time, and I can therefore recommend it highly." When the doctor's statement was shown to one of our leading druggists he said: "Nicotol is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit, way ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists. (5)

BOOTLEGGER SELLS FATAL CONCOCTION

London, Ont., Nov. 12.—The police are endeavoring to locate a bootlegger who, it is said, sold wood alcohol to a retired farmer named John Quirk, residing at 253 Queen's Avenue and who died in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of drinking the liquid. Saturday night Quirk was taken suddenly ill, and Dr. W. M. Shoebotham was called. The man was in a stupor but the physician after repeated questioning learned from the patient that he had purchased some liquor from a bootlegger. Who it was the patient would not or could not say. He was ordered to St. Joseph's Hospital, and there he died late on Sunday night. Quirk was about 55 years of age and had farmed for many years near St. Marys, Ontario. The authorities are moving swiftly in the matter as a few weeks ago another man died in the house where Quirk was taken ill, bay rum being the cause of death.

Public Presentation To The Belleville Baseball Champions

ARMISTICE DAY ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATED IN UNIQUE FASHION AT ARMOURIES — CUPS AND WATCHES PRESENTED TO BASEBALL CHAMPIONS—VICTORY LOAN DANCE.

The Armouries in this city never contained as large a concourse of citizens as that which assembled within its walls last night. It was estimated that upwards of 3,000 were present. The gathering was somewhat of a threefold nature, namely a public presentation to the members of the G. T. R. baseball team of the city, champions of the Ontario Amateur League, to commemorate Armistice Day, and to help the Victory Loan Campaign. Not only were men and women out in large numbers, but boys and girls were much in evidence. Previous to dancing being indulged in a varied programme entertaining in its character was carried out.

Chairman's Address

In the absence of Mayor Platt and Acting Mayor Woodley, ex-Mayor Ketcheson presided and delivered a brief address. He referred to the day, namely Armistice Day, and what it meant to the allied nations. They had also gathered to do honor to our boys of the G. T. R. baseball team who had won the championship and by so doing had brought honor to the city.

Messrs. Mouck, Wrightmeyer, Moor-
Messrs. Mouck, Wrifihtmeyer, Moorman and Dulmage, rendered a selection entitled, "A Nigger Won't Steal," and were compelled to respond to an encore.

Presentation of Cup

The next event was the presentation of the handsome silver cup presented by the Toronto News, and emblematical of the Ontario Amateur Baseball Championship. It is a massive silver cup over two feet in height and stands upon a large ebony base, upon which are a number of small shields upon which the name of the winning team will be engraved each year. Only one shield has yet been inscribed with the name of the Hillcrest team of Toronto, winners of the cup last year.

In the absence of Mr. F. Robbins of Toronto, President of the League, Mr. George O. Walker of Toronto, Secretary-Treasurer of the Ontario Amateur Athletic League, made the presentation in a few well chosen remarks. He expressed the pleasure it gave him to present the cup to the Belleville baseball team, champions for this year.

Mr. M. P. Duff, a G.T.R. official here, accepted the trophy on behalf of the G.T.R. team and stated that the team would endeavor to win it again next year. (Applause).

Mr. James Booth, sang with much effect a song entitled "The Floral Dance,' 'and responded to a well merited encore.

Mr. W. B. Deacon spoke on behalf of the Victory Loan Campaign. He stated that Belleville and the County of Hastings as a whole, were doing well and there was no doubt the objective would be realized. The money was needed by the country to assist in th re-establishment of the returned boys and other expenses incurred by the war. He was thankful for the response made by the citizens and also thanked the press for what it had done in the campaign. In conclusion he spoke eulogistically of the baseball team and the honor they had brought upon the city.

A song and dance, "A Bachelor Gay", was given by Mr. Harold Barrett and Misses Helen Lazier, Thyra Ketcheson, Aileen Cherry and Helen Thompson as dancers All acquitted themselves in a most creditable manner.

C. O. C. Cup

The Central Ontario Championship trophy, a valuable silver cup, was presented on behalf of the Association by Ald. Hunter and was accepted on behalf of the baseball team by Mr. M. P. Duff. Both gentlemen made appropriate remarks.

A song and dance "Si Si Senor," by Mr. Wm. L. Doyle and Misses Lazier, Ketcheson, Cherry and Thompson was admirably given, and was received with much acclaim by the spectators.

Prof. Johnstone gave a bag pipe solo in his usual able manner, which delighted all present. His daughter, Miss Kitty, executed in a clever manner, the sword dance and the Highland Fling.

Flag Presented

Major Spafford and Mr. Hinchey canvassers for the Township of Tyendinaga in the Victory Loan campaign were called upon and were by Mr. Deacon presented with the Prince of Wales flag, emblamatic of having objective for that township. They were also presented with two crests. The recipients were loudly applauded upon receiving the trophies.

Capt. Janney

Aviator Capt. Janney of Ottawa, late of the C.E.F. and C. R. C. A. A. S., who during the afternoon circled about the city and dropped Victory Loan literature was called upon and gave an excellent patriotic address. He referred to the fact that he was in Belleville when the war first broke out and was the first Canadian flyer to enlist. Some 14,000 Canadians enlisted in the flying corps and their deeds were well known. All were proud of the records Canadians made during the war, and a year ago all were happy when the armistice was signed. We must now all assist in making Canada a great and prosperous country, and we can assist by helping in the Victory Loan campaign. He hoped that Belleville would be a greater and progressive city.

Watches Presented

The event of the evening took place at this stage of the proceedings, namely the presentation of gold watches to the members of the championship baseball team. The managers of the teams were called upon the platform and their appearance was the signal of loud applause. Ald. Hanna made the presentation of the watches which are beautiful time pieces. They are gold with an open face and provided with Elgin movements. The inscription on the inside of the case reads as follows: :

"Presented to (name of recipient) G. T. R. Baseball team, Amateur Champion Ont., 1919, by the citizens of Belleville."

As each member received the watch they were applauded.

Mr. P. F. Brockell, Y.M.C.A. Secretary, on behalf of the Association, presented the champions with a yearly membership ticket with a request that the boys utilize same. All citizens appreciate what they had done for the city.

Those receiving watches were as follows:

Manager's Reply

Mr. Thomas Fegg, manager of the team, in replying on behalf of the boys, made a capital address. He said he desired to thank the citizens for the gift made, which was an evidence of their appreciation of the boys' work. What was needed in Belleville was an athletic field and an athletic club. When the war broke out the athletic organizations throughout Canada were depleted owing to many enlistments. Many who went over there would never return. Canadian athletes did their duty and their memory would be revered. In speaking of play grounds Mr. Fegg stated that in Belleville there were quite properly two playgrounds for children, and two more would be none too many. Athletics did much to advertise a city, and the slogan now was a bigger and better Belleville and this cannot be better achieved than having proper athletics. All were pleased that the boys had won the Ontario amateur baseball championship and it was a fact that all of them but two were born in Belleville. (Applause). All we want now is a proper athletic field where healthy sports can be encouraged. In conclusion he desired to thank especially Aldermen Hanna, Riggs, Bone and Hunter and all citizens for the interest they had taken in the team, especially in the latter part of the season. We cannot retain the championship and the cups without the support of the citizens which he was sure they had.

This concluded the programme and after the singing of the National Anthem the floor space was cleared for dancing.

To Mrs. A. P. Allen is due the credit for arranging the programme. She also played the accompaniments for the songs and dances. The interior of the Armouries was most appropriately decorated, Victory Loan posters being much in evidence.

NOTES

Miss Reta McDonald was the fortunate winner of the $50 Victory Bond dance, an event which created considerable interest.

Ald. Hanna was very active in making arrangements for the affair, and his arduous labors were crowned with success. Charlie is always to be depended upon when his services are required.

Spectators were present from Trenton, Stirling, Marmora and various other parts of the County.

The ladies in charge of refreshments were kept busy for some time waiting on customers after the program had been completed.

The music provided by the Belleville branch of the A. F. of M. for the dances was all that could have been desired.

Ann Pennington is appearing at the Palace tonight for the last time in "Sunshine Ann" a light and entertaining offering which reveals life in the thickly tenemented district of New York's east side. Miss Pennington receives excellent support from such noted screen players as Richard Barthelmess, Johnnie Hines, and Cyril Lloyd. TREAT FOR OUR SOLDIERS

Every Canadian soldier who has served in France will enjoy the new John Emerson Anita Loos comedy production, "Oh You Women" which is on view at Griffin's next Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. The theme of the comedy deals with the efforts of returned soldiers to regain their jobs which have been preempted by women in their absence at the front. The authors have treated the story with discrimination and the satire is as keen as a dagger blade. Ernest Truex and Louise Huff are the co-stars in the production. Besides the above offering, Pathe Official News, Topics of the Day, containing the wit of the world's press, Screen Magazine, a Christie Comedy, and a beautiful Outing Chester Travelogue will be presented on the same program.

WEEPING STRANGER GOT THE MONEY

Hamilton, Nov. 12.—S. F. Drachuk, discovered the other day that tears are not always grief, and that display of wealth is very unsafe.

He met a weeping stranger. The weeping stranger claimed to have $1,000 that he must get into safe keeping immediately. If Drachuk would prove that he was a man of means he would leave the $1,000 with him.

To prove that he was a man of means Drachuk drew $500 from his bank, and now the stranger has it. He is still a stranger to Drachuk and to the police.

Porter's Peace Picnic In Parliament

Member for West Hastings Replies to Baseless Charge.

In the House of Commons last Saturday on a question of privilege the following statement was made by E. Guss Porter, M.P. for West Hastings:

Mr. Speaker, before proceeding with the Orders of the Day, I desire to make a personal explanation in regard to a statement made by the hon. member for Chambly-Vercheres (Mr. Archambault) a day or two ago in the House in discussing the Grand Trunk Acquisition Bill. That statement found its way into the Ottawa Evening Citizen in its issue of the 4th inst. The statement in question is reported in that paper, as follows:

Mr. Archambault declared that in one instance the whole Canadian National railways schedule had been interfered with for political purposes. He read letters and newspaper articles dealing with the case of R. H. Thompson, of Mont Eagel Valley, Ont., who declared that because the C. N. R. train had been cancelled at Bancroft for the purpose of carrying people to E. Gus Porter's picnic at Marmora, his daughter whom he was taking to hospital at Toronto had died.

Neither the Citizen nor the hon. member for Chambly-Vercheres can be accused of originality in regard to this statement as it first appeared in a notorious publication known as Jack Canuck. So long as the report remained with such a disreputable publication as that, or in the hands of the hon. member for Chambly-Vercheres, I did not consider the matter was such as to call for an explanation from myself. Both the statement and the inference from it seemed to be too silly to require any contradiction. But the matter having found its way into Hansard and also into the respectable public press, I feel that in justice to myself, and to the Government managing the railway in question, I should make an explanation. It is said, as I have read, that the whole Canadian National railway schedule has been interfered with for the purpose of helping to make a success of my political picnic. I had no idea that I had acquired any such prominent position that I could have control of the whole Canadian National Railway system in order that I might hold it up and use it for the purposes of my picnic. However that seems to be the allegation and the statement is just as devoid of truth as the conclusion is lacking in common sense. The facts are that on the day in question I did not have a single thing to do with the regulation or operation of the trains on this branch of the railway in any manner, shape or form; nor did the committee in charge of the picnic which was held in my honor at that time. I have made inquiry and I have ascertained the fact to be that not a single train upon that railway altered its regular schedule time on that occasion. The trains ran regularly all day long and no application was made to the railway company to have them alter or change their schedule in that respect.

Hon. gentlemen may not know that on the Central Ontario branch of the Canadian Northern Railway the station at Marmora, where this picnic was held, was about two miles distant from the village itself and that for the accommodation of the traffic at the village a branch line has been put in between the main line and the village. On the day in question the last train of the day operating to the south ran into the village and out again, as a pure matter of business and not as a result of any interference by myself or the committee, to pick up the hundreds of passengers living south of the village and to convey them to their homes.

The result was that the train was about an hour and a half late, not more than that; and to convince hon. members that it was not due to any concerted action on the part of myself or the committee, the train left Marmora just as soon as the people could get on board. The train had been advertised to leave at six o'clock, but as a matter of fact it left some twenty or twenty-five minutes before that hour, and did not even wait for the picnic to break up. As regards the death of Mr. Thompson's daughter, I regret that exceedingly, as I am sure every one will, but my regret is still greater that any hon. gentleman in this House should make use of an incident of that kind to, as it appears to me, try and make some political capital. The hon. gentleman concludes his reference to this matter with the following language:

> What must the people of the country think? The hon. member for West Hastings (Mr. Porter), ex-Premier Hearst, and T. W. McGarry must feel proud that the price of the success of their political picnic was practically the murder of a suffering child.

All I desire to say in answer to that is, I should be very sorry indeed if I felt obliged to measure my conduct or my feelings by any standard that might be set up by the hon. member for Chambly-Vercheres.

Asks Co-Operation Of Board Of Trade

The following letter has been sent to the Belleville Board of Trade:

Belleville, Ont., Nov. 10, 1919
Board of Trade,
Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen:—

The co-operation of the Commercial bodies of Belleville are solicited to assist in the Industrial Deepwater Terminal development which the Tivani Electric Steel Company Limited has secured conditionally the necessary money for such extensions.

I will be pleased to have a conference with your Industrial Committee and furnish the information relative to the necessary steps that may have to be taken to encourage this investment to be made in Belleville.

The financial and operating experts are subject to call from New York when the active assets are ready for their inspection which this Municipality and District has to tender as securities for the money to be advanced for bonds for this class of construction.

Street car services and Radial lines are features to be taken into consideration in conjunction with this Industrial Annex which would reinforce the purchase of more Hydro-Elecric Power and enable cheaper rates to be contracted for.

Plans are prepared for fifty bungalow groups of party-walled dwellings covering a square block area of two thousand square feet with private park and children's bathing pond in the inside centre, automobile parking accomodations together with one heating plant and laundry facilities to eliminate the high cost of living, betterment of human efficiency and to maintain the skilled and common labor trades at the least costs.

The allied industries which will follow the initial operating plants producing all high class alloys, crucible and tool steel will double the amount of the first investment. The Iron ores in Hastings County electrically converted into manufactured products will make a telling effect in paying of a portion of Canada's war debt.

Yours very truly,
A. P. GILLIES

SHORT SERMONS.

A student at a meeting of the Theological Alumni at Queen's, when Principal Taylor read a paper on the Art of Preaching, startled the audience during the discussion which followed by making an urgent appeal that ministers should cut down their sermons out of compassion for drowsy congregations. The question arises, suggests the Kingston Standard, as to whether the congregations are naturally drowsy, or whether the drowsiness is caused by the length of the sermons. Most people will be inclined to favor the latter. A bright, short, crisp sermon does not tend to drowsiness, but a long one, unless by an exceptionally brilliant orator, does. And one class of sermon does so particularly; that which is divided into many parts, three or four, or more, perhaps, and which generally wind up with in conclusion, lastly, and one thought more. Probably this was the class of sermon against which the student protested, and his protest can be taken as an indication of the trend of thought among the rising generation, if not among the older.

SOFT WORDS OF NO AVAIL.

Soft words butter no turnips, and it would be foolish to be other than frank with regard to certain aspects of the present Victory Loan campaign. It is certain that some disappointment has been experienced by those who have charge of that campaign at the apathy of the farming community in certain sections of Canada. This was markedly true at the end of the first week of the drive, when it appeared that only one farmer out of sixty had on the average subscribed to Bonds. On the other hand the people of the towns and cities who have perhaps less reason to recognize the gains of the existing agricultural prosperity have shown a commendable enthusiasm and foresight.

Disappointment is also mingled with surprise, for the farmer, of all men, can least afford to permit the present Loan to end in a partial failure. The overseas market, financed by credits to Great Britain and European countries, has yielded enormous returns to agricultural interest; and its maintenance is wholly dependent on a generous over-subscription to the present Loan. If the sum realized is inadequate to permit the maintenance of credits on their present scale the farmer will be the first to suffer. There is no time for excuses or arguments as to the justification for apathy. The time between now and the close of the subscription sheets is too short. Every farmer must make up his mind now what he is going to do to help in this great Loan so clearly framed in his interest.

WESTERN VETERANS MAKING GOOD.

If any there be who cast doubt upon the value of Western Canada's contribution in man-power to the great war, a glance at the number of veterans who have returned for placement and of those who wear the badge of service throughout every province must bring speedy reassurance.

As conductors on the trains; in the offices of hotels; on the station platforms; in the stores—everywhere; one meets the men who helped finish the war, and following closely along by the steady stream of men back to the west, are the activities of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment.

Where the men penetrate, offices of the Department are set up to look after their needs, and a very present help in time of such need they have often proved, as one man told.

He enlisted from the middle west, knowing nothing of opportunities farther on, but in returning the fancy struck him to move westward and get into some outdoor industry other than farming. "I had not any notion of applying at an employment office," he said. "in fact I just thought I would strike out on my own. However I happened to hit a little place a few miles east of Nelson and things were pretty quiet there. I did manage to land an odd job, but nothing steady, and then someone told me that the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment had an office for information and employment at Nelson. Say! I was glad to hear that. I went on, and within a few hours after arrival got placed in a mining centre."

This story is typical of what is being done all along the route, from Halifax to Vancouver, and the spirit of optimism in the western towns and cities, particularly in those districts where the harvest has failed, is an inspiration.

At Medicine Hat 217 men have been placed in employment. Seventeen are training in industries.

At Lethbridge a good spirit of co-operation exists between local employers and the office of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment. Through the activities of the official in charge, the civic authorities have pledged themselves to give preference to returned men. In one civic department alone fourteen veterans have been placed. During the first six weeks this office was in operation 22 men were placed for training in industries. Three are taking courses at business college. Two have gone to High School, five are learning vulcanizing, two oxy-acetylene welding, one shoe repairing, one in power house of a local coal mine, one plumbing, one learning bakery, and one linotype operating.

Election Betting.

New York Times.

As no effort whatever is made by our police authorities to prevent or punish election betting, it would be well if the law which prohibits and pretends to penalize it were repealed. It is, of course, a good and proper law, as everybody knows and admits, but in the evident estimation of the public the evil it was designed to suppress is not sufficiently serious to create a demand for the enforcement of the statute, and, as usually or always happens in such cases, it is not enforced.

To treat any law with contempt and openly defy it lessens respect for all law, and therefore this one, being dead, should be buried.

There has been comparatively little of election betting this year, at least in this State, yet a good many hundreds of men and not a few women went to the polls and voted, though they had made bets, large or small, on the result and therefore had no legal right to cast a ballot. They are all conscious law-breakers, and that they feel no compunction or remorse is the very worst feature of the situation which the existence of this law creates.

Hard to Understand.

London Free Press.

The London Times says Canadian politics are hard to understand. But so are the politics of The London Times sometimes difficult to decipher.

Against Interference.

Victoria Colonist.

The platform of the United Farmers of Ontario contains one plank which it may be assumed decrees a policy which is opposed to nationalization. This plank reads: "To limit governmental activity respecting commercial co-operation to legislation facilitating co-operative efforts, to the keeping of accurate records and to general education along co-operative lines." This can only mean that governmental ownership, in the case of any commercial undertaking, is not favored and in fact that a check will be provided to prevent the interference of the State except in an educative way, so far as co-operative effort is concerned. The farmers possibly realize that if the plea for nationalization were to gain headway the demand would soon be turned toward agriculture, the basic industry of the country, and it is very certain they do not want State interference in this respect. How far this policy of non-intervention will agree with the aims of those who are allied with the farmers in forming a government has yet to be determined.

Party Politics Remains.

Toronto Star.

It would be rash to predict that the present upheaval in politics means the end of party government in Canada. All that can be said is that great changes have occurred and that others may be coming. The old parties have been demoralized. They may be restored. Much will depend upon leadership and policy. Personality will count, as it always does. New issues have made new alignments, and there may be more changes of a similar kind.

Irish Freedom.

Los Angeles Times.

The writer of this editorial is of Irish descent. He, too, dreamed in his salad days the dream of Irish freedom. But the world war brought to him an awakening, and he would no more touch the hand of De Valera with his German-tainted war record than he would that of a Hohenzollern. The way to Irish freedom was the road to France. It might have been won upon the road to Flanders. De Valera and his Sinn Fein followers were too stupid or too craven to follow that road.

Poet's Corner

Get out your old rag slippers,
Take down your pipe from the wall;
Let the moss grow in your whiskers
Through the winter and the fall.
For the Proh-i-bits have got us,
And life surely now will lag,
For there's nothing else that we can play
Save tiddledewinks and tag.

Get out your gospel leaflets,
Hitch old Dobbin to the shay;
Train your mind to drift serenely
From the circus and the play,
For the Proh-i-bits have got us,
And there's nothing we can do
Save entertain the preacher
With a glass of home-made brew.

Pack your trunk and rent a cottage
In some hamlet near the sea,
Where the folks, in gingham aprons,
Raise the dickens o'er the tea;
For the Proh-i-bits have got us—
All the towns are on the pork,
And the cobwebs soon will cover
What was once dear old New York.

Pack away the old decanter,
Wrap and label every stein—
Draw the blinds and close the shutters;
We must be indoors at nine.
For the Proh-i-bits have got us,
And if nine should seem too late,
They'll amend the constitution,
So the curfew'll ring at eight.

Lay aside the dizzy raiment,
Don the sackcloths, sombre, gray,
As there'll be no celebrating
While these geezers have their say.
For the Proh-i-bits just grabbed us
While our boys were fighting hard
For the freedom of the universe.
I'll say it's hell—eh, pard?

The Executor on the Job.

A farmer walked into the little general store in the village with a firm and decided step.

"I want that tub of margarine, and that lot of bacon, and all the other foodstuffs," he said.

"Good gracious," said the recently bereaved widow who kept the shop, "what do you want with all them things, Mr. Giles?"

"I dunno," replied the worthy farmer; "but you know I'm the executor of your husband's will and Lawyer Styles said I was to be sure and carry out all the provisions.

FROM CHERRY BLOSSOM LAND

The Japanese Give Good Example

It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on womanly health.

What is it that makes our Canadian women often pale, sallow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old at forty-five when they should be in their prime?

Women suffer in girlhood from backache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

After long experience in the treatment of women's diseases, Dr. Pierce evolved a vegetable tonic and corrective which he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a purely vegetable preparation, without a particle of alcohol contained in it.

When a woman complains of backache, dizziness or pain—when everything looks black before her eyes—a dragging feeling, with nervousness, she should turn to this "temperance" herbal tonic. It can be obtained in almost every drug store in the land and the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper. Put up in tablets or liquid. Dr. Pierce, of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.; will send a trial size of the tablets for ten cents.

Eat Buckwheats
Yes, You Can

Or Any Other Kind of Food Set Before You. But You Need a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet to Help the Stomach Move it Along.

Hot biscuits, buckwheats, rich cake and many other tempting foods are declared to be wholesome, digestible and nourishing under normal stomach conditions.

"These Hot Cakes Give More Enjoyment for Breakfast Than Anything Else Since I Discovered Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets."

Many people, however, once got the notion they couldn't eat such things and have grown in prejudice as a consequence. They have denied themselves almost everything except milk and water.

But you will find here and there one of this kind eating onions, cucumbers, melons, and other such terrors of the dyspeptic because he has found that by merely giving the stomach a little assistance there are no after effects from such indulgence. There is avoidance of gassiness, no sour risings, no water brash, you don't taste 'em hours after.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for both those who suffer after eating and for those who starve, for fear of suffering. They relieve the distress of indigestion and they also serve to assist the stomach to prevent indigestion.

Eating should be one of our chief enjoyments. It is really the most attractive of social gatherings, and it is worth our while to realize that we may indulge freely by exercising the precautionary measure of aiding the digestive process. Thus, you may eat your hot biscuits, buckwheats, rich cake, onions, mince pie, sausage, and so on, provided you take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet afterwards.

He felt shabbier still when she entered; she looked to him like an animated fashion plate of human height. From the courage of her hat to the swirl of her skirt, it was evident that Deanne-Pitt made money and knew where to spend it. An osprey in the hat was the only touch of vulgarity. Everybody would not have termed her pretty; but her eyes and teeth were good and both flashd when she talked. Her age might have been anything from thirty to thirty-five.

"I wanted to see Mr. Beaufort" she said, in a clear, crisp voice; "but I hear he's out."

"Yes; he is out," said Kent. "Is it anything I can do?"

"Well, I don't like the "interview." I dare say it was my own fault; but I object to suffering for my own faults—one has to suffer for so many other people's in this world. It's all about "Two and a Passion." I wrote "Two and a Passion" seven years ago; and I didn't get a royalty on it either. Why not quote the books I've done since, and say more about the one that's just out? You say "Mrs. Deanne-Pitt confessed to having recently published another novel," and then you drop it as if it were a failure or a hot coal. And 'confessed'—why 'confessed'? That's the tone I don't like in the thing. You write about me as if I belonged to another profession, and dabbled in Literature."

He felt that 'Billy' Beaufort would not be sorry to have missed her.

"May I see the proofs again?" he asked.

She gave them to him and settled herself in her chair. He looked at them pen in hand and she looked at him.

"It can easily be put right, can't it, Mr.——"

" 'Mr. Kent.' Easily—oh, yes! Will you tell me something about your new book? I'm ashamed to say I haven't read it yet."

"Don't apologize," she said. "It's called 'Thy Neighbor's Husbad.' "

"Does she bolt with him, or do you end it virtuously?"

"Virtuously, monsieur," she said, smiling. "You travel fast!"

"And—please go on! Are there cakes and ale, or does she tend the sick and visit the poor?"

"You appal me," said Mrs. Deanne-Pitt. "Whatever my faults, I am fin-de-siecle. Forgive me saying 'fin-de-siecle'—a modern version's needed called 'Thy Neighbor's Husband.' "

"Not questioning the lady's——"

"Oh, her happiness, of course!"

" 'This brilliant and analytical study, which is already giving rise to considerable discussion,' would be the kind of strain, then, would it not?"

"Entirely," she said. "I'm awfully sorry to give you so much trouble."

"The 'trouble's' a pleasure. You don't want your 'favorite dog' mentioned, do you? Favorite dogs are becoming banal. Er——"

"Three" she said. "Yes; a boy and two girls."

"Does the boy—'in a picturesque suit'—come into the room and lead up to 'evident maternal pride'?"

"He's a dear little fellow!" she answered. "But do you think 'evident maternal pride' would be quite in keeping? No; I'd stick to me and the work Besides, domesticity is tedious to read about; the dullest topic in the world is other people's children."

Kent laughed.

"I'll explain to Mr. Beaufort," he declared; "you shall have a revise sent on to-morrow. I'm sure you'll find it all right when he understands the style of thing you want."

"Thank you," she said dryly. "I assure you I have no misgivings, Mr. Kent. 'Kent'! I've never had any correspondence with you, have I? The name's familiar to me, somehow."

"An alias 'The Garden of England,' he said.

"No, you haven't written anything have you?"

"Two novels. One is published and the post is wearing out the other."

"I remember," she cried, uttering the title triumphantly; "I read it. What grand reviews you had! Of course I know now. I liked your book extremely, Mr. Kent, Humphrey Kent isn't it?"

"Thank you," he said. "Yes Humphrey Kent."

"And you go in for journalism too, eh"

"Oh, this is a new departure. I was never in a paper office until lately."

He felt shabbier still when she "Really!" she exclaimed. "You aren't giving fiction up?"

"I'm pot-boiling, Mrs. Deanne-Pitt. Do you think it very inartistic of me?"

"Don't!" she said. "Inartistic! I hate that cant. There are papers that are always calling me inartistic. One's got to live. Oh, I admire the people who can starve in West Kensington, and take three years to write a novel but their attitnde is beyond me. I write to sell, moi—though you needn't put that in the 'interview.' But I shouldn't have thought you'd have any trouble in placing your books—you oughtn't to to-day. I expect you've been too 'literary;' you'll grow out of it."

"You don't believe in——"

"I'm a practical woman. The public read to be amused and the publishers want what the public will read, good, bad or indifferent; that's my view. You mustn't make me say these things, though," she broke off laughing and getting up; "it's most indiscreet—to a pressman......I shall send you a copy of 'Thy Neighbor's Husband'—to a coleague. Good-afternoon, Mr. Kent. I'll leave you to go on with your work now. Pray don't look so relieved.

"I should value the copy extremely" he said. "It was anything but relief—I was struggling to conceal despair."

She put out her hand, and a faint perfume clung to his own after the door had closed. Though her standpoint was not his own, her personality had impressed him, and, as he watched her from the window re-entering her cab, Kent was sorry she had not remained longer.

JOURNALISTS PROVE MIGHTY HUNTERS

Irving S. Cobb, of the Saturday Evening Post, Damon Runyon, of the New York American, and William Macbeth, assisting sporting editor of the New York Tribune, struck camp at six o'clock Saturday morning after a week in the New Brunswick woods back of Petiac, and after a hike of eighteen miles through the woods came upon the first evidence of civilization in the form of an automobile and were driven back to Fredericton, where they boarded the train. Colonel Bozman Bulger, of the New York World, had been with the party, but left on Thursday for New York.

The members of the party were enthusiastic about New Brunswick and its beauties and said that, although they had heard much of its game, they had never expected to find moose and deer so plentiful. When they left McAdam all three made the firm resolution to return next year and if possible to make it an annual event.

Mr. Macbeth described the 18-mile hike from the camp saying that they broke camp at six o'clock that morning and were in Petiac at 12.04, although the guide had given them two more hours to do it in.

"Cobb fell into a stream on the way and went in up to his neck," said Mr. Macbeth. "We had some time getting him out. Then he went to work and sprained a ligament in his leg, so it's a wonder we are here at all."

Mr. Macbeth said that they had ha luck. "We brought down two moose and three deer. Runyon got the moose and a deer; I got a moose and Cobb got two deer."

Suffered If She Walked A Block

Mrs. Smith Was In A Run-Down Nervous Condition Before She Took Tanlac.

The list of testimonials in behalf of the merits of Tanlac grows daily as new tests of its powers are made. Mrs. A. F. Smith of 614 South 8th St., East, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in relating her experience with the medicine, recently, said:

"For the last three years I have suffered from indigestion, gas on my stomach, nervousness and constipation and, as I had used many different kinds of medicines and kept getting worse, I was beginning to think there was no help for me. I had gotten in such a run down, weak and nervous condition that I could not walk a block without suffering intense pain and was in no shape to do anything.

"But I am feeling altogether different now and I want to tell the people that it's all because of what Tanlac has done for me. It has helped me just like those whose statements I read in the paper said it helped them. I had not finished my first bottle until I was feeling better in every way. I have used four bottles now and my stomach is in condition to where I can eat just anything without any uncomfortable feeling afterwards. My nerves are in better shape than they have been in years. Before taking Tanlac I could not rest well at night, but now I can sleep like a child and that tired, worn out feeling has left me. Tanlac certainly is a grand medicine and I never lose an opportunity to recommend it to my friends and neighbors."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

Y.M.C.A. Notes

Sixteen delegates from China will be among those present at the International Y.M.C.A. in Detroit. Four already arrived from Japan and others from Egypt and South America. Every incoming liner brings men who have been working in foreign lands during the war.

The foreign work has been supported by local associations, and by hundreds of individuals in the United States and Canada who contribute from $100 to $20,000 to various phases of the association's activities. A significant fact is that every dollar used in carrying on the work was raised locally in those countries, while America contributed only to the support of the American secretaries who paved the way for future developments.

The expense of the work in South America, Mexico, China, Japan, Egypt Turkey, Portugal, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Phillipines was $1,097,058 last year. Two hundred and thirteen foreign and 445 native secretaries were employed.

In Japan and Korea there are 94 city and student associations with a total membership of 15,857. China has 187 Y.M.C.A.'s with a membership exceeding 30,0000. In India there are 127 branches with 1,500 members. The total membership in foreign lands is 70,258.

A late report from Siberia states that Y.M.C.A. activities are going on in ten separate soldiers clubs and fourteen army posts. Among the Czecho-Slovaks fifteen clubs have been organized among the troops and eighteen wagon canteens are supplying the soldiers who guard the Trans-Siberian railroad.

Rolling canteens have also been put in operation for the Italian, French, English, Poles, Serbs and Chinese.

A staff of 102 secretaries are employed in Siberia as follows: 17 with the A.E.F.; 10 in the International soldiers club at Vladivostock; 15 with the Czecho-Slovak army; 20 with returned Russian prisoners and demobilized civilians;. 2 with railroad men; 7 in the executive bureau; 12 in the lecture and educational department; 8 with the comptrollers; 4 in the supply section and 7 in the agricultural.

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—With around 5700 cattle on sale at the Union Stock Yards market yesterday, and with the quality generally medium to common, what few extra choice cattle there were on sale were readily picked up at around from 25c to 40c higher prices than that of last week. There was a better feeling generally in the trading, and a more active market.

Canner cows and bologna bulls sold readily at steady prices, and there was a good demand for the better class of milch cows and springers. There was a better enquiry, too, for good feeding steers, weighing around 960 lbs. and upwards.

With about 7000 sheep and lambs on the market, it was a little slow and draggy on the common and heavy lambs, the bulk of them selling at from 13c to 13½c per lb., with some choice blackface easterns selling at 14c.

The calf market, with a run of 400 head, sold at about steady with last week's prices. Choice veal sold at from 17½ to 18½c per lb.; medium, 13c to 16c; grassers and common, 5c to 6½c; heavy calves, unless real choice, a drug on the market.

With about 1800 hogs the market is holding steady. For to-day's trading the packers are quoting 15½c to the farmer, 15¾c f.o.b., 16¾c fed and 17c weighed off.

Two Little Girls Burn to Death.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 11. — Two girls, aged six and seven years, daughters of Otto A. Strey, farmer, were burned to death in their home in Dorion township when fire destroyed it about midnight Friday.

The father escaped from downstairs, taking a three-year-old boy with him. The mother threw a year-adn-a-half-old boy out of an upstair window, and followed him herself, while a fourteen-year-old boy escaped unaided. The father, on finding the two girls had not got out, tried to get in to save them, but was severely burned.

The family took shelter in a barn while the father walked more than a mile through the snow, with nothing on but his night clothes, and his feet bleeding from the burns and bruises, to get help.

KILLS "PHANTOM OF NORTH WOODS

"The phantom of the north woods," a white deer, one of the curiosities of the Adirondack Mountains, was killed by a hunter and is on exhibition at Saranac Lake, N.Y., attracting wide attention of hunters. The animal, a doe, is entirely white except for a few tufts of brown on the head. The doe weighed 100 pounds and was estimated to be two years old. The "phantom" for that was what it came to be called near St. Regis Falls, where it had eluded hunters two seasons, fell with a bullet through its head.

Fred Forshay of Carmel brought the much prized deer to earth with a remarkable shot when out hunting near his camp.

Fred Cheney, a registered guide, who is one of the best woodsmen in the vicinity of the Falls and who is proprietor of the Red House, had charge of the party and when the phantom fell he had much to tell of it. His sons, he said, had seen the queer animal several times bounding through the woods like a white flash and many hunter had shot at it. This was borne out by marks on the animal's hide made by bullets. The shot that gave Forshay the prize was a direct hit.

ASLEEP THIRTY DAYS

New York, Nov. 12.—Thiry days ago, Mrs. Dora Mintz was stricken with the sleeping sickness, that unexplainable and seemingly incurable illness, which, as far as doctors have been able to ascertain, may keep a victim in a comatose condition for an indefinite length of time. Today, she stilly lies at the Willard Parker Hospital with mechanically moving eyes that see nothing, a face dully and yellowly pale.

"I cannot say how long she will continue or how it will end," said Dr. Gidding, superintendent of the hospital "We simply don't know. —Nobody knows.

"She sees her husband and her sister every day and generally recognizes them."

Mrs. Mintz is given liquid nourishment and according to Dr. Gidding, she seems to be no weaker than a normal person would be after a month's confinement in bed.

Could Not Sleep

Mr. Earnest Clark, Police Officer, 338 King St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For three years I suffered from nervousness and sleeplessness. I believe my condition was brought about by overwork. I had frequent headaches, neuralgic pains and twitching of nerves and muscles. I had indigestion, was short of breath and easily tired. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and seven boxes of this medicine cured me of all my symptoms. I am now feeling one hundred per cent. better than I was, and have to thank Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the good health I am now enjoying."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Fit Feet Properly

At the time of the unfortunate affair. Several people were preparing to step on the huge endless belt that revolves continually and provides a means for the employees to reach one floor from another. Two men were on the elevator, namely, Wm. McDougal and Alias Kerteston. The belt parted at the top, and one man fell from the seventh to third floor and the other fell from the sixth to the second floor. Kerteston fell three stories and passed away after being removed to St. Joseph Hospital.

Toronto Baritone Pleases Belleville

Mr. Frank Oldfield, Soloist at Bridge Street Methodist Church Choir Concert, Made a Decided Hit—First Appearance in Belleville.

Heralded as 'The King of Canadian Baritones,' Mr. Frank Oldfield of Toronto, made his first appearance before a Belleville audience last evening at Bridge Street Methodist Church and fully substantiated the advance notices of his ability. Mr. Oldfield has a wonderful voice, musical, deep and clear and disinct in all the great range it possesses. His voice has a power and volume which would fill any sized hall and loses none of its beautiful tone in the most robust selections. In the old home songs or descriptive ballads, Mr. Oldfield is pariicularly entertaining with his rich sympathetic voice and wealth of modulation and expression. The large audience which filled Bridge Street Church, upstairs and down, expressed unqualified delight with insistent applause to which Mr. Oldfield generously responded with frequent encores. As the result of the impression made on his first visit Mr. Oldfield will always be a welcome visitor to Belleville.

In remembrance of Armistice Day, the programme appropriately closed with the singing of 'Land of Hope and Glory,' with solo by Mr. Oldfield and chorus by the choir. There was a remarkably fine execution of this stirring number and Mr. Oldfield's magnificent voice was heard to full advantage in the ringing challenge of its patriotic sentiments.

Mr. V. P. Hunt, organist of Bridge Street Church, directed the concert and played the accompaniments and to him is due the gratitude of everyone who attended for a delightful evening's entertainment.

Mrs. James Grant and Mr. R. J. F. Staples were heard in well rendered vocal selections, while Miss Winnifred Pearce, A.T.C.M., organist of Holloway Street Methodist Church and Miss Phyllis Bogart organist of John Street Presbyterian Church, gave organ solos which were greatly appreciated.

Miss Jesse M. Tuite in dramatic recital was as usual very entertaining, her conception of Sir Gilbert Parker's tale of the North Woods, "The Going of the White Swan," being especially thrilling and made excitingly real by Miss Tuite's dramatic talent.

The program was as follows:

Organ Solo—Mr. V. P. Hunt, "Swedish Wedding Patrol."
Chorus (Choir)—"Gloria in Excelsis," (Mozart's 12th Mass)
Vocal Solo—"There's a Land"—Frank Oldfield. (encore) "Young Tom O'Devon."
Miss Tuite—"The Going of the White Swan" (Sir Gilbert Parker).
Organ Solo—Miss Phyllis Bogart, "Jubilate Deo" (Silver)
Vocal Solo—"Arm, Arm Ye Bravo"—Frank Oldfield.
Encore—"Somewhere a Voice is Calling.
Ladies' Choir—"O What is This"
Mixed Chorus—'Come Sweet Morning' —Choir.
"Pipes of Gordon Men" (Hammond) —Mr. R. J. F. Staples.
Organ Solo—"Grand Chorus" (Hollins)—Miss Winnifred Pearce.
Song—"Floral Dance"—Mr. Oldfield.
Song—"There's An Old Fashioned House"—Mr. Oldfield.
Reading—Miss Tuite.
Aria—Mrs. J. Grant—"Rejoice Greatly" (Handel's Messiah).
Chorus—"Judge Me O God"—Mendelsshn Choir.
Song and Chorus—"Land of Hope and Glory" (Elgar)—Mr. Oldfield and Choir.

God Save the King

THE BELLEVILLE BOARD OF EDUCATION took a very wise and necessary course in securing the services of a specially qualified nurse to look after the physical welfare of the school children. ..I speak particularly with reference to the Eyesight as being of most importance. It is the universal conviction of leading specialists that this is an age of Eye-Strain, and children are no exception to this rule. A prominent Eye specialist says: "Eye-Strain in children hinders their proper development, and oftentimes changes their character and life." Children born with abnormal eyes, if the errors of vision are not large, learn to correct this by the unconscious use of certain muscles. In such cases if the child is of a robust constitution the trouble may pass unnoticed for some time, but in the end is bound to produce more or less trouble, while if the child is of a delicate constitution such efforts at correction will produce much disturbance, such as stomach trouble, headache, dizziness, nervousness, twitching of the nerves of eyes and face and other symptoms, more or less present at different times, but the error is always there, and vision is never clear without such muscular effort. A prominent Eye specialist in speaking on this point says, "It is highly important that every child seeking to enter the schools, should be subjected to a systematic examination, as to the state of vision, and where this is found defective, the parents should be notified and advised of the probable harm that will result if the error is not corrected by the proper glasses."

WE SPECIALIZE ON CHILDREN'S EYES.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY
SWOLLEN VEINS RELIEVED

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentleman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr. knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken up by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped. $1.25 a bottle at druggist or postpaid. A liberal Trial Bottle will be mailed your address for 10c in stamps. Booklet free. W. F. Young, Inc., 457

375,000 U.S. Machinists Vote On General Strike Question

UNIONS OPPOSE ANTI-STRIKE LEGISLATION NOW BEFORE CONGRESS—RAILROAD MEN WOULD GO FIRST—BALLOTS RETURNABLE AT END OF THE MONTH.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Three hundred and seventy-five thousand union machinists throughout the United States were voting on a general strike yesterday in connection with the railroad labor situation. "The vote is returnable late this month," said Wm. H. Johnston, president of the International Machinists' Union. "The questions directly before the men is whether they shall strike if Congress passes the anti-strike and compulsory arbitration legislation, now before it in connection with settling the railroad problem. If I know the machinists they will hit the street the minute this legislation passes—if it does."

MANY EMPLOYED ON RAILWAYS

One hundred and twenty-five thousand of the union machinists are employed in railroad shops. As provided in the strike ballot instructions they would be the first to go out. Later union machinists in all industries would be called out to support them in a simultaneous strike if necessary.

The machinists' vote is being taken at a time when members of two of the four great railway brotherhoods are conferring with Rail Director Hines, and pressing their demands for immediate wages increase to make their earnings conform with the increased cost of living. These two brotherhoods are the trainmen and conductors.

ANSWER SHORT OF DEMANDS

An answer falling far short of the demands of these unions was given to their committees, it was learned. President W. G. Lee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and President L. E. Sheppard, of the Order of Railway Conductors were to confer with Hines again today.

A referendum of the offer will be taken by both the trainmen and conductors throughout the country are threatening strike unless their demands are met.

A letter to machinists sent out with the strike ballots reads in part:

"It is very evident from events that with the signing of the armistice actual hostilities ceased in the world war and labor thought that by the signing of the declaration that the world was made safe for democracy. It appears that big business, special privileges and others who are seeking to destroy the standards created by declaration as war against the trade union movement both in the industrial field and in the legislative field. Individual contracts have been used in many instances to bring about a condition under which our organization could not exist. Laws have been introduced in Congress which would seek to rob us of the right to strike and several laws have been introduced which have for their purposes what is commonly termed compulsory arbitration."

Vaccinate On Arms Order Of M.O.H.

An Edict Directed at the Girls by the Provincial Authorities.

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Vaccination of civil servant employes at Queen's Park is proceeding steadily, upward of 300 having undergone the operation up to the present. The majority of these are girls or women clerks. All but three or four were vaccinated on the arm, the few exceptions, ahem. The fiat has gone forward, however, that all in future must be done on the arm, as according to the M.O.H., there is greater danger of infection from colored stockings and other garments than from loose sleeves. Sore arms are becoming the order of the day throughout the building but are regarded more as a mark of distinction than an affliction. Only in a few cases have employes been laid up following vaccination.

Exclusive of the city of Toronto 95 cases of smallpox have been reported to the Provincial authorities thus far in November. The epidemic appears to be most prevalent in Stratford, there are 19 cases and Woodstock where 11 are reported. There were nine cases in Krugerdorf in the Temiskaming district, 7 in Stouffville and six in Woodbridge. There are no other contagious diseases prevalent at the present time.

The Provincial authorities do not anticipate any outbreak of the sleeping sickness in Ontario. Several cases have been reported from the West but the disease has not yet made an appearance in this Province. Dr. Bell, assistant officer of Health, states that the disease is not the genuine sleeping sickness which is known in the tropical countries and which is caused by the bite of the tsetse fly.

New York Market Breaks With A Crash

No Group Spared—Call Money Up to 30—Tickers Away Behind.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Prices in the stock market broke with a crash at 1.30 o'clock yesterday. No group in the list was spared. General Motors fell below 300, and Crucible Steel dropped 212. Brokers reported it was almost impossible to borrow money at any price and a sacrifice of stocks resulted for whatever they would bring. Rails held up fairly well, but they had so shared in the rapid advance of industrials during the year.

The market became completely demoralized in the last hour when call money rose at 30 per cent., the highest rate since the panic of 1917. Overnight losses of 10 to 25 points were scattered throughout the list, and General Motors showed a decline of 65 points.

The volume of trading on the stock exchange was so heavy that at 2.30 o'clock it was announced the ticker tape recording the transactions was twenty minutes behind the market trading.

Ontario's New Minister Of Mines Wielded Pick And Shovel In Wales

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—Mr. Harry Mills, (the labor man from Fort William), who has been appointed new Minister of Mines, a new Ministry to be made by a special Act of Parliament from the old portfolio of Lands, Forests and Mines, is a young man of only 45, in the prime of life, practical and outspoken, tall, of medium weight with dark hair, just turning grey. Twenty years ago, in Wales, he told the Star today, he obtained first-hand experience of mining in the coal mines. With the exception having lived in the north country for over 22 years, and having taken a keen interest in the mines in that district, he has had no actual experience in his new department in this country. He has been a locomotive engineer, being chief of Division 243 at the present time and also president of the Board of Education in Fort William for the past three years.

"There's one sure thing," he said, sanguinely. "We'll have no trouble carrying on the Government. Our alliance with the U.F.O. is solid."

Another sure thing to him is that he will produce much of the revenue from his new demands of the mothers' pension scheme, which Labor has been advocating for years. At the same time the conditions of the miners in New Ontario must be improved.

"I never took much active part in actual politics," he said. He wishes for time only to concentrate on his problem, to prove that Labor is practical as well as visionary.

Succesful Dinner Of 21st Battalion

OTTAWA, Nov. 12—The dinner given by the Ottawa branch of the 21st Infantry Battalion at the Russell House, Tuesday evening, was attended by upwards of 150 members of the famous fighting unit, and was one of the most enjoyable and successful gatherings of the kind ever held in the Capital.

Veterans who had not seen each other since they parted in Flanders renewed acquaintance, and the "good times" were being everywhere discussed; the hardship and sadness of war time being scarcely mentioned, as is the happy characteristic of the Canadian soldier.

Brig.-Gen. W. S. Hughes, D.S.O., who commanded the battalion when it left for overseas early in the war, presided, and expressed his unbounded pleasure for the opportunity of meeting so many familiar faces. The splendid record of the unit, than which no battalion can boast a better, was touched upon, and the hope expressed that the good fellowship which was being evidenced would not diminish with the years to come.

Lieut.-Col. H. E. Pense, D.S.O., M.C. commanded the battalion when it returned to Canada on May 24 last; succeeding the late Lieut.-Col. Elmer D. Jones, of Brockville, killed in action, stated that the dinner constituted the inauguration of a greater movement than the "club" idea, which had been adopted by most of the units upon demobilization. He explained that clubs had been formed by ex-members of the 21st Battalion in a great many of the cities and towns of Ontario which had contributed to the personnel of the unit.

It was the intention of the ex-Twenty-Third men, however, to hold periodical gatherings, where representatives of all the clubs could denew acquaintanceship.

Veterans of the old battalion from as far west as Toronto, and many intermediate points were in attendance.

Toasts honored were: "The King," "Our Absent Comrades," and "The Canadian Corps." The dinner was heartily appreciated, and similar gatherings will be eagerly looked forward to by the "Old Boys" of the 21st.

Rumania Must Evacuate Hungary

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The Supreme Council today discussed the note to be sent to Roumania in response to Roumania's recent note. The Allied reply, it is forecasted, will be very firm in tone, the Roumanian note being regarded as evasive and unsatisfactory, notably so, in so far as it concerned the demand for the evacuation of Hungary by Rumanian troops. The Allied note was not completed today but it will be put into shape very shortly and forwarded to Bucharest within two days.

Dobbin, aviator, of Ottawa, were killed yesterday afternoon about four o'clock near Eganville as the result of an accident to an airplane in which they were flying. The airplane had been engaged to fly from Ottawa over Renfrew County by the Victory Loan Committee to drop literature and otherwise advertise the Loan in Renfrew County. Capt. W. H. Dobbin and Capt. R. M. Smith of Ottawa, were the aviators. Tuesday afternoon the airplane arrived at Renfrew and escending, remained here for the night. Yesterday morning Capt. Victory Loan Home Stretch Victorious Finish Anticipated

HASTINGS COUNTY MUST MAKE GOOD IN LAST WEEK AND SURPASS NEIGHBORS—EVERYBODY SHOULD WAKE UP TO GLORIOUS OPPORTUNITY FOR PAYING PATRIOTIC INVESTMENT.

We are on the home stretch of the Victory Loan campaign with a total of $1,610,500 team members' subscriptions and $100,000 special subscriptions. Everything depends on the next few days.

Last year Hastings County made a name for itself by piling up big totals in the last three days. Excitement is intense among local Victory Loaners. The big question is—Shall we repeat last year's performance?

Yesterday's totals indicated favorably. With the day's applications of $144,000 our percentage climbed to 89.47, a still greater lead on our percentage of time gone, now 83.33. Of this amount, however, $56,450 came from the C. N. R. in addition to the $60,000 previously subscribed by the employees of this railway. More is also expected to come from this source.

Everything for the final success of the campaign now depends on the people of Hastings County. Canvassers are exerting every effort. Driving over muddy country roads and trudging city streets from early morning till late at night, they are displaying endurance worthy of Arctic explorers. A great part of the burden for the final spurt devolves upon Belleville. Somewhat behind the other more prosperous canvassing districts, the way our city shows up during the next few days will largely mold the showing of the whole county.

Great rivalry is being desplayed for the highest honors at the end of the campaign. Bancroft, Dr. A. T. Embury and Mr. D. H. Morrison now lead the county with the highest percentage of returns, their latest reports this morning giving them a third crest for their flag. Deseronto has also won another crest. Great credit is due to Mr. T. J. Naylor and Mr. E. A. Rixen for the splendid way they have carried on their local campaign. They have some additional big subscriptions in view and hope to hold the highest percentage of all county districts at the end of the campaign.

Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, so long silent, is sending in fine returns. Mr. James A. Moore has 57.33 per cent. to his credit.

RALLYING CALL SENT TO ALL THE VETERANS

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—In a message flashed to all branches of the G. W. V. A. of Canada, W. P. Purney, Dominion President, has made the following statement:

"I am keenly dissatisfied with the result of Parliament's action. The people of Canada, I am sure, will be as fully dissatisfied. The matter of general re-establishment has been shelved, although brought clearly before the representatives of the people, and the responsibility therefore rests squarely upon the shoulders of Parliament.

"This situation can be temporary only. The future of the country depends largely upon the accomplishment of our hopes in this regard. Our efforts, in which we hope to gain the co-operation of a just and fair public, have only just begun. Immediate steps will be taken to obtain your views as to our future action. In the meantime I call upon you to unite in the advancement of a just and equitable cause."

W.E Raney K.C. Will Be New Attorney-General

W. F. NICKLE, K.C., OF KINGSTON, WAS OFFERED POSITION BUT FOR BUSINESS REASONS DECLINED—POSITION THEN OFFERED TO MR. RANEY, WHO ACCEPTED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—W. E. Raney, K.C., the well known prohibitionist and social reform lawyer, has been offered and has accepted the post of Attorney-General in the U.F.O.-Labor Provincial Government. This announcement was made today shortly after W. F. Nickle, K.C., had declined the position.

Personal circumstances which he cannot at present adjust caused W. F. Nickle, K.C., of Kingston, to decline the Attorney-Generaliship when offered to him this morning by Premier-Designate E. C. Drury. Mr. Nickle in an interview stated that Mr. Drury had asked him to accept the portfolio. "I gave it careful consideration from every angle," he said, "but personal circumstances that cannot at present be adjusted forced me to decline this offer."

He went on to say that he had been much impressed with the evident desire of Mr. Drury to promote efficiency and economy in the new government and to advance the interests of the people. He said he had nothing but sympathy and good wishes for the new Premier.

Six Resolutions From Belleville

Important Discussions Foreshadowed at Associated Boards of Trade Meeting.

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—At the sixth annual meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce to be held in the City Hall here on November 20 and 21 twenty-four far reaching resolutions aiming at industrial development and social and business betterment will be proposed by representatives of various associations.

From Belleville Board of Trade come six resolutions. They ask for the publication of a general report on the minerals and metals of Ontario, the consideration of making an annual apportionment of taxes on department stores, mail order houses and public utilities, so that municipalities where business is carried on and money is expended may receive a fair return for value given and franchise used; that railway freight and express rates on coal, wood and food products be reduced to the minimum of costs on all nationally owned lines, and that rates on all business and commercial telegraph and cables be fixed at the lowest possible figure; adoption of an Empire trade mark and assistance if necessary to British immigrants to Canada; publicity campaign for the development of Ontario agriculture and industries, and subsidy to aviation industry for commercial and postal purposes.

Hit at Foreign Magazines

The Brantford Board asks that the Minister of Finance be given discretionary power to place a prohibitive tax on all foreign magazines having a circulation in excess of 10,000 in Canada, unless such publications are prepared to introduce a Canadian section, space in which should be offered to Canadian advertisers at rates proportionate to the Canadian circulation. Brantford also asks that a permanent highway of concrete be built between Brantford and Hamilton, instead of the proposed bituminous macadam road.

Goderich Board asks for the appointment of a Royal Commission, among other things "to make a very careful investigation of all phases of the tariff, and of the merits of the numerous claims that are being set forth by the Western Grain Growers' Association, the Manufacturers' Association and the various Labor organizations, and other similar institutions that advocate special consideration of their claims or demands."

Encourage Steel Shipbuilding

Kingston board urges the Dominion Government to give every encouragement to the steel shipbuilding industry of the country and asks that the use of foreign built ships in the coastwise trade, at least those over five years old, be not allowed.

An educational campaign among all people for increased production in factory and on farm is urged by the Kitchener board. This board also suggests that the Ontario lines of the Grand Trunk be placed under the jurisdiction of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario for operation, on the understanding that the lines of railways shall be converted into electrically-operated roads as rapidly as the circumstances will permit.

Tax All Public Utilities

From Niagara Falls comes the suggestion that all property, real or personal owned in Ontario by Governments, municipalities or commissioners, and operated as public utilities, should be subject to municipal assessment and taxation in the same manner as if the said property were owned by private persons.

The Port Arthur Board of Trade asks the Dominion Government to build a 15,000,000 blast furnace and steel plant in their city as planned four years ago by the private owners of the C.N.R. A number of amendments of the Mining Act are also proposed. Another resolution asks the Government of Canada to grant a bounty of fifty cents per ton on all iron ore mined and smelted in Canada, the same to be made payable to the mine operator during the period of at least ten years.

Capital and labor are urged by the St. Catharines board to unite in the declaring the 1920 a year of industrial peace, during which there shall be no strikes or lock-outs and to pledge themselves to a united and determined effort to achieve social and industrial peace within the borders of Canada.

Want Daylight Saving

Three resolutions from the Toronto Board of Trade ask for investigation of the merits of an income tax based on net income, as a substite for the present business tax under the Ontario Assessment Act; the adoption of a Canadianization policy providing for the education of native-born illiterates and foreigners in English and the principles of government and citizenship; and a resolution favoring the adoption of daylight saving as a Dominion wide measure.

St. Thomas' Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, November 12th at high noon, when Miss Nellie Taylor, only daugher of Mrs. Sarah Taylor was united in marriage to Mr. James Palmer, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Palmer, Hillier.

The bride was given away by her mother, she wore a dress of brown Jersey cloth with hat to match. She was attended by Miss Gladys Bunnett who wore a pale blue silk dress with hat to mach. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Clayton Palmer, his brother.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the bride's home where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served The bride received many beautiful and useful gifts, among them, a substantial check from her mother. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl pendant and to the bridesmaid a pin set with amethysts, to the groomsman a set of cuff links. The happy couple left on the flyer for points west. On their return they will reside in Hillier, where the groom is a prosperous young farmer.

QUEEN'S MEDICAL SCHOOL MAY BE MOVED TO OTTAWA

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The possibility of Queen's University establishing one of the best medical colleges in Canada, in Ottawa, on a site adjacent to the new civic hospital to be erected on the Reid Farm, has almost become a surety. The proposition to move the medical school from Kingston to Ottawa has been mooted for some time, the matter reaching a head with the selection of the site for the new hospital.

CANADA'S FUTURE DEPENDS ON LOAN

Steady Employment and Prosperity Hangs on Victory Loan.

Canada's future prosperity depends to a great extent upon the success of the Victory Loan. No country can exist upon trade within its own boundaries. Canada counts on the trade with Great Britain and other allied countries to keep the flood of good times in the country.

The surplus products of the farm and the factory find their way across the seas. The revenue of the farmer and the manufacturer is dependent on this trade relationship being sustained. The employment of many hands depends on the orders that come to the firm. The pay envelope only comes with steady employment.

Great Britain and overseas countries are still desirous of continuing trade relations, but, overwhelmed with war expenses, they must be given credits for the time being. The farmer and the manufacturer must be paid for their products and manufactured articles in cash. Therefore, Canada must finance the proposition to keep the tide of commerce coming this way. But in order to have the money on hand to do this great thing, Canada must borrow from her people.

The Victory Loan offers bonds to subscribers paying 5½ per cent. interest. The guarantee behind the bonds makes them an absolutely safe investment. Victory Bonds are accepted as collateral at any bank, and can easily be turned into money at a profit. It is then to the interests of every Canadian to subscribe for all the Victory Bonds he can, for it is profitable, it is patriotic, and it is necessary for the continued prosperity of the country.

CANADA NEEDS MONEY

War Expenditures Still to Be Met From Proceeds of Victory Loan.

The war is over and won; but Canada's main expenditures for war will not be complete until well on into 1920. The $610,000,000 raised last year has all been spent, $400,000,000 having been largely devoted to soldiers—to maintaining them, bringing them home, providing the necessary medical services, training them. Most of the balance of the loan was lent to Great Britain to enable her to buy our surplus products. And money is still necessary — for soldiers, for providing markets, for our surplus products, for the needs of reconstruction. And that is why another Victory Loan is necessary. Canada still needs money, and needs it badly.

THREE HUMAN HEADS FOUND IN DUMP

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—To find three heads among the rubbish in a vacant lot in which they were playing was the disconcerting interruption which some boys experienced yesterday morning. They rushed to No. 13 station and told the officer in charge of their discovery. Lieut. Belanger at once sent some officers to investigate, and sure enough they found two heads among some rubbish and another nearby in a vacant lot on St. Christophe street, near Ontario.

There was grey hair attaching to one of the skulls. There have been no cases of disappearance reported from the neighborhood, and the police have nothing as yet to inidcate whether the case is one of foul play or whether the skulls came from some medical college and had been discarded by their owners.

Chamber of Commerce May Succeed Board of Trade

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN TO BE WAGED TO LINE UP BELLEVILLE BOOSTERS FOR BIGGER, BUSIER AND BETTER BELLEVILLE — REGULAR MEETING OF BOARD OF TRADE DISCUSSES FORWARD POLICY.

A regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade was held last evening when matters appertaining to the city's welfare were considered. Nine members were selected to attend the annual meeting of the Associated Board of Trade to be held at Toronto, on the 20th and 21st inst. and were instructed to invite the Association to hold its next Annual Meeting in this city. A campaign under the direction of the Canadian Publicity Bureau will be inaugrated in this city immediately and promoters of same are already established in an office here.

Amongst those present were Col. Marsh, President; Col. Ponton, Secretary; Messrs. J. Elliott; W. H. Nugent; E. R. McBride; F. Smih; H. McKay; G. A. Reid; T. Sullivan; C. J. Wills; A. J. Marsh; A. E. Brown; D. Sword, J. Cook; F. P. Frederick; W. Donohue; G. Walton; Ald. Hanna; Chief Brown, of the Fire Department; J. A. McFee.

Col. Marsh presided over the meeting. Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, after which a number of communications were read by the Secretary.

Mr. J. Elliott proposed, Mr. W. E. Gartley as a member of the Board and Col. Ponton seconded the proposition.

ANNUAL MEETING

President Marsh stated that the annual meeting of the Associated Board of Trade would be held at Toronto on the 20th and 21st inst. and Belleville Board should be well represented.

On motion the following members were selected to attend the meeting: Col. Marsh; Col. Ponton; F. S. Deacon J. Elliott; J. O. Herity; N. D. Macfadyen; Ald. Riggs; H. F. Ketcheson; Ald. Bone; C. M. Reid and W. D. Hanley.

A motion prevailed that the deputation from Belleville to the Associated Board of Trade be requested to invite the Board to meet in Belleville next year.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

Mr. Crosby of the Canadian Publicity Bureau in speaking of the campaign said there was no doubt but that it would be educative in its character. He was interested in the report that new industries were coming to Belleville. There is no particular difference between a Chamber of Commerce and a Board of Trade, as both can do the same thing. The Chamber of Commerce may possibly be more educative in a community than a Board of Trade. The modern Chamber of Commerce will do more than express in writing the opinion of members. In a modern Chamber of Commerce, a written programme of work is mapped out and accomplished, it is pracically a division of work for the development of the city. A paid executive from the population of Belleville, a membership of 500 should be obtained by a campaign and mean much for the future of the city of Belleville.

Col. Marsh stated that this matter of the Canadian Publicity Campaign had been thoroughly gone into by a committee and the prospects for a successful campaign were bright.

A motion prevailed that the City Council be asked to allow the putting up on Front street appropriate banners relative to the proposed campaign.

PROSPECTIVE STEEL PLANT

Mr. A. P. Gillies spoke a some length in refrence to being interested in New York capitalists who would like to locate an extensive steel plant in the city. He also stated that some of the capitalists would be in the city this week.

The matter was referred to the Executive of the Board to meet the capitalists when they come here and ascertain what they desire the city to do in the matter.

BAY BRIDGE

Mr. J. Cooke asked if anything was going to be done in reference to having the Bay Bridge made free and if the Government Engineer who inspected the bridge had made a report.

Ald. Hanna said he had heard that a report had been sent here but he had not seen it.

The Board made a request that it be furnished with a report if such there was in the city.

HOUSING PROPOSITION

Mr. Elliott of the Elliott Woodworking Company asked if there were houses being erected under the Housing Commission and if more would be erected.

Ald. Hanna—The matter is being attended by Mr. George Walton who is the Secretary and Inspector of houses being built under the Housing Commission plan.

The Board adjourned.

G.W.V.A. Notes

NOTES FROM OTHER BRANCHES AND COMMANDS G.W.V.A.

The policy of the Dominion Command in connection with the Re-Establishment Bonus Campaign was endorsed and continued support unanimously pledged by the Ontario Provincial Command.

Parkdale Branch scored a 'Direct Hit' with the resolution given below. All members are earnestly advised to follow its wise counsel. "That in open air meetings in parks and at street-corners, it is not possible to tile the door and know who is who; that loafers and thugs are apt to attach themselves to such assemblies of returned soldiers, and while superficially sympathizing with the objects of the meetings are apt to actively propagate rioting and participate in looting; that there is always a section of the public willing to confuse the returned men with the undesirable element in order to find an excuse for denying us the redress of grievances; and that therefore it is ordinary prudence for returned men to refuse to participate in meetings unless they are held in-doors where qualifications can be ascertained and responsibility fixed."

Arising out of the agitations for amendments in the G.W.V.A. Constitution, all members in Ontario will be given an early opportunity to vote on the following questions:

(1) Are you in favor of amending the Constitution to permit political action?

(2) Are you in favor of amending the Constitution to permit any person who has served honourably in the forces of Great Britain and her Allies to become members of the G.W.V.A.?

Action will be taken to obtain Vocational Training for those Canadian Nursing Sisters who after volunteering for service with the C.E.F. and being refused an opportunity to serve the Canadian troops, offered themselves to the Imperial authorities and were accepted as V.A.D. Nurses. Their pay during service overseas was 25 cents per day. Many of them suffered in health and are at present debarred from privileges already extended to their sisters who remained in Britain. Vocational training is given the British V.A.D.'s by the Imperial Authorities, but so far the Canadian Government has not made any such provision for Canadian V.A.D. nurses resident in Canada before and since the war.

The Dominion Command was requested by Ontario Provincial Command to hold a Dominion Convention at the earliest possible date to deal especially with the problems of Re-Establishment and to consider the advisability of attending the Constitution, extending opportunities for membership to all persons who have served in the Sea, Land and Air forces of Great Britain and her Allies and the deletion of clauses which at present prohibit the G.W.V.A. from taking political action.

The following message was telegraphed to Mr. Calder, Chairman Parliamentary Re-Establishment Committee Ottawa, and Mr. C. G. MacNeil, Dominion Secretary-Treasurer, G.W.V.A. Ottawa: "Ontario Provincial Executives now in session express great dissatisfaction with the report of the Parliamentary Committee on Re-Establishment as printed in the Press, in that it has not seen fit to recommend a just increase in Pensions to widows, orphans, dependents and disabled men and further Gratuity according to the scheme advanced by the G.W.V.A. We further emphatically protest against the policy whereby widows of fallen Comrades and needy returned soldiers shall be compelled to seek relief from the Patriotic Fund or any other similar body."

All members are urged to wear their G.W.V.A. badges at all times. The organization which has done so much for widows, orphans, soldiers' dependents and the men themselves, deserves that much recognition on the part of its members.

There are now 212 Branches of the G.W.V.A. in Ontario with 41,860 fully paid-up members. Ninety-eight Branches have been organized since January 1919. Direct aid to Braches has involved the expenditure of $6,479.59 up till September 30, 1919. The Provincial Secretaries and Members of the Provincial Executive have made 329 visits to the various Branches.

The Ontario Provincial Command have satisfactorily settled 868 claims for pension, post-discharge pay, back-pay, etc.

FEARED INVASION.

Exciting Days In Western Ontario During Fenian Raids.

Notwithstanding the bloodless character of the Fenian Raid, as compared with the terrible struggle that has just closed in Europe, there was really more excitement in Goderich and surrounding country in 1866 than there was in 1914. There was the chance that Goderich itself might be an objective of the invaders, and warlike preparations were made accordingly, says Wm. Swaffield in the Toronto Star Weekly.

For about six weeks after the commencement of hostilities in 1866 business of all kinds in Goderich and its surroundings was at a standstill. I well remember when I donned the badge of Home Guard and night and day tramped up and down to the harbor, where trouble might first have been expected if the invader reached our shores. The garrison consisted of an artillery company, a rifle company and an infantry company, and these were reinforced by the "fighting Irishmen" from Goderich Township and the adjoining country.

The Hand bakery, opposite the present Park House, was taken over as the guard-room, and rifle pits were constructed along the lake bank, opposite the residence now occupied by G. M. Elliott. The pits had men stationed in them at all times, night and day. Down below on the docks barrels of salt were utilized to make a "battery," and every precaution of defence was taken.

They were all ready to shoot, when the look-outs announced that a steamer had been sighted on the lake. Excitement prevailed, and the men of the garrison at the harbor and the riflemen on the bank prepared for action. The vessel loomed larger and headed for the harbor. On she came, until directly under the guns of the garrison. Not a sign from her masthead or her decks to indicate whether she was friend or foe, and with the utmost bravado she reached the inner basin.

Then, when another moment might have meant her destruction, she unfurled the American flag. It turned out to be the United States Government ship Michigan with Gen. Sherman aboard.

The posting of sentries along the lake bank was continued after this incident. I was with a company which had a post farther around the lake bank than the present Hotel Sunset. One morning about daybreak a groundhog or some such animal startled a sentry as it moved along the bank, and the sentry shot it, alarming the rest of the guard.

At one time word that the enemy had left Chicago, en route to Goderich. At another time it was given out that a number of vessels had left Port Huron for Goderich. The news spread like wildfire. As I was acquainted with places along the lake shore where an attempt might be made to land, I started out in the night with John Campbell to warn the settlers along the lake shore. They in turn warned other residents along the Bayfield road. About this time horsemen were put on duty between Goderich and Bayfield, and infantrymen with rifles tramped along the Bayfield road to meet the enemy. Not all of them had rifles. It was reported that one of the recruits had joined the company as it marched along, his only weapon being a pitchfork.

Sme of the people went through experiences like those of the refugees in Europe, and the few survivors of those times know how to feel for war sufferers. One man took his cow and his bed, hoisted his bed on his back, and led the cow to the highlands of Colborne Township. Another man between Goderich and Bayfield made a supply of pancakes by way of an "iron ration" and took these with him to the safe shelter of a hollow log. One farmer buried his new stove, his most treasured possession, lest it be broken by the invaders. Many others buried their valuables.

"Reds" Like Canada.

All that remains of the Finnish Foreign Legion, which, under British leadership, fought the Germans on the Russian frontier, but would not fight the Bolsheviki because they were revolutionaries themselves, want to come to Canada. Away up in the Baltic are these would-be Canadian citizens, who helped the allies against the Teutons, but have been a problem ever since. These are strange allies since the legion was recruited from none other than former members of the Finnish Red Guard who were expelled from their country after the last change of Government there. Men without a country, they were formed into a foreign legion, 14,000 strong, and under British and Canadian officers did good work against the Germans, who tried to cross the Russian frontier to reach Murmansk. After the armistice, however, they refused to fight the Bolsheviki. They were all but Bolshevists themselves. Through the efforts of Britain most of the legion was finally repatriated, but there was a certain element too steeped in revolutionary ideas for the Finnish Government to allow re-entry. They were blacklisted men. They were formed into details and placed under Lieut. T. S. Wetton, of Winnipeg, a Canadian who went out with the Siberian force as an officer in the Devonshires. Wetton protests they are not Bolshevists, although a little radical in tendency. He says they are anxious to come to Canada, and he has made representations to the Dominion immigration authorities in that respect. However, it is scarcely likely that Canada will see the matter in the same light. Wetton's following are the very cream of Finnish revolutionism, Oskari Tokoi, former Red Prime Minister for Finland, being an N.C.O. and a number of other prominent wavers of the red flag ranking as mere privates.

COOKING THEIR OWN GOOSE.

New York union printers who went on a "vacation strike" in defiance of the orders of union officials are now anxious to get back in good standing and have their officials get them out of the mess they are in. The spirit of rebellion seems strong since the war and labor union men have repeatedly injured the cause of organized labor by refusing to be guided by the ability and experience of tried and true leaders. The printers' strike in New York will result in many publications being printed permanently elsewhere and New York printers will have to migrate to overtake their jobs. Another loss to the men from the strike is in the development of photographic plate processes which may do away with much of the composition work formerly the province of printers.

THIS YEAR'S CROP SURPLUS.

The estimated value of Canada's field crops for the year 1919 is approximately $1,510,000,000 in round figures, though the Government experts will not be in a position to give the exact figures for some weeks yet. By a coincidence Canada's war debt to Canadian holders of Victory and other bonds is almost precisely the same amount. That is to say, Canada in the present year which has not been one of phenomenal crops, has produced enough in grain, roots and other products of the field to pay off her entire debt to her own people up to the present time if the entire bulk of it could be devoted to that purpose. This, of course, excludes live stock production which would help to swell the total; and if we were able to add the value of our mineral output, our fisheries, and our factories this year the aggregate would be enormous.

Such figures go to show why foreign investors regard the current issue of Victory Bonds as such a sure thing. Of course so great a production signifies a vast surplus over the amount required for our own needs ;and to get rid of that surplus on profitable terms we must cultivate the foreign market by international credits. That process can only be achieved by a splendid over-subscription to the Victory Loan. The days are slipping away. You have only until Nov. 15 to decide what you are going to do about it; and no one that can buy bonds should hesitate for a moment longer.

BATTLE OF CHRYSLER'S FARM.

On November 11, 1813, the British won a decisive victory over the American army at Chrysler's Farm, when Colonel Morrison attacked and defeated two armies of Americans who were attempting to reach Montreal. These invaders had divided their forces at the head of the Longue Sault Rapids, and marched on. Morrison saw that it was a splendid opportunity to strike. Had the two forces united the story of the conflict might have read differently in Canadian history. It was a smart fight that took place on the 11th of November, 1813. The advantage went to the British, who, out of an army of 800 men, lost in killed and wounded about 180, while the Americans with 2,500 men, suffered casualties estimated at over 300 men with an additional 100 taken prisoners. The invaders were thus cut off from Montreal where they had hoped to be victors and to establish themselves for the winter. They were in consequence forced to retreat just as winter was coming on. Their line of march was harrassed night and day by the British patrols, and in this way one hundred sleigh loads of war stores, chiefly food and munitions, fell into the hands of the British and prizes. This was in itself a great victory as the army of the King was none too well equipped for winter and the conflicts that spring would certainly bring again. The biggest effect, however, was not in the prize stores or in the number of men slain or put out of action or even in the freeing of the Montreal district from the threat of the enemy for the winter. It was in the shaking of the morale of the foe who hitherto had deemed himself almost invincible and who held a supreme contempt for the small armies that were seeking to arrest his activities in the British domain. In even greater proportion it cheered the Royal forces and gave them greater confidence in the appeal to arms for 1814—destined to be the year of final victory.

WHAT A CHRISTIAN IS.

It has always been a rather difficult matter to define just what qualities go to make up a real Christian, but the London Observer undertakes to answer the question of what a Christian is, as follows:

> Is it necessary to go to church in order to be a Christian? The question is often argued over in these days of enlightenment, but I have not heard a clergymen venture nearer to a reply than did the Rev. E. S. Wood in an address to a meeting of lads at the Church Congress service in the De Montfort Hall, Leicester.
> Mr. Woods, who is a younger brother of the Bishop of Peterborough, the president of the Congress, served as army chaplain in the Ypres salient. He gave an excellent send-off to the congress by striking a frankly truthful note which is not too often heard.
>
> "Some people," he told the lads, "think that a Christian is the same as a regular churchgoer. It does not follow at all. Others think a Christian is a person who holds the right kind of belief. That again, does not follow. There are people who know the creeds and the catechism by heart, but I should hesitate to call them Christians. Others think that being a Christian is a kind of dodge to get them into heaven. That again is off the target.
> "A Christian is a man who is always learning to be unselfish.
> "Here is a fellow who is always trying to "wangle" the biggest helping at the family dinner, who keeps an apple in his pocket rather than share it with a friend, who plays for his own hand and shoves weaker ones aside.
> "Now, take the other fellow. Anything he has he shares. He tackles the hardest job, stands up for the weak, and is the handy man who does things for others with a smile. That is a Christian."

Everybody, for that matter, loves a cheerful giver, especially when the giver is the other fellow, and while the blessings of receiving may not be as great as those of giving, owing to the High Cost of Living, Ye Editor will try and content his soul with the thought of the other fellow's blessing on the giving end.

A Wide Gulf Fixed.

London Advertiser.

There is a wide gulf in these days between the high ideals that the public set for the profession of the school teacher and the actual value that they place upon those ideals as measured by teachers' salaries. In a time when the whole of the industrial class is moving forward by leaps and bounds in the matter of increased reward for its labor, the teachers, in common with one or two other professions, notably the ministry, have gained so little that they have become a by-word for meagre income and straitened conditions of life.

Making the Great Seal.

London Daily Express.

The affixing of a "wafer Great Seal" to the Treaty of Peace is a somewhat less laborious work than the making of the seal, which is a considerable business. The wax is not put upon the paper as with more humble seals, but it is in the form of a large disc with an impression on either side. It is kept in a wafer case attached to the document by a tag imbedded in the wax. The seal itself consists of two heavy silver plates, in one of which is cut the impression for the front of the device, and in the other that for the back, and new plates cost—or cost in pre-war times—£700. When a seal is required a mass of wax is softened in warm water, cooled in cold, placed between the two plates and impressed.

THE WESTERN MEN.

The men of the North are stern and shrewd;
The Eastern men are strong;
The Midland men toil hard and late
To roll the world along;
The Southland men are kind and slow
As their placid vales and streams;
But, oh! it's the men of the West Country
Who are the Dreamers of Dreams.

They read the runes of the changing year
On the heath and fern-clad hills;
They learn the lore of the Other Things
In the pools of the peat-brown rills.
Their eyes are turned to the sunset glow,
And through its golden bars
They see the land of the 'What-may-be,'
And the glint of its guiding stars.

The west wind sings in their tranced ears
The song of the Far Beyond;
The sea's breath lures their souls to sail
On the tracks no man hath conned;
So they seek adventure, not knowing why
They follow those shifting gleams,
For that is the weird of the Western men,
Who are the Dreamers of Dreams.

Such as have power on the earth, to help, and make wise, and reprove.

The soul and its limitless vision, more wide in its scope than the wind.

Now art thou one with the voices whose music is ever abiding,
Who sweeten the wine of our gladness, and bedew with the solace of song,
The dust and the dearth of our journey, inspiring, uplifting, and guiding,
Who strengthen the knees that are feeble, and make tender the souls that are strong.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Locomotive Engineer Minister Of Mines

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—Mr. Harry Mills, Labor member for Fort William, was selected by the conference of Labor members and defeated candidates as Labor's second Cabinet Minister. He is to be Minister of Mines. As soon as an act of Legislature is passed creating this department from the portfolio of Lands, Forests and Mines, Mr. Mills will take his seat in the Cabinet.

The Labor conference was satisfied with the exception of Mayor M. M. MacBride of Brantford, and Mr. Frank Greenlaw, with the decision of Mr. E. C. Drury to create the new position of Minister of Mines. Mr. Walter Rollo, the leader of the Labor group, spent yesterday morning with Mr. Drury.

The Cabinet position of Minister of Mines has been offered to us, and we have recommended that it be filled by Mr. Harry Mills of Fort William. His choice was unanimous," said Mr. Rollo, after the meeting. Mr. Rollo declared that the meeting was harmonious. Mayor MacBride stated his position. None of the members or defeated candidates replied to him.

CHAPTER XV

She was living in the Avenue Wagram—she had taken a small furnished flat there for a few months—and when he encountered her on the boulevards, about a week afterwards, Kent was puzzled to discover a reason why he had not availed himself of her invitation. He called a day or two later, and found her cynical but stimulating. In recalling the visit, it appeared to him that she was more entertaining in conversaion than in print, which suggested her good things were not as good as they sounded, but while she talked he was amused. He left the flat with the consciousness of having spent a very agreeable half-hour, and was sorry that her 'Day,' which she had mentioned to him, was a fortnight ahead. She seemed to know many people in Paris whom he would be glad to meet and the entree to the little yellow drawing-room promised to be pleasurable, apart from the hostess, with whom he had drunk 'English tea' and smoked Egyptian cigarettes. That she was a widow he had taken for granted from the commencement, and his assumption proved to be correct. She was a woman who struck one as born to be a widow: it was difficult to conceive her either with a husband or living in her parents' home. As to her children, she spoke of them frequently and saw them seldom. Kent decided that she was too fashionable and a trifle hard, but this did not detract from the pleasure the visits afforded him; perhaps his perception of her character was responsible for much of it, indeed, for it rendered it additionally complimentary that she was nice to him.

She was surprised to learn he was married, and declared that she looked forward to knowing his wife. She did not however, take any steps to gratify the desire and Kent was not regretful. He felt that few things more productive of biredom for two could be devised than Mrs. Deane-Pitt and Cynthia would find a tete-a-tete, and though he was reluctant to acknowledge it to himself, he had a feeling also, that the lady would be a little contemptuous of him afterward if it occurred. He knew her opinion of young men's marriages in the majority of cases and was uncomfortably conscious that she would not pronounce his own to be one of the exceptions.

Mrs. Walford's letters to her daughter hitherto had been in her most enthusiastic vein. Mr. McCullough had given the disappointed bass a berth in Berlin, and in her epistle this was alluded to as a 'position,' upon which she showered her favorite adjectives of 'jolly' and 'extraordinary' and 'immense.' Caesar was 'McCullough's right hand,' the 'best houses in Berlin' were open to him and his prospects, social and pecuniary, were dazzling. Of late, however, he had been dwelt on less, and one morning a letter came which contained a confession of personal anxiety. The recent heavy drop in American stocks and the failure of two or three brokers, had seriously affected the jobber. They thought of trying to let The Hawthorns, which was much too large for them now and moving out of the neighborhood. Caesar remained McCullough's right hand but quite briefly and it was evident that the writer was in great distress.

Cynthia was terribly grieved and startled. She dashed off eight pages of love and inquiries by the evening mail and when the news was confirmed with more particulars, she felt she could do no less than run over to utter her sympathy in person.

Kent agreed that perhaps it was advisable, and raised the money that was necessary cheerfully enough by pawning his watch and chain. Only when she sent him a rather lengthy telegram from Streatham detailing her mother's frame of mind, he felt that she was exaggerating his share in her solicitude.

The chilly salon, where the ladies played forfeits after dinner, or the vivacious daughter thumped the piano, was not attractive during Cynthia's absence. Neither was it lively to smoke alone in his room, or to go to a theatre or a music-hall by himself and when, in calling on Mrs. Deane-Pitt he mentioned his solitariness and she proposed that he should take her to the Varietes he accepted the suggestion with alacrity.

As he obtained the tickets for nothing, his only expense was the cabs and the liquors between the acts, and it was so enjoyable laughing with her on the lounge of the cafe, that the recollection of their being paid for out of the balance of his loan from the monte-piete was banished. Mrs. Deane-Pitt made some more of her happy remarks while they sipped the chartreuse and her teeth and eyes flashed superbly. The piece was a great success, but Kent thought the entriactee were even gayer; and when the curtain had fallen and they reached the Avenue Wagram she would not hear of his leaving her berfore going in and having some supper.

The liquors looked rather mean to him contrasted with the little table he saw laid with its mayonnaise and a bottle of champagne, and his exhilaration was momentarily damped by envy Fiction meant a good deal when one was lucky; how jolly to be able to live as this woman did! Her maid took away her cape and hat and he opened the bottle. She drew off her long gloves and patted her hair before the mirror with fingers on which some rings shone.

"Let's sit down," she said. "Am I all right?"

'look so charming or so young.
look so charmig or so young.

"You have a color," he admitted.

"A proof it's natural; when we went out I was as pale as a ghost. I work too hard. do—what are you smiling at?—I work horribly hard. Life's so dear—yes, 'expensive'—don't say it, it would be unworthy of you. And I can't do a fifth part of what's offered me, with all my fag."

"Am I supposed to sympathize with you for that?" he asked.

"Certainly you should sympathize; what do you suppose I tell you for—to be felicitated? Do you think it's agreeable to have to refuse work when one needs the money it would bring in? The trials of Tantalus were a joke to it. I had to let a twenty-thousand-word story for 'The Metropolis' slide only the other day, and I could place half a dozen shorter tales every week if I'd the time to write them."

"You do write a great number" said Kent, "and you seem fairly comfortable."

"'Wise judges are we of each other' Where from? You don't know 'The Lady of Lyons.' You ought to see my bills, that music-stand over there is full of them. That's the place I always keep them in; I'm naturally tidy, it's one of my virtues. I had to turn out Chopin's Mazurkas yesterday to make room for some more. I only came to Paris because people don't write you so may abusive letters when they have to pay twopence-half-penny postage. Oh, I'm comfortable enough in a fashion, but I've my worries like my neighbors. I suppose I'm extravagant, but I can't help it. Besides, I'm not. Do you think I'm extravagant "

He looked at her and nodded smiling.

"No," he said, "not really? Why?"

"Heavens! you haven't the illusion that you're parsimonious. I believe you spend a small fortune on cabs alone."

"I don't spend a solitary franc on one when I'm not alone."

"You never walk, so far as I can ascertain."

"Your rent is somewhat heavy," suggested Kent, "with two flats going at once."

"Wretch! do you lecture me because I couldn't find a tenant for the Victoria Street place? He blames me for my misfortunes!"

Woman's Hair Reches To Knees

A Year Ago Was Threatened With Baldness. Tells How She Made Her Hair Grow

Mrs. Esther Emery, now visiting friends in the city, is the fortunate possessor of marvelously beautiful hair, which, when loosened from its coils, falls to her knees. Moreover it is of soft, silky and fluffy texture and in color a glorious, glossy gold. Yet just one year ago she was threatened with baldness. Urged to tell how she had obtained this wonderful growth in so short a time, she said:

"Twelve months ago my hair, which then reached barely to my shoulders was falling out at an alarming rate and growing very thin, actually exposing the bald scalp in several spots. It was dull and lifeless in color, turning grey in patches, and very dry and brittle. My head was covered with dandruff and itched like mad all the time. I tried fully a dozen different hair tonics, but they never did me a bit of good. One day I chanced to read in my home paper of a simple home prescription to make the hair grow that was recommended by a well known physician. It said that by taking ordinary Lavona de Composee and mixing with Bay Rum and Menthol Crystals and applying to the scalp each night with the finger tips that new hair would grow very rapidly. I decided to try it and had my druggist mix 2 ounces of the Lavena de Composee with 6 oz. of Bay Rum and ½ dr. of Menthol Crystals, and started to use it. My, how quickly my hair did grow. First the hair stopped falling, the itching ceased and the dandruff disappeared Then tiny little hairs appeared all over my scalp. These grew and grew as though nothing would ever stop them. They are growing yet and, while, of course I have used this treatment steadily and expect to continue it, at least until my hair reaches the floor I might have stopped and been perfectly satisfied at the end of three months. I think that any woman can get long, thick, beautiful hair by using this prescription as I have recommended it to several friends and all are delighted with the result. The prescription is very inexpensive and any druggist can fill it."

Those who use it should be careful not to get it on the face or where the hair is not desired.

ESTIMATES OF YIELD.

Detail of Figures on Canadian Field Crops Show Decline.

Following is the detailed statement of Canadian crop yields, as issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, from reports of correspondents at the end of September:

The total yield of wheat in Canada is now placed at 193,688,800 bushels, including 174,687,000 bushels of spring wheat and 19,001,800 bushels of fall wheat. Upon the acreage sown the average yield per acre is 10½ bushels for spring wheat, 23¾ bushels for fall wheat and 11¼ bushels for all wheat. In 1918 the total yield of wheat was 189,075,350 bushels, or 11 bushels per acre. For oats the average yield per acre for Canada is 27 bushels, representing a total of 399,368,000 bushels as compared with last year's average of 28¾ bushels and a total of 426,312,500 bushels. Barley, with an average of 22 bushels, yields 66,443,500 bushels, as against last year's average of 24½ bushels and total of 77,287,240 bushels. Rye with an average yield per acre of 14½ bushels yields the total of 8,234,100 bushels as against 15¼ bushels and 8,504,400 bushels in 1918. The yields in 1919 for the three prairie provinces are estimated at 161,419,000 bushels of wheat, 246,856,000 bushels of oats, 46,412,000 bushels of barley, and 5,954,000 bushels of rye.

The quality at harvest time of the principal grain crops for Canada expressed in percentages of the previous ten years was as follows: Fall wheat, 96 (89); spring wheat, 91 (99); fall wheat, 92 (98); oats, 90 (94); barley, 89 (97); rye, 92 (92); peas, 91 (95); beans, 95 (82); buckwheat, 96 (86); mixed grains, 94 (98); flax, 93 (92), and corn for husking, 94 (89). The figures within parenthesis represent the quality of the crops in 1918.

The average condition of root and fodder crops in Canada at the end of September, expressed in percentages of the decennial average, was as follows, with last year's figures for comparison placed within parenthesis: Potatoes, 95 (93); turnips, mangolds, etc., 91 (96); sugar beets, 85 (97); fodder corn, 95 (92); alfalfa, 91 (89). By provinces potatoes appear to be best in Quebec, 103, the other provinces ranging as follows: Saskatchewan, 97; New Brunswick and Alberta, 96; Nova Scotia, 94; Prince Edward Island, 93; British Columbia, 90; Manitoba, 89, and Ontario 81.

"Autumn" or "Fall."

Both are correct, "autumn" being rather more classic and generally used in England; while "fall" is now distinctly American and more expressive in its reference to the time of falling leaves. In England, the autumn is still sometimes called "the fall of the leaf." An English writer says: "Fall is better on the merits than autumn, in every way; it is short, Saxon, picturesque; it reveals its derivation to everyone who uses it, not to the scholar only, like autumn; and we once had as good a right to it as the Americans, but we have chosen to let the right lapse and to use the word now is no better than larceny." But if "fall" is more expensive, "autumn" has sanction of long usage and classical approval. The poets all give it the preference. Different ones speak of "congenial autumn," and "yellow autumn, weather with nodding corn."

Plumb Plan and the Author

GLENN E. PLUMB has become famous in a fortnight. A little while ago his name was practically unknown outside of railway circles. It is now familiar throughout the United States and Canada, and no doubt has been heard by millions in other countries. Mr. Plumb leaped to sudden distinction when the railroad brotherhoods of the United States declared that they wanted the United States to extinguish private ownership in the railroads of the country and operate them in accordance with the "Plumb plan." Then everybody began to ask what was the Plumb plan, and who was Plumb. In brief, the Plumb plan is a plan whereby the Government takes over all the railroads of the country, guaranteeing the private owners a certain percentage of interest upon their investments, and then turns their operation over to a board composed in equal numbers of Government representatives, representatives of the management or high officers, and representatives of the drivers, firemen, conductors, and so forth. The profits are to be divided equally among them — please don't laugh—and the deficits are to be the exclusive affair of the public. Under this plan it is claimed that the roads will be more economically operated than at present, the men will be able to get all the wages they want, and the public will get cheaper transportation.

It's a great plan, and seems to put Mr. Plumb up in a class with Bela Kun. It is not, as might be supposed, the scheme drawn up in half an hour by a demagogue whose only acquaintance with railroads was formed from the brake beams. It is the carefully-though-out solution of the railroad problem of a man who has had wide and specialized railroad experience, who has been a corporation lawyer, a railroad receiver, and finally the general counsel of the Organized Railroad Employes of America. He was born in Iowa in 1866, but spent his boyhood in Illinois and graduated from Oberlin College, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Later he spent one year at Harvard, but decided to complete his legal education in the West, and graduated from the Northwestern University. He then entered a law office in Chicago, his firm representing the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. In the five years he remained he learned the rudiments of railroad law. This enabled him in 1900 to secure a retainer as attorney for the General Railways Company of Chicago, and while holding this position he is said to have matched his wits time and again with Charles T. Yerkes, owner of the other traction properties in Chicago, and one of the keenest railway men of his day.

For three years he was attorney for the receiver of the General Railways, manager of the road and receiver, being in complete charge when the road was reorganized and handed over to the consolidated traction enterprises that took charge of all the city's traction properties. In 1905, when Mayor Dunne, of Chicago, made his effort to straighten out the city's traction difficulties, he retained Plumb as special counsel for the city. It was in this period, it is said, that he began developing the ideas that have now appeared before the world as the Plumb plan. For a short time afterwards he was president of the Calumet & South Chicago Railroad, a street railway with some two hundred miles of track, and when this road was absorbed by the Chicago City Railway Co., Mr. Plumb went back to the practice of law.

It was his theory of railway valuations that attracted the attention of the brotherhoods, and in 1917 Mr. Plumb was retained to represent the railway brotherhoods before the Inter-State Commerce Board. This spring he became counsel for the ten other railroad labor organizations and therefore is entitled to speak for all American railroad organizations, just as Mr. Gompers is entitled to speak for the American Federation of Labor. In May, Mr. Plumb went to Washington to direct his propaganda and educate the public as to what the railroad employes want. He established a weekly paper and gathered round him some clever writers and cartoonists, all of them having a marked radical, not to say Bolshevist, slant. He now is at the head of a powerful organization which in a single fortnight prepared and despatched 1,500,000 pamphlets setting forth the Plumb plan. There must be plenty of money behind him, and Mr. Plumb says that in a year he will have cash contributions amounting to one million dollars.

Recently Mr. Plumb appeared before a Congressional committee and explained his plan. In the course of this examination he asserted that he had never read a book on Socialism, and did not know what a Soviet was. To which it might be retorted that he was quite capable of writing a book on railway socialism, and that what his plan proposes is the Soviet government of the railroads. It has been pointed out that his propagandists are writers noted for their radicalism, and that none of them has ever had any connection with railroad affairs. His own knowledge of railroad matters is not to be questioned, but all this knowledge appears to have been left to one side when he made the suggestion that there were likely to be profits under such administration as he proposes. On the other hand, he can point to the wrecking of railroads under private operation and Wall Street manipulation. If the American Federation of Labor supports the demand of the railroad brotherhoods for the Plumb plan, the author thereof may take his place as one of the momentous figures in American history.

Japanese Spinners.

The cotton spinning industry in Japan is regarded by many to be as important commercially as the silk industry. The number of cotton spinning mills increased from 152 in 1909 to 177 in 1918.

ROMANCE OF OIL.

Has Been Used In the Intrigue of Mexico.

The romance of Mexican oil is one of the most interesting chapters of industrial history; but the romance of Mexican oil propaganda is even more fascinating, says P. Beckwith Davis in Leslie's. It is a romance full of intrigue, trickery, deceit, the confusion of statesmen, the browbeating of officials, and, alas, touched here and there with tragedy with the stories of brave men shot down in ambush, robbed of everything they possessed, and either left to make their uncharted way through the jungle, naked to the brush and insects of tropical swamps, or their bodies left stark in the forests for the beasts to prey on and the purifying buzzard to clean.

But it will come as a shock to most people to know that the propaganda has been one-sided, and the side that has made use of this lever on public opinion to shift the great responsibility of murder, theft and political trickery from its shoulders has been the Mexican side. The American public has been deceived. Americans have been the victims. The bodies left to rot in the steaming swamps have been the bodies of American citizens. The statesmen who have the wool pulled over their eyes and have been despoiled of their property have been those whose rights it was the duty of the United States Government to protect in whatever part of the world they were, for they were citizens of the great republic, who had gone into Mexico in search of oil, needed by their country, the development of which had resulted in untold benefit to Mexico herself.

The Mexican oil propaganda began in 1911, when Porfirio Diaz, his star waning and with the wolves of revolt close on his heels, raised the cry that the Standard Oil was backing Madero with oil money. This was the birth of the Romance of Mexican Oil Propaganda. Diaz could explain the Madero successes only by exposing the dry-rot of his system, and to avoid this confession he and his supporters filled the Mexican, British and American newspapers with accusations against the Standard Oil, or Waters-Pierce Company, charging that the company was furnishing arms, munitions and vast sums of money to the Maderistas.

The object of Diaz was, of course, to discredit Madero in the eyes of the American public, to shift the responsibility for the failure to suppress the revolution from his own shoulders to the oil company. Madero won, but this first blast of oil propaganda also won, and its victory was more enduring than Madero's. So successful was this initial use of oil propaganda that the Senate of the United States appointed a committee to investigate the charges, and after numerous hearings and the testimony of many witnesses which filled 400 pages, this committee developed the incontrovertible fact that the charges were utterly unfounded.

In spite of the facts that this investigation disclosed, in spite of the proved falsity of the charge, and in the face of the established fact that intereference with Mexico's internal affairs would be the worst possible policy for the oil companies to pursue, the impression that Mexican revolution is the story of oil, that oil influence is back of all the trouble in Mexico, is still abroad and is played upon by every amateur journalistic and reformed expert, and by every Mexican Government that needs something on which to blame its own ineptitude, misfortune or failures.

Liberia.

Liberia is a negro republic on the west coast of Africa, founded in 1820 by liberated American slaves under the auspices of the American Colonization Society, and recognized as an independent state in 1847. It has an area of 35,000 square miles, with a population of 2,000,000. The climate is tropical; the chief crop is coffee; other exports are palm oil, ground nuts, caoutchouc and ivory. The climate is very unhealthy for Europeans. British weights, measures and money are mostly used. The English language is used among the governing class, and schools and churches are amply provided, and civilization is making rapid strides among the natives. The population consists of some 60,000 immigrants from the United States and their descendants and 2,000,000 natives. The capital is Monrovia and the government is a republic modeled after that of the United States.

WOMEN HOLD JOBS

It may have been fine for the women of the country to take the positions held by the men while they served in the great war and helped make the world safe to live in, but it is all wrong for them to keep these positions when their heroes came back home. So firmly did they believe in those principles that they made a photoplay based on that theme, which is being shown under the title "Oh You Women", which will be shown at Griffin's tonight to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. Ernest Truex, the celebrated comedian, and Louise Huff are the principals of the cast. The subject is one of the most absorbing that has come as the result of the recent war, and is particularly timely, because of the recent return of the warriors who served so well in France. With no idea in mind that it would be post-war propaganda, Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos, made this spectacular production, and their results have been commented on in a most flattering manner from all quarters, particularly by Government officials. Besides the above six-part comedy, the Screen Magazine, edited by the Toronto Sunday World, a beautiful colored Outing Shester Travelogue, a funny Christie comedy, Official News and Topics of the Day containing the wit of the World press are also announced for exhibition.

NORMA TALMADGE AND THOS. MEIGHAN AT PALACE

Norma Talmadge, the beautiful Select star is appearing at the Palace tonight to Saturday, matinee Saturday, in her latest Select picture, "The Heart of Wetona". This is an Indian story by George Scarborough. The story begin when Quannah, chief of a tribe of Comanche Indians, learns that his daughter has been wronged by a white man. Wetona's mother was a white woman and Wetona has been brought up as a white girl. The Comanches decide to seek vengeance. They will find the man who has wronged the daughter of the Chief of their tribe and put him to death. Wetona refses to tell the name of her lover. All she will tell her father is that he is a white man. She goes to John Hardin (Thomas Meighan) the agent in charge of the reservation, and the only white man the Indians' trust, to ask him to save her lover. While she is taking to Hardin, Quannah in his search for the man who wronged his daughter sees Wetona and Hardin talking so intimately together that he judges Hardin must be his daughter's lover. Hardin in order to save etona, offers to marry her. Tony, a good-fornothing, is the man Wetona loves, the events that follow will be found most thrilling, and the 2nd chapter of the great "Stunt" serial "The Great Gamble" featuring Ann Luther and Charles Hutchinson will also be presented.

"EXPERIENCE" COMING

"Experience" George V. Hobart's modern morality comedy drama of today, telling the story of Youth—the average young man of today—in his fight with the world, will be presented by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest at Griffin's Opera House, Belleville Wednesday, Nov. 19th, for one night only. 'Experience is now in its sixth season. All the virtues and vices of mankind are personified in the ten brilliant scenes of "Experience." The curtain rises in the Land Where Dreams Begin. Here Youth takes leave of his sweet Love and his sister Hope, and accompanies Ambition out into the big world with a spirit of Springtime in his heart, bouyed up with a determination of confidence that he will surely make a great name for himself in the busy marts of trade and commerce.

On the Street of Vacillation in the great city, Youth meets Experience, and is determined to steadfastly pursue his way with Ambition until he meets a fascinating lady called Pleasure. Blinded by her beauty and alluring tales, he refuses to pay heed to the message brought him by an elderly woman called Opportunity. Bewitched by Pleasure, Youth turns from Ambition and follows her to the joys of the Primrose Path. The delights Youth finds in the Golden Cabaret are new to him and he revels in their gaiety. Here in turn he meets Beauty, Deceit, Fashion, Slander, Conceit, Snob, Blueblood, Travel, Style and Frivolity, and then Wealth and Intoxication. Passion attempts to win Youth for her own, but the little voice of Love, a sub-conscious whisper from the trusting girl left in the Land Where Dreams Begin, steadies him long enough to make a choice of the lesser of two evils, and he turns from the arms of Passion to the embrace of Intoxication.

The cast engaged by Messrs. Comstock and Gest is an exceptionally strong one.

After Severe Sickness

Nothing Hastens Recovery Like Vinol

Sickness usually leaves the patient with poor, devitalized blood, and so nervous and weak that it often seems as though strength never would return. Vinol creates strength by promoting a hearty appetite, pure blood, sound sleep, thus builds up the weakened, nervous, depleted system to health.

Here is Proof that Vinol Creates Strength

"The Influenza left me all rundown and so weak I could not work. Nothing seemed to help me until my daughter brought me a bottle of Vinol and it accomplished wonders for me as it built me up and restored my strength quickly. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Albert Boutilier, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"I was sick for months. I had no appetite and could not seem to get my strength back. I told my doctor I was going to try Vinol, and he said it was fine. I found it gave me a good appetite and I rapidly gained in strength."—Mrs. W. J. Nixon, Vankleek Hill, Ontario.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, weak women, overworked men, feeble old people and delicate children, there is no remedy like Vinol.

First League of Nations

THE Book of Books is what the name of "Bible" implies. In it can be found anything. But who would have surmised that in it is the fundamental and historical idea of a league of nations? And we wonder how such an ideal can be clumsily, yet nevertheless perfectly, expressed. Our wonder is only as great as our intelligence of Biblical language is limited, which is to say that we are hesitant to read when the reading is prosaic. This were a flimsy obstacle, however, for the person who likes to dig and see what cometh forth.

Biblically, then, here is the first league of nations—Chapter IX of the Book of Joshua:

"And it came to pass, when all the kings which were on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coast of the great sea over against Lebanon, the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof, that they gathered themselves together to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one accord. And when the inhabitants of Gibeon heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai, they did work wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors, and took old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles, old and rent, and bound up, and old shoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy, and went to Joshua unto the camp at Gilgal, and said unto men of Irael, We be come from a far country; now therefore make ye a league with us.

"And the men of Israel said unto the Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us; and how shall we make a league with you? and they said unto Joshua, We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye, and from whence come ye?

"And they said unto him, From a very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the Lord thy God, for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt, and all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbun, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashtaroth. Wherefore our elders and all the inhabitants of our country spake to us, saying, Take your victuals with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants; and therefore now make ye a league with us. This is our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy: And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new; and behold, they be rent; and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey.

"And the men took of their victuals and asked not counsel at the mouth of the Lord. And Joshua made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live, and the princes of the congregation sware unto them. And it came to pass at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbors, and that they dwelt among them, and the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kirjath-jearim. And the children of Israel smote them not, because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the princes.

"But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We have sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel; now therefore we may not touch them. This we will do to them, we will even let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them. And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but let them be hewers of wood and drawers of water unto all of the congregation; as the princes had promised them. And Joshua called for them, and spake unto them saying: Wherefore have you beguiled us, saying, We are very far from you; when you dwell among us? Now therefore you are cursed and shall there none of you be freed from being bondsmen and the hewers of wood and the drawers of water for the house of my God.

"And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how the Lord thy God commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing. And now, behold, we are in thine hand; as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do. And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not. And Joshua made them that day hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the Lord, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose."

Big Dredging Scheme.

Finland and Australia.

Finland has discovered Australia, and it is hoped that the Commonwealth will soon recognize commercially the enterprising new republic. Trade relations with Australia are being sought, and Finland will be glad to exchange cream separators and safety matches, paper pulp and timber for a little of Australia's surplus meat and wheat. The consul of the new republic has established his headquarters in Sydney, New South Wales, and has already obtained excellent publicity in the shape of press interviews. Finland must surely have been studying American methods of production.

Tanks Like a Deck of Cards.

In the open stretch, beyond the last fringe of wood, we struck the field where the American tanks attacked the Huns on flank and rear and finished the battle of Argonne wood, Elizabeth Fraser writes in the Saturday Evening Post. Later we saw a complete outfit of these grotesque monsters go walloping across a shell-torn field. Their insignia were the characters on a deck of cards, and they always followed suit. Thus an ace of spades was always followed by the king of spades, the king by his spouse; and so on down to the tray. As we passed, the knave of hearts thrust forth a grinning face from his round armored little turret and waved a grimy paw. Close on his tail waggishly tangoed the ten-spot. It was like some mad scene in "Alice in Wonderland."

Grim Jest Pathetic.

Was Poe's tale "The Masque of the Red Death" prophetic? His story was that on the stroke of midnight a tall, red-gowned figure revealed itself amid revelers as Death by Plague.

A counterpart from real life is reported from Cowestry, Wales. It is the report of a masquerade ball, at which one of the masked celebrators simulated Death, in a black robe and with hollow eye-sockets.

There were 140 dancers at the ball. Of this number, 122 are now suffering from influenza. Twelve are already dead, including the death masker.

Girl Is Killed And Murderer Suicides

Nova Scotia Village Staggered by Tragedy—Two Are Killed.

HALIFAX Nov. 13—The little community of Colplen, Lunenburg, 18 miles above Bridgewater, was staggered by a tragedy which occurred Saturday night. Wilson Huey, a returned soldier called at the home of Mrs. Stewart Smith and her 22-year-old daughter, intending to spend the night at the house. It was late and Mrs. Smith alarmed at the entrance of the man into the bedroom occupied by herself and her daughter, ordered him to leave it.

Huey immediately attacked the elder lady with a revolver, inflicting a scalp wound. She made her escape and ran into the road, acquainting some of the neighbors with the facts, and begging them to go to the protection of her daughter. They were afraid to take the chance of encountering the man and on Sunday morning when the house was entered, the girl was found clubbed to death, with the revolver and Huey was discovered in a bedroom, dead, with his brains blown out.

Dr. Cole of New Germany subsequently held an inquest. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts.

WOMEN HOLD JOBS

It may have been fine for the women of the country to take the positions held by the men while they served in the great war and helped make the world safe to live in, but it is all wrong for them to keep these positions when their heroes came back home. So firmly did they believe in those principles that they made a photoplay based on that theme, which is being shown under the title "Oh You Women", which will be shown at Griffin's tonight to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. Ernest Truex, the celebrated comedian, and Louise Huff are the principals of the cast. The subject is one of the most absorbing that has come as the result of the recent war, and is particularly timely, because of the recent return of the warriors who served so well in France. With no idea in mind that it would be post-war propaganda, Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos, made this spectacular production, and their results have been commented on in a most flattering manner from all quarters, particularly by Government officials. Besides the above six-part comedy, the Screen Magazine, edited by the Toronto Sunday World, a beautiful colored Outing Shester Travelogue, a funny Christie comedy, Official News and Topics of the Day containing the wit of the World press are also announced for exhibition.

NORMA TALMADGE AND THOS. MEIGHAN AT PALACE

Norma Talmadge, the beautiful Select star is appearing at the Palace tonight to Saturday, matinee Saturday, in her latest Select picture, "The Heart of Wetona". This is an Indian story by George Scarborough. The story begin when Quannah, chief of a tribe of Comanche Indians, learns that his daughter has been wronged by a white man. Wetona's mother was a white woman and Wetona has been brought up as a white girl. The Comanches decide to seek vengeance. They will find the man who has wronged the daughter of the Chief of their tribe and put him to death. Wetona' refses to tell the name of her lover. All she will tell her father is that he is a white man. She goes to John Hardin (Thomas Meighan) the agent in charge of the reservation, and the only white man the Indians' trust, to ask him to save her lover. While she is taking to Hardin, Quannah in his search for the man who wronged his daughter sees Wetona and Hardin talking so intimately together that he judges Hardin must be his daughter's lover. Hardin in order to save etona, offers to marry her. Tony, a good-fornothing, is the man Wetona loves, the events that follow will be found most thrilling, and the 2nd chapter of the great "Stunt" serial "The Great Gamble" featuring Ann Luther and Charles Hutchinson will also be presented.

"EXPERIENCE" COMING

"Experience" George V. Hobart's modern morality comedy drama of today, telling the story of Youth—the average young man of today—in his fight with the world, will be presented by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest at Griffin's Opera House, Belleville Wednesday, Nov. 19th, for one night only. 'Experience is now in its sixth season. All the virtues and vices of mankind are personified in the ten brilliant scenes of "Experience." The curtain rises in the Land Where Dreams Begin.' Here Youth takes leave of his sweet Love and his sister Hope, and accompanies Ambition out into the big world with a spirit of Springtime in his heart, bouyed up with a determination of confidence that he will surely make a great name for himself in the busy marts of trade and commerce.

On the Street of Vacillation in the great city, Youth meets Experience, and is determined to steadfastly pursue his way with Ambition until he meets a fascinating lady called Pleasure. Blinded by her beauty and alluring tales, he refuses to pay heed to the message brought him by an elderly woman called Opportunity. Bewitched by Pleasure, Youth turns from Ambition and follows her to the joys of the Primrose Path. The delights Youth finds in the Golden Cabaret are new to him and he revels in their gaiety. Here in turn he meets Beauty, Deceit, Fashion, Slander, Conceit, Snob, Bluebhlood, Travel, Style and Frivolity, and then Wealth and Intoxication. Passion attempts to win Youth for her own, but the little voice of Love, a sub conscious whisper from the trusting girl left in the Land Where Dreams Begin, steadies him long enough to make a choice of the lesser of two evils, and he turns from the arms of Passion to the embrace of intoxication.

The cast engaged by Messrs. Comstock and Gest is an exceptionally strong one.

After Severe Sickness
Nothing Hastens Recovery Like Vinol

Sickness usually leaves the patient with poor, devitalized blood, and so nervous and weak that it often seems as though strength never would return. Vinol creates strength by promoting a hearty appetite, pure blood, sound sleep, thus builds up the weakened, nervous, depleted system to health.

Here is Proof that Vinol Creates Strength

"The Influenza left me all rundown and so weak I could not work. Nothing seemed to help me until my daughter brought me a bottle of Vinol and it accomplished wonders for me as it built me up and restored my strength quickly. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Albert Boutilier, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"I was sick for months. I had no appetite and could not seem to get my strength back. I told my doctor I was going to try Vinol, and he said it was fine. I found it gave me a good appetite and I rapidly gained in strength."—Mrs. W. J. Nixon, Vankleek Hill, Ontario.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, weak women, overworked men, feeble old people and delicate children, there is no remedy like Vinol.
Your money will be returned if Vinol fails—Leading Druggists.

First League of Nations

THE Book of Books is what the name of "Bible" implies. In it can be found anything. But who would have surmised that in it is the fundamental and historical idea of a league of nations? And we wonder how such an ideal can be clumsily, yet nevertheless perfectly, expressed. Our wonder is only as great as our intelligence of Biblical language is limited, which is to say that we are hesitant to read when the reading is prosaic. This were a flimsy obstacle, however, for the person who likes to dig and see what cometh forth.

Biblically, then, here is the first league of nations—Chapter IX of the Book of Joshua:

"And it came to pass, when all the kings which were on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coast of the great sea over against Lebanon, the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof, that they gathered themselves together to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one accord. And when the inhabitants of Gibeon heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai, they did work wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors, and took old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles, old and rent, and bound up, and old shoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy, and went to Joshua unto the camp at Gilgal, and said unto men of Irael, We be come from a far country; now therefore make ye a league with us.

"And the men of Israel said unto the Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us; and how shall we make a league with you? and they said unto Joshua, We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye, and from whence come ye?

"And they said unto him, From a very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the Lord thy God, for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt, and all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbun, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashtaroth. Wherefore our elders and all the inhabitants of our country spake to us, saying, Take your victuals with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants; and therefore now make ye a league with us. This is our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy: And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new; and behold, they be rent; and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey.

"And the men took of their victuals and asked not counsel at the mouth of the Lord. And Joshua made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live, and the princes of the congregation sware unto them. And it came to pass at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbors, and that they dwelt among them, and the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kirjath-jearim. And the children of Israel smote them not, because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the princes.

"But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We have sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel; now therefore we may not touch them. This we will do to them, we will even let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them. And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but let them be hewers of wood and drawers of water unto all of the congregation; as the princes had promised them. And Joshua called for them, and spake unto them saying: Wherefore have you beguiled us, saying, We are very far from you; when you dwell among us? Now therefore you are cursed and shall there none of you be freed from being bondsmen and the hewers of wood and the drawers of water for the house of my God.

"And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how the Lord thy God commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing. And now, behold, we are in thine hand; as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do. And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not. And Joshua made them that day hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the Lord, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose."

Big Dredging Scheme.

The legislature of the state of Bahia, Brazil, recently approved a project for the dredging of the River Grande, an affluent of the River San Francisco, for the purpose of making possible a line of river boats to serve a district with no railroad facilities.

Finland and Australia.

Finland has discovered Australia, and it is hoped that the Commonwealth will soon recognize commercially the enterprising new republic. Trade relations with Australia are being sought, and Finland will be glad to exchange cream separators and safety matches, paper pulp and timber for a little of Australia's surplus meat and wheat. The consul of the new republic has established his headquarters in Sydney, New South Wales, and has already obtained excellent publicity in the shape of press interviews. Finland must surely have been studying American methods of production.

Tanks Like a Deck of Cards.

In the open stretch, beyond the last fringe of wood, we struck the field where the American tanks attacked the Huns on flank and rear and finished the battle of Argonne wood, Elizabeth Frazer writes in the Saturday Evening Post. Later we saw a complete outfit of these grotesque monsters go walloping across a shell-torn field. Their insignia were the characters on a deck of cards, and they always followed suit. Thus an ace of spades was always followed by the king of spades, the king by his spouse; and so on down to the tray. As we passed, the knave of hearts thrust forth a grinning face from his round armored little turret and waved a grimy paw. Close on his tail waggishly tangoed the ten spot. It was like some mad scene in "Alice in Wonderland."

Grim Jest Pathetic.

Was Poe's tale "The Masque of the Red Death" prophetic? His story was that on the stroke of midnight a tall, red-gowned figure revealed itself amid revelers as Death by Plague.

A counterpart from real life is reported from Cowestry, Wales. It is the report of a masquerade ball, at which one of the masked celebrators simulated Death, in a black robe and with hollow eye-sockets.

There were 140 dancers at the ball. Of this number, 122 are now suffering from influenza. Twelve are already dead, including the death masker.

Girl Is Killed And Murderer Suicides

Nova Scotia Village Staggered by Tragedy—Two Are Killed.

HALIFAX Nov. 13—The little community of Colplen, Lunenburg, 18 miles above Bridgewater, was staggered by a tragedy which occurred Saturday night. Wilson Huey, a returned soldier called at the home of Mrs. Stewart Smith and her 22-year-old daughter, intending to spend the night at the house. It was late and Mrs. Smith alarmed at the entrance of the man into the bedroom occupied by herself and her daughter, ordered him to leave it.

Huey immediately attacked the elder lady with a revolver, inflicting a scalp wound. She made her escape and ran into the road, acquainting some of the neighbors with the facts, and begging them to go to the protection of her daughter. They were af afraid to take the chance of encountering the man and on Sunday morning when the house was entered, the girl was found clubbed to death, with the revolver and Huey was discovered in a bedroom, dead, with his brains blown out.

Dr. Cole of New Germany subsequently held an inquest. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts.

Just because some garage man says, "I'll fix it and it'll be good as new," don't trust your battery to an amateur.

Come to battery headquarters where we have the equipment to really test your battery and the knowledge of what it needs.

Only a careful hydrometer reading can show if a battery needs charging. Only the proper instruments can give it a discharge test showing that it is properly recharged. It costs a little more to make repairs in the right way, but a thorough job is always worth while.

Clark, situated in the rear of the second concession of the township of Elizabethtown, adjacent to the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, destroyed the building together with some machinery inside. Some days ago, a sneak thief entered the apartments of Mrs. A. R. Walker at the Corby Library Building in this city and stole a gold watch and other articles of jewellery. JURISDICTION ON RESERVE

An interesting point was determined by the Police Magistrate at Deseronto on Tuesday last in the case in which Jacob Hill laid a complaint against Louis Left for abusive language under by-law 317 of the Township of Tyendinaga. W. C. Mikel, K. C., acting for the accused, took the objective that the by-law had no effect because the Township Council of the Township of Tyendinaga had no jurisdiction over the Indian Reservation, and the Magistrate upheld this objection. This brings up the very interesting question as to whether or not any Municipal or Provincial Legislature has any effect upon the Reserve. The Ontario Temperance Act, the School Laws, the laws as to Highways under this ruling appear not to have any force upon the Indian Reservation, which is subject solely to Dominion Jurisdiction. For instance, it has been held that the Ontario Legislature has no power to make an Indian pay a debt upon the Reserve. Wm. Carnew acted for the Prosecution; W. C. Mikel, K.C., for the accused.

--FACTS

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales

In an announcement which appeared in the Montreal Daily Star, Oct. 27th, it was pointed out that a Heintzman & Co. Grand Piano had been placed in the Vice-Regal Parlor in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel for the personal use of His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales.

TO-DAY IT GIVES US GREAT PLEASURE TO SHOW HEREWITH A REPRODUCTION OF A LETTER FROM THE PRIVATE SECRETARY TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. THE LETTER SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

Royal Train at Montreal
Nov. 1st. 1919.

The Private Secretary to The Prince of Wales presents his compliments to Messrs C. W. Lindsay, Limited, and is desired by His Royal Highness to thank them for the booklet, which they sent Him, and which He has been pleased to accept. His Royal Highness also thanks them for the use of the Heintzman & Company Piano, which they have provided for His sitting room in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel during His stay at Montreal.

Facsimile of a letter written by the Private Secretary to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, to C. W. Lindsay, Limited.

The booklet referred to in the letter carries the title "When the King and Queen Visited Canada." In it are shown sketches of their trip, views of the Royal Train, among which is a picture of the reception room of the Royal Train showing the Heintzman & Co. Piano, used exclusively by the Royal Party. A copy of this booklet can be had for the asking at our warerooms, 512 St. Catherine Street West, Montreal.

We are immensely proud of being the sole representatives in Belleville for the Heintzman & Co. Pianos. We esteem ourselves fortunate indeed in having been connected on two such memorable and historical occasions, with the supplying of the Piano used by the two generations of the Royal Family.

In view of the shortage of Heintzman & Co. Pianos on the market, and of our limited stock, we would recommend to all who are contemplating the purchase of a Heintzman & Co. Piano, the placing of their order at once.

The original of the letter, copy of which is shown herewith, may be seen at any time in the Heintzman Salons, in our warerooms, 512 St. Catherine Street West, Montreal.

VETERANS ASK MEMBER TO EXPLAIN HIS ACTION

Kingston, Nov. 13.—The Kingston branch of the G. W. V. A. passed a resolution authorizing that a letter be sent to Dr. Edwards, M.P., asking for an explanation of his statements and his policy in the matter of further re-establishment for soldiers. President Howe told a meeting that the Dominion Executive weer annoyed at the attitude of Dr. Edwards, and that a motion from this branch would be a backing for them in any action that they might see fit to take in that connection.

ARDEN YOUNG MAN KILLED ON THE RAIL

Arden, Nov. 13.—The residents of this place and surrounding country were shocked when word was received that Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hartwick, was dead at Smith's Falls. The deceased was braking on the C. P. R. and in some way was thrown under the van of his train at Glen Tay, his arm and leg being terribly mangled. He was taken to Smith's Falls, but owing to the delay of getting him there, he died shortly after arriving at the hospital from loss of blood.

PEMBROKE HUNTER KILLED BY A STRAY BULLET

PEMBROKE, Nov. 12.—Albert Maves, a fire ranger, who lives in Pembroke and has a wife and a number of children, was found dead in the woods with a bullet in his head up the Indian River, about 20 miles from here. He was hunting at the time and it is thought that the bullet was from the gun of some other person unknown to him, who was hunting also and mistook his movements for those of a deer. Maves was well and favorably known here and his death is much regretted.

DESTROYS THE OYSTERS.

Heavy Loss Is Caused By the Starfish.

Much has been learned within recent years about the starfish, which annually destroys nearly $1,000,000 worth of oysters in Long Island sound.

Its eggs, spherical and very minute, lie on the bottom until hatched, whereupon the larvae swim about for some days before attaching themselves to convenient blades of eel grass. Then they undergo a rapid transformation, assuming the adult shape.

For experimental purposes they have been artificially reared; and it was proved by one trial that a young starfish one-fourth of an inch in diameter, put in a dish with fifty-odd baby clams, each as long as one of its arms, could gobble up nearly all of them in a week.

How does the starfish manage to kill and eat an oyster? It is a puzzle that has only recently been solved. The creature forces the oyster open by sheer muscular strength, a fact which needs explanation in order to make it believable.

The starfish's arms are covered on the under side with little suckers. Embracing the oyster it applies two or three of its arms to one valve of thes hell and the remaining ones to the other valve. Then, by merely stretching its arms (the suckers holding fast), it tries to pull the valves apart.

Now the oyster is equipped with a powerful muscle for keeping its shell tight shut when it wishes. This muscle is the part of its anatomy commonly, though mistakenly, called the heart. Its strength may be judged from the difficulty one finds in opening an oyster, unless one happens to be skilled in the art.

But even the strongest man may succumb to a moderate muscular strain if the latter be kept up long enough, and thus it is with the oyster. The starfish keeps on pulling, and finally the unfortunate bivalve is obliged to yield. Its shell opens and the enemy proceeds to devour it.

In the centre of the starfish's body, or under side, is a small hole. This is its mouth, through and out of which it is able to project and extend its stomach to a distance equal to the length of one of its arms. The stomach turns itself inside out, envelops the fleshy part of the oyster and digests it as it lies in the shell.

The oystermen used to chop in two the starfishes they caught and throw them overboard, but they gave up this practice when it was ascertained that the halves were liable to develop new arms and thus render themselves complete. It was a way to make two starfishes out of one.

Gunpowder.

Black powder is the original gunpowder. It consists of pulverized charcoal, sulphur and saltpetre mixed together. Both sulphur and charcoal are inflammable, and if they are ignited they will burn as fast as air can be supplied to complete the combustion. When saltpeter is heated it gives off oxygen. By mixing with charcoal and sulphur enough saltpetre to supply the necessary oxygen for complete combustion, we obtain a mixture that can burn without the aid of air.

As soon as sufficient heat is applied, the saltpetre gives off oxygen which burns the adjacent sulphur and charcoal, forming more heat, which decomposes the surrounding saltpetre, thus continuing the process. As the combustion does not have to wait for air to be supplied, it spreads through the mass with practically instantaneous speed.

A VALUABLE INDUSTRY

BALDWINS, LIMITED, WILL LOCATE IN CANADA.

Name of the Firm Is One to Conjure With In the Old Country, Where They Employ an Army of 14,000 Workers, and a Large Branch Will Shortly Commence Operations In Toronto.

THE real facts in the story of the coming of a branch of the great Baldwins, Limited, the largest steel manufacturers of Great Britain, to the former site of the British Forgings Company, on the reclaimed land of Ashbridge's Bay, Toronto, are far more arresting than the sometimes weird rumors that have been circulating for some weeks past in the press of Canada. Some idea of the immense importance of this industry and what benefits may accrue to Toronto and the country from its foundation there was obtained in an interview with the representatives of this great firm, Roger Beck and J. C. Davies, the managing-director, who are making arrangements for the installation of the industry, the first buildings of which have already been started on the sandy land of the new manufacturing district.

Baldwins, Limited, is a name to conjure with in the Old Country and wherever there is a demand for steel. It has an authorized capital of £7,000,000 sterling, with £5,000,000 called up. Its 13,000 to 14,000 workmen form an army larger than that which established the British Empire in India and other parts of the world. Its ramifications and property extend to every part of the British Isles, where it is entirely self-contained. "We have our own peat, our own coal, which is mined in South Wales, our own iron-ore mines in Oxfordshire and other foreign countries," said Mr. Beck.

"We have large deposits of silica, out of which heat-resisting bricks and material is made, and so on," said Mr. Davies. This magnitude expressed in terms of products that would be astounding Baldwins turn out 1,000,000 tons of steel ingots, and raise 1,250,000 tons of coal every year. They make ship plates, boiler plates, rails, black and galvanized sheets, and tin plates, which are rolled in their mills. Around the Baldwin plant there spring up a host of complementary and necessary industries, such as coal, bricks, fireclay, sulphuric acid, tin smelters, and a hundred other firms.

There, in brief outline, is the great firm of Baldwins. The problem of some men of imagination and patience was how to show that firm that it was needed in Canada, a fact the company clearly recognized, and how, especially, to have it located in Toronto. That feat was accomplished principally, Mr. Davies acknowledges, by Mr. Home-Smith and by Mr. E. L. Cousins of the Harbor Trust. "If it hadn't been for the determined effort of these two gentlemen," said Mr. Davies, "it would be very doubtful whether we should have embarked on this venture in Toronto. I should like to mention the names of these two gentlemen in particular. I should like to say, too, how well we have been received by the people of Toronto; how all the information possible has been placed before us; and how we have been assisted in every way."

"The whole project was opened up by our firm," said Mr. A. M. Russel, of the firm of Hugh Russel & Sons, Montreal. "We are agents in Canada for Baldwins, Ltd., and for a number of years, we have been advising them to locate out here, or it would be only a matter of time before the business they had established in Canada would be a thing of the past. We suggested that they should acquire the site of the British Forgings plant in Toronto, and establish a tin-plate and sheet industry, and manufacture there, thus recovering the business that was lost to the American manufacturers. Mr. Davies came out to Canada in April, and, in due course, the British Forgings plant was acquired." The final decision, Mr. Davies explained, was reached through two factors; the first, by the efforts of Mr. Cousins and Mr. Home-Smith in the purchase of the property; and, the second, through the sympathy of Sir Adam Beck. "Although we have not been able altogether to have Sir Adam meet our desires," said Mr. Beck, a namesake of the Hydro-knight, "still in our conference, we have been shown every consideration, and hope for the result.

"The attraction to us as a company to locate in Toronto," said Mr. Davies, "was this: Before the war we did a very considerable business in Canada, and, finding that the whole of this was being captured by the United States, it was natural that we should make an effort to restore it. What we're out for, in a few words, is to meet the needs of the whole of Canada in tin terne plates, lead-coated plates, and galvanized and black sheets.

"You can quite see the enormity of this plant, when you consider that the imports of these articles before the war into Canada were 50,000 tons of tin plates and 125,000 of black and galvanized sheets. To build that plant, you can see, will take a long time, but by next May we hope to be starting production." The foundations of the three shops, each 800 feet long, have already been begun; and, soon, there will be 2,200 men employed for a start.

"The first unit we have commenced upon," continued Mr. Davies, "will require 100,000 tons of steel per annum. Another industry that we find that Canada is lacking in is heavy steel castings. As we are very desirous that these heavy castings, which we shall require for the plant, we are already contemplating putting down, we are making arrangements to operate some of the electric steel furnaces to make these castings; otherwise we should have to go to the United States or to the Old Country for them."

A Pealing Anthem Swells the Note of Praise

From Music Dealers, and from hundreds of people who have bought Curtiss Aeronolas since we placed them on the market a few weeks ago, there has come to us a spontaneous note of praise for its musical quality and artistic beauty. The is a fine talking machine. When you see and hear it you will agree with us. We can best express it, perhaps, by saying that every refinement in the talking machine art has been successfully incorporated into the design and manufacture of the Curtiss Aeronola.

The Reproducer, the Tone Arm, the Tone Chamber, the specially designed Horn and the motor are the finest that money can buy. And they have been so blended with perfect cabinet-making as to insure a musical instrument that is truly "The Last Word in Talking Machines."

But there is nothing that can be said about any musical instrument that can do justice to its qualities or defects. It must be seen and heard to be appreciated.

We urge you, therefore, to go to the music dealer you ordinarily patronize and ask him to demonstrate the Curtiss Aeronola to you. Don't be put off with any other machine. Insist on seeing and hearing the Aeronola.

If it so happens that he hasn't any in stock, tell him for us that we will ship all four models to him on the day his order is received at the factory.

FOCH MOURNS SON.

Commander Who Led Allies to Victory Lost Only Son In Battle.

The ending of the war does not mean the ending of the troubles of the generalissimo who conducted the operations during the last eventful summer. With the laurels of victory that a grateful world has bestowed on Marshal Foch there is also a legacy of deep sorrow. He is returning home a desolate father, to mourn the death of his only son, who died in battle.

Some of the facts concerning Foch's career, have just come to light. When he was about eighteen, he went to Metz to become a student at the College of Saint Clement. But the war with Prussia came. Storm broke where serenity had been, and he rushed away from college to join the army.

If anything very thrilling happened during those days of soldiering there is no record of it, and as soon as the fight was over he went back to school. But what a change had come over the town! Metz was no longer French, but German, and the Prussian eagle soared where once the tricolor had floated. Soldiers of William and Bismarck were quartered even in the college, and imperious German officers sneered at the students, who were compelled to salute them. It was bitter medicine for a French boy to swallow. Soon afterward, when he was not quite twenty, came word from Nancy that examinations were to be held for the Polytechnic of Paris, where youths were trained for service of the state. He passed with honor and went to the great seat of learning, where he found another boy from the Pyrenees country and one who loved it as much as he did. His name was Joseph Cesaire Joffre. Side by side these two worked in the classroom, and side by side, some forty years afterward, they worked for the salvation of France.

He was graduated with honor, and then was sent to Fontainebleau for further military training. From that day his life was a series of deserved successes. Steadily he advanced from a lieutenant through the various ranks of an army officer until he became a major, but there was nothing spectacular about his rise. No exploits on the red path of adventure took him to far corners of the world or caused him to be acclaimed at home as a conquering hero, for unlike Marshal Joffre, who had years in Indo-China and a brilliant victory over the Tuaregs in the marshes of Soudan, Major Foch was stationed at various posts in France. Thus twenty years passed and then we find him in Paris, a professor of military history, strategy and applied tactics in the Superior School of War. From there he was sent to the field again, and this move was followed by other changes of rank as well as location, for he was steadily promoted, until in 1913, he became a general and was assigned to the command of the Twentieth Corps and stationed at Nancy.

In a dozen other places he proved, as he had proved in Lorraine and at the Marne, that he was the greatest strategist in the world. So what was more naural than, when Gen. Joffre retired, that the Government's choice for his successor should have been Ferdinand Foch? But there were dark days ahead, for they faced a mighty and remorseless foe, and as the weeks dragged on and a crashing German offensive came, it was decided by the allied chiefs that one master mind must direct the allied operations, and all thoughts turned to the slender, blue-eyed commander, Ferdinand Foch.

"His own son was of that multitude of gallant Frenchmen who died on the field of honor, and, as one writer says, 'The laying down of arms meant to him not leisure to wear laurels, but the right of a broken-hearted old father to sit again by his hearth, desolate now, thinking back upon happy days and forward to a reassembled group in the house not made with hands.'"

BIRD APARTMENTS RENT FREE

Orchardists Seek to Encourage the Woodpecker to Settle In Their Midst, as It Were.

It may sound like a joke to speak of the manufacture of woodpecker nests, but there is actually a factory in Maine that takes many orders for such nests.

The birdhouses are constructed of pine blocks 15 inches long and from five to six inches in diameter. The back of the block is squared to permit of the patent adjustment being properly attached to the tree or placed where the house is to be located, a canopy or top piece to keep out the weather being made like a roof. A perfect nest is drilled by a reamer. Within three inches of the bottom a corkscrew indentation is made to the bird entrance, as the toes of the woodpecker are in pairs, two before and two behind, with sharp, strong claws, the whole structure of the foot making it adaptable for climbing.

The houses are sold to orchard owners, as the claim is made by the ornithologists that the woodpecker's feed consists chiefly of insects and their larvae, which the birds get by digging into the bark and wood of trees. The woodpecker's tongue is an important instrument in obtaining its feed, as it can be extended far beyond the bill, its tip being horny and furnished with a barbed filament.

Prince an Indian Chief.

"Dawn of Day" is the latest distinctive title to be conferred upon the Prince of Wales, who was invested with a chieftainship in the Six Nations (Iroquois) in the course of five hours spent in Brantford. At the Mohawk chapel the prince signed the register which contains the signatures of his grandfather and great-uncle the Duke of Connaught. He was particularly interested in the Bible presented to the Six Nation Indians by Queen Anne. The women of the tribe requested that he convey to his royal mother the Queen an address from them. The prince unveiled a bronze tablet inscribed with names of the 36 members of the Six Nations who died overseas.

Oxygen for Fliers.

At high levels, such as birdmen nowadays often reach, the air is so thin that the aviator literally "loses his breath." He is in danger of collapse from this cause.

It was ascertained during the war, though not at first suspected, that about 15 per cent. of the candidates who passed examination for the air service were really unable to fly at altitudes ordinarily requisite in the work they were required to perform.

It was further determined that more than 60 per cent. of them could not endure flight at extremely high levels. But, on the other hand, certain picked men, perhaps seven or eight out of 100 passed candidates, were able to ascend to the greatest elevations without peril.

To help in solving this important war problem an oxygen apparatus was developed, smaller than the kind used for mine-rescue work, but constructed on much the same principle. Equipped with this contrivance, and carrying a supply of liquid oxygen along with him, the aviator could skim along in safety through the upper reaches of the welkin.

Vet. Could Tell Him.

A member of Parliament called another an ass in the sacred precincts of the House. Unparliamentary language being forbidden, the offending M.P. had to apologize and withdraw his statement. He didn't like doing it. "I withdraw," he said very stiffly; "but I maintain that the honorable member is out of order." "How am I out of order?" asked the other man heatedly. "Probably a veterinary surgeon could tell you," was the retort.

An Army In Peace.

At the end of the fiscal year the cost of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment will run up to $57,000,000, and probably a like amount will be required to continue the work for the next two years. While the war is practically over and demobilization almost complete, we are maintaining another army, who are being trained in the arts of peace and not in the arts of war. These are disabled men and minors who are being vocationally trained. That army numbers to-day 19,290, each one of whom draws pay and allowances ranging from $60 to $150, according to the number of dependents, while taking a course of training averaging seven months. Moreover, we have 6,556 receiving free medical treatment with pay and medical allowances at our hospitals, and 12,000 more receiving free medical treatment without pay and allowances.

A Gigantic Flagstaff.

The new Victory flagstaff, which was taken to England from British Columbia lately, is the second highest in the world. It was erected on the summit of "Victory Mound" in Kew Gardens, London. It is 215 feet high, and it is 73 feet higher than the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar Square, London. It is the gift of the British Columbia Government to the Home Government, and it replaces the old flagstaff received from the British Columbia Government in 1861, which till recently occupied the same site, but had to be removed owing to its having fallen into decay.

Taste.

The sensation of taste, while a common and constant experience, is highly complicated in its nature. What is commonly called taste is not a simple sensation at all, but rather a complex. In addition to the actual functioning of the apparatus properly pertaining to the sense of taste, the tongue receives impressions of various other sorts, all of which go to make up this complex. As finally recorded in the consciousness, the taste of any substance has to do with its heat or coolness, perhaps with a mild amount of pain, certainly with astringency or acridity — which are in themselves further complexes of thermic and tactile sensations—and above all with smell. The reader will probably agree that ice cream and coffee are entirely different from their true selves when served at inopportune temperatures; and it is a matter of record that a person of the keenest taste may make the most ludicrous errors if asked, blindfolded and with his nose stopped, to identify substances placed in his mouth.

Spiders Walk Straight.

Spiders have so many legs that it does not seem to matter which way they walk, writes Marion E. Bailey, in Boys and Girls Ask-at-Home Questions," but most of them really do walk straight ahead in the direction of their eyes. If it is necessary they will take a quick side step, and some of them can jump, but they can get over the ground pretty fast just by walking straight ahead, and that is what most of them do.

Two Explorers.

Martin Killin and Adelbert Gumaer, the last two member of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's Canadian Arctic Expedition to leave the Arctic, are reported aboard the trading schooner Anna Alga, which is working its way toward Nome.

Killin and Gumaer were not members of Stefansson's original party. They were members of a party Storker Storkerson, Stefansson's lieutenant, led on to an icefloe last year in the hope that the Arctic drifts would carry the floe westward to Siberia. After spending eight months on the ice the men found themselves about fifty miles from their starting point. They all came ashore and Storkerson and one other member headed overland for the outside world. Killin and Gumaer boarded the Olga and started for Nome.

Storkerson's trip outside was his first in eleven years. He has been an explorer, trader and trapper along the northern rim of the continent ever since 1908. He expects to associate himself with Stefansson in handling the Canadian Government's proposal to stock the northern tundra plains with reindeer.

Dogs Eat Esquimo Church.

In the Hudson Bay country, where the dogs are half wolves, a band of these famished animals actually ate up a church. The Esquimo Christians had built a tiny chapel to hold twenty people. But the poor converts did not long enjoy the little church, of which they were so pathetically proud. The building was of whalebone, an edible substance, and one Sunday the pagan dogs ate every morsel of the sacred edifice.

A Dance Among the Pioneers

When the Prince of Wales and his immediate suite left the train at Orient Bay for three days' fishing, the reporters were shunted down to the township of Nipigon, and laid aside in the middle of the settlement on the C.P.R. tracks.

Some genius made a happy discovery — there was a Finn dance held every Saturday evening in the little yellow hall away behind the C.P.R. station, and there was a beautiful floor, and there were in normal times two men there to every woman, and there would be lots of fun; so let's all go. Well, all went, from Mr. A. B. Calder, who represents the president of the C.P.R., to the little boy who peels the potatoes, and the marine orderlies of the Prince of Wales.

By nine o'clock at least fifty people from the royal train, almost half the outfit, had found their way to the little dance hall. Each paid his quarter, received his slip, and then handed it back to the fair-haired Finn at the door, who smilingly received each newcomer. It was a pleasant little hall, with a beautiful floor. A curtained stage at the end showed that it was used for other kinds of entertainment. Plain chairs lined the sides and ends. A single, strong oil-lamp swung from the middle of the ceiling, and lent the dim, soft light that makes the dance a dream. All around the wall were Finnish signs, "Do not smoke. Intoxicating liquors strictly prohibited." Over the stage was displayed a Finnish pennant which, translated, read "The place of gathering of the working people." On either side of the stage hung two Union Jacks.

The visitors distributed themselves on the chairs round the walls, not quite sure of the etiquette of the gathering, but the natives soon began to arrive, and they followed suit, so all felt at ease. Presently Nestor Mannila, the Finn accordeon player, began to tune up. He was an artist, that Nestor. His hair was not worn a la Paderewski, but plastered down flat as paint streaks on a graven image. But his platform technique, his vanity, the elaborate affectation of the slow, solemn movement of his head from side to side as he laid one gaunt cheek after another on the ends of his instrument, the dreamy look in his deep-set eyes, all pointed to the musician of quality. He was a master and one felt it as he played. He started off with a wild, weird skirling, but broke into a waltz. The tune he played throughout the evening never varied except once when he broke unexpectedly into "Comin' Thru' the Rye," but he changed the time to suit the different dances.

None of the Anglo-Saxon party knew just how to start, but then Mrs. McKirdy, a dear old lady who constituted herself a sort of chaperon for the strangers, came up and asked if they would like to meet some of the ladies. Of course they would. Few had yet come, but she introduced two Swedish girls, Hulda Sjolander and Rogua Olsen, one dark, the other fair, both fine dancers and the floor was soon full.

Gradually more people came in and the dances went along merrily. All constraint wore off and the men went up and begged dances from the girls at random. There was no sitting out. You just led your partner back to her seat and bowed gravely. Chairs were at a premium and you had done your duty when you got her one.

The cosmopolitan nature of the affair, the strange chance that brought these people together from a hundred corners of the world to take pleasure for a few brief hours in each other's company, that was the outstanding feature of it all. If you glanced round the room between dances you saw first a group of Indians sitting together, half a dozen girls, mostly clad in black which they greatly affect, but one of them, a beautiful slip of a girl with a faint red like the first rosy blush of the dawn tinging her dark cheeks and clad in a bright sweater, just out of the convent, and half a dozen braves. Next to them sat the Swedish girls, fresh and comely and as well-dressed as the girls in Toronto and then the Canadian folk, women who had followed their men to the wilds for love of them. The majority of the Finlanders sat at the head of the hall.

The little Toronto girl danced as happily with the boy camp cook from the power plant as with the best dressed men there. A New York camera man, who has travelled the world, waltzed with an Indian belle, who looked joyous enough to decorate a tombstone. A London clubman, who had burnt himself to a lean, long, brown shadow in twenty-five years of India's sun, tried to one-step with a fair-haired daughter of Sweden, but found that his training in British ballrooms could not give him a dancing equality with his partner in the latest American hop and had to lead her back to her seat, bending gracefully over her and murmuring many apologetic "Bah joves!" A diminutive blue-coated English marine discovered a lady from London among the Canadians present and was happy for the rest of the night. A son of the Southern States, one of America's foremost "movie" camera men, was eloquent with his soft, slow: "Ah, don' know when Ah enjoyed mahself so much," after leading back a speechless Finn girl to her seat.

Oh, Jehosophat, if the little prince had only been there!

Coming Events Cast Their Shadows Before

Not since the pre-Confederation days has the political life of Canada been surcharged with so much uncertainty.

Great events in Canadian politics are about to take place. The reorganizing and rehabilitating of great political parties is in progress. New leaders are appearing.

The order is changing. All things are becoming new.

THE next two years will be a momentous period in the political life of the country. Reconstruction is a greater task than Confederation.

How will you take your place in the affairs of the nation? What opinions will you form? How will you cast your ballot intelligently if you do not keep in touch and inform yourself on the great questions of the day by reading a daily newspaper national in viewpoint and international in scope?

This is the task and responsibility of The Globe—to give all the news, progressive views, and space for opposing opinions. Such was the threefold purpose of George Brown. His ideal was a Great Family Newspaper with a place in every home. That is The Globe's ideal to-day.

It is not a party organ, but a medium for the development of public opinion and an advocate of reform. It is the servant of the people from whose needs it draws its inspiration.

To be informed of the progress of events, you should avail yourself of The Globe's great news gathering organization. For an analysis of these developments, and clear, sober thought upon them, read its editorial discussions from day to day. They are written by close students of economics, politics, industry, commerce, social reform and religion.

And further, what The Globe has been in the past is a sure guarantee of what it will be in the future. The personality and ambitions of its founder ever dominate the activities of its publishers.

Therefore, nothing will be left undone to make The Globe the newspaper that George Brown would have it be and to earn a place for it in every Canadian home.

A Popular Novelist.

From our smallest province, Prince Edward Island, Canada's "million acre farm," comes one of our best known authors, L. M. Montgomery, who in 1911 became Mrs. (Rev.) Ewan Macdonald of Leaskdale, Ont. Lucy Maud Montgomery was born at Clifton, P.E.I., where her father, Hugh J. Montgomery, was a merchant. Owing to the death of her mother when was was only a few months old she was brought up by her grandparents at Cavendish, P.E.I. Her education was completed at the Prince of Wales' College, Charlottetown, and Dalhousie College, Halifax. She taught school for a few years. It was while she was at the Prince of Wales' College that her first work was published, a poem, in an American magazine, although she says, "As far back as my memory runs I was writing stories and verse for my own amusement." Her first "Anne" book grew out of a request for a serial for a Sunday school weekly. It was based on an entry in an old notebook: "Elderly couple apply to orphan asylum for a boy; a girl is sent to them." The proposed serial grew to a book and from that arose a whole series of the "Anne" books.

Knitted Gaiters.

Knitted gaiters made their appearance in Paris this past spring. White wool, snugly knitted, answers the purpose of a spat on a low shoe, and appears to good advantage. Mayhap this is a style that will find favor here as the weeks pass. We are told that shoes are going to be higher in price next autumn and leather so scarce that we may find it best to wear low shoes and gaiters. In that case these well-knitted gaiters might be a really useful fad.

Mongolia and the League of Nations.

Although the world at large gives little thought to Mongolia, report from the East indicates that Mongolia highly approves of the League of Nations, and hopes that it will be adopted as soon as possible and will begin to look after Mongolia immediately afterward. Mongolia, in short, is very much worried about the future, for China is preparing to cross the Gobi desert, where only the other day the failure of a badly organized effort to transport troops by motor postponed the advance, and although the nominal purpose of China is to protect her own frontier from Bolshevist invasion, Mongolia suspects an intention of resuming her former dominance over the Mongolian people. Before the Chinese revolution Mongolia was controlled by China; but with the downfall of the Manchu dynasty, and with the help and protection of Russia, the country became independent. Now in turn the Russian revolution has destroyed its protection by one powerful neighbor, and Mongolia anticipates, unless the League of Nations comes to the rescue, that she will again come under the political control of the other. Apparently as a self-governing nation Mongolia did better than many students of oriental affairs expected, and quite as well as was necessary for her own comfort. The Government is patriarchal, embracing a number of tribes, each of which governs itself, and with so few governmental expenses for police, roads, administration, or other elements of a more complex civilization, that it has liquidated a debt of $2,000,000 borrowed from Russia and spent largely, it is said, for 10,000 brass images of Buddha. The Hutukhtu rules ecclesiastically in Mongolia much as the Dalai Lama rules in Tibet.

After-war conditions, and the telephone

Reconstruction and Telephone Service.

TELEPHONE service, like other public services, undoubtedly suffered through the war.

Hundreds of skilled telephone workers went overseas. Many trained operators sought temporary positions in munition plants. There was a world shortage of the materials that go to build a telephone system. Our reserves of plant and equipment were drawn upon until they were practically exhausted. Necessary repairs and maintenance work had to wait.

Then came the armistice. The business world sprang into intense activity. The demand for new installations all over our system was enormous.

Now comes the task of getting back to normal—restoring our reserve plant, overtaking arrears of maintenance and repairs, hurrying new construction of local and long distance equipment to meet pressing demands for service.

Our plans for this year involve an outlay for extensions and replacements of over $7,000,000. We are giving intensive training in our operators' schools to hundreds of young women to prepare them for central office positions.

Our chief concern is that our subscribers should get the best possible service under all conditions. Skilled workers, adequate equipment, a resolve to do our best, while realizing that we are all servants of the public—these are the factors which, we hope, will result in the maintenance of the pre-war standard of telephone service.

And we ask the kindly co-operation of all telephone users in—

Making sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling;

Speaking distinctly, directly into the mouthpiece;

Answering promptly when the bell rings.

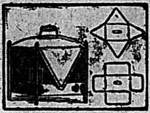
COVERS FOR THE BIRDCAGE

Decorative as Well as Useful Articles That May Be Made in Moments of Idleness.

Our sketch illustrates two useful types of covers to make for a birdcage, that require little more than cutting out. They can be carried out in linen, art serge, or, in fact, almost any remnant of material that may be handy. They are bound at the edges with narrow ribbon.

The space enclosed in the dotted line in the diagrams should correspond in size with the top of the birdcage, and the four flaps hang downwards on each side. In the center of the cover a small oval space is cut away, through which the handle of the cage may pass, so that the cover can be comfortably slipped over the cage in a moment. If desired, some pretty little floral design can be embroidered on three of the flaps and possibly the name of the bird worked upon the fourth.



Covers for Birdcage.

Diagram A gives the shape of the cover that is shown upon the cage in the sketch, and diagram B gives the shape of a similar cover, but with square flaps to hang downwards.

His First Visit.

Mr. Lloyd George would seem, says Liverpool Post, to have had a premonition of his future eminence when he paid a first visit to London as a lad of nineteen. "Went to the house of commons," he wrote home to his uncle. "Very disappointed. I will not say but that I eyed the assembly in a spirit similar to that in which William the Conqueror eyed England on his visit to Edward the Confessor as the region of his future domain. Oh, vanity!"

Injections of Cane Sugar.

Doctor Rosenthal reports to the Presse Medicale (Paris) that he has administered intravenous injections of a strong solution of saccharose in numerous cases of tuberculosis. The procedure exerts a manifest tonic action. It raises the blood pressure, augments the body weight, and indirectly produces a favorable effect on the tuberculous lesions. These results are ascribed by the author to an enhancement of the functions of the liver.

"Junior" Resembles His Papa.

His friends said it was excusable because it was his first boy. He exhibited the photograph at the bank where he was employed.

"Isn't he a wonder?" the young father would say, passing it through the window.

"You bet he is—really good looking and intelligent; yes, he does resemble his father." And papa would beam and act as though he had not noticed the flattering smile. All day the same thing was repeated as friends entered the bank.

He was "real tickled" with himself when he went home that night and handed the package of photographs to his wife. As she opened it the much flattered papa told her how his friends had admired "Junior," and did she think the little fellow looked as much like him as people had said?

Mrs. Bank Teller took one look at the contents of the package.

"Why, dearie, the photographer has made a mistake; he gave you the wrong pictures."—Kansas City Star.

Clock Tower of Jerusalem.

Since the occupation of the holy city of Jerusalem by the British it is gradually becoming more westernized. For the first time in its history its streets are properly cleaned and it has been given a fire brigade service and now an efficient water-supply. Hitherto its inhabitants depended upon a few wells and water collected in overhead cisterns. The telephone, too, has been introduced.

Its most striking improvement—though it is one that was carried out just prior to the war—was the erection of a fine clock tower at the Jaffa gate. It is built of white stone obtained from Solomon's quarries, of which the temple was constructed. The clock, which was supplied by a London watchmaker, shows both European and Arabic time. Opposite the tower a drinking fountain has been erected, and the roadway which leads through the old walls into the city at this point has been entirely rebuilt.

Vary Your Garden.

Remember that plant diseases and insects thrive where they have become established. Therefore, gardeners this year should take care not to place the individual crops where the same crops grew last year. Varying the arrangement of the garden reduces the danger from disease and insects. The same vegetables in the same place each year exhaust certain food elements, and reduced yields are sure to result.

Miles of Electric Wire.

In the White House at Washington there are about 175 miles of electric wire, providing for 3,000 incandescent lights, together with a call-bell system and a private telephone system for the use of the executive household.

The gloves worn in Iceland are made without fingers, and in order that no time may be wasted in distinguishing between right and left each glove has two thumbs. The hand is thrust into the first glove taken up.

MUST HARMONIZE WITH HAT

Pins Are by No Means to Be Regarded as Nonessential Part of the Costume.

Hatpins are little things and almost nonessential except on windy days, but put the wrong hatpin—even the littlest, plainest one—into a hat and the whole effect is spoiled, and the hatpin is proved, after all, to be of great importance. So if one must wear hatpins they should be chosen with the greatest care.

Small, inconspicuous gold hatpins are attractive in a plain sailor hat of light color, and gunmetal ones are suitable for hats of darker hue. But for summer hats in all their glory of many colors new and original hatpins have been devised. These are of enamel and represent flowers or butterflies or fruits; some of them are small and some are quite large, but their chief charm lies in the fact that one can find hatpins to harmonize with almost any hat trimming and thus avoid a jarring note. What could be more charming than a little coral rose nestling in the midst of the flowers on a hat? Or a cloisonne leaf among leaves?—New York Evening Sun.

Settling on the Land In Palestine.

A glimpse of Palestine in progress from past to future is afforded by an account of the little colony of Yemenians; Jewish emigrants from southern Arabia, who began to assemble a few years ago to live by wood-cutting in the neighborhood of the forests of some 100,000 trees that had been planted in the district of Judea. The forests are part of a large plan for the reforesting of Palestine; and to house the woodcutters small cement cottages were built at a cost of about 1,000 francs each, each with its garden and its opportunity for the homekeeper to buy his home by installments. Dwellings now stand which house 130 or 140 families, and the colony of woodcutters is one of several similar groups in which families naturally strongly attached to the soil have been settled in Palestine, cultivating small farms, and progressing toward independent ownership. In some cases the colonies are co-operative; a single large farm is run by several families who share its profits, and at the same time pay wages to additional laborers. The experiments are still too young to be at all conclusive, but they are succeeding in their small way, and they are very likely the beginning of a wide and wholesome development.

Turkish Crescent.

The Turkish crescent, although now regarded as essentially Mohammedan in significance, is, it appears, of Christian origin. A crescent moon was the emblem of the Byzantine Empire and of the Eastern Church. The Turks adopted it as a badge of triumph after the capture of Constantinople in 1453. With reference to the crescent, the story of the origin of the crescent-shaped Vienna roll is of curious interest. It arose in the sixteenth century, when the Turks were besieging Vienna. Failing to carry the city by assault, they began to mine the walls. At that period the bakehouses were in the walls under the fortifications, and when the mines were almost through the sound of the work was heard in the underground bakehouses and an alarm was given. To celebrate this event the bakers of Vienna adopted the Turkish emblem as the form in which to mold and bake their bread.

An Historic Family.

Miss Hester Leavenworth Trumbull, descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens, was married at Litchfield, Mass., recently to Miles Standish, Jr., of Boston, who traces his descent directly from Capt. Miles Standish of the Plymouth colony. The bride's line is through Faith Robinson, wife of the famous Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut. Mrs. Standish is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Trumbull, of Litchfield.

Progress And Prosperity For Belleville And District

FIRST GUN FIRED IN THE AWAKENING CAMPAIGN—MOBILIZATION OF FORCES FOR BELLEVILLE EXPANSION CAMPAIGN—CO-OPERATION OF ALL PROGRESSIVE CITIZENS SOUGHT TO PROMOTE THE INTERESTS OF BELLEVILLE AND DISTRICT.

Belleville's City Council and Board of Trade, believing that Canada is on the threshold of a great expansion era in which the resources of this great land of opportunity will be developed to the limit, and realizing that the city of Belleville and surrounding district are second to none in Canada in wealth of national resources and advantage of location facilities, etc., have decided upon a progressive policy to advance the prosperity of city and district. To promote this policy, after careful investigation, the assistance of the Canadian City Bureau, of Toronto, affiliated with a similar organization in the United States, has been invoked and an extensive campaign is about to be inaugurated.

Headquarters of the Canadian City Bureau have been opened at 8 Campbell street with Messrs. R. A. Crosby, Dr. H. B. Haskell and A. G. Scott in charge, and an Advisory Committee of fifty citizens will act with these gentlemen in a progressive campaign which will first deal with an expansion program, with the object of interesting all branches of the community in the Board of Trade and making it a strong representative body with a large and energetic membership to engage in an effective campaign for the development of the resources of city and country.

A meeting of the Advisory Committee will be held this evening in the City Hall which will be addressed by Mr. Robert A. Crosby, of the Canadian City Bureau, who will direct the "Drive".

Permission has been secured for the placing of advertising banners across the streets to help arouse public interest in the campaign and the "Drive" will be short, snappy, and effective.

Will Take Weapons From Foreigners

All Dangerous Weapons to be Seized by Provincial Authorities.

Acting under legislation which became effective with the proroguing of the Federal Parliament on Monday, steps are to be taken shortly by Superintendent Joseph E. Rogers of the Provincial Police to seize all pistols and other dangerous weapons that are in the possession of foreigners. In this campaign Mr. Rogers is inviting the fullest cooperation of police in all parts of the Province.

The need for such action has been emphasized locally by the number of shootings and other crimes which have been committed in recent weeks many of which aliens have figured in. Loopholes in the law have made it impossible in the past for the police to launch such a campaign, but now that they have the authority, Mr. Rogers promises that it will be acted upon.

At the last regular session of the Dominion Parliament the criminal code was amended to give the necessary support to the police, but it was afterward found that the amendment was not satisfactory, as it left some doubt as to how far the police could go. When Superintendent Rogers discovered that this was the case, he postponed his seizure of weapons, and went to Ottawa instead, where he pointed out the difficulty to Hon. Arthur Meighen. As a result the criminal code was amended at the special session of the House which has just closed.

Restricts Issuance of Permits

"It is not necessary to explain that Provincial Police will not issue permits to foreigners and they are very careful about issuing them to Canadians, too. Permits may be issued not only by the Provincial Police, but by any officer of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, or commissioner of the Dominion Police, district of police magistrates, and sheriff or chief constable of any city or incorporated town. Consequently while the superintendent of the Provincial Police will not issue permits to foreigners, he expressed the hope in conversation with The Globe that the same care would be shown by the other officials who are allowed to issue permits

Formerly, too, a permit which was issued in Quebec or Manitoba was good if presented in this Province. As the amended act now reads a permit is only good in the district over which the issuing officer has authority. Thus a permit issued by the Toronto police is only valid in Toronto, while a permit issued by Mr. Rogers is good throughout the Province. This amendment was found very necessary as it was ascertained a few months ago that an official outside of Ontario was issuing permits promiscuously.

Will Protect Game

The amendment to the criminal code above is expected also to be a great advantage to the protecting of game and bird life of the Province. Police officers, game wardens, and people interested in bird life declare that foreigners especially those of Southern Europe and Asia, are the greatest foes to bird life and game. In the past they have taken any weapon they could get hold of and gone and killed for the sake of killing.

As the law now reads it would put a stop to Americans coming to Ontario for the deer hunting season, which is at present in full swing. That was not the intention of the amendment, however, and Mr. Rogers arranged with the Game Department to provide permits for residents of the United States who desired to hunt deer in Ontario. These permits are being issued at the same time the licenses are granted by the Game Department and without any trouble to the visitors.

TO SHIP LIQUOR INTO ONTARIO

Toronto, Nov. 14.—The Citizens' Liberty League, in order to test the validity of the order-in-Council with reference to the importation of spirits from another province into Ontario, and to discover whether or not the provisions of the said order-in-Council have now been terminated, have decided to import a case of spirits from Montreal to Toronto, and consigned to the private residence of one of their members, and in this way have the matter tested in the courts. At a conference between Mr. J. D. Flavelle (chairman of the Licensing Board), Mr. T. L. Monahan, and Secretary T. L. Carruthers, Mr. Flavelle agreed that for the purpose of this test case the Board would not make any prosecution of the shipper or the carrier, but would confie any action taken to the person to whom the consignment was addressed.

A committee was appointed to act during the noon adjournment, in the preparation of a resolution recommending a method for holding the proposed inter-Provincial conference.

Hastings County Victorious In Victory Loan Contest

FIRST COUNTY IN THIS DIVISION TO PASS OBJECTIVE—PRINCE OF WALES FLAGS WON BY CITY AND COUNTY—APPLICATIONS RECEIVED YESTERDAY FOR $201,550.

Hastings County has made its Victory Loan 1919 objective.

Belleville has made its objective.

We are the first County in the Bay of Quinte Division to make our objective, having beaten Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac Counties.

Prince of Wales' Flags won by both the City and County are being hoisted this afternoon at the City Hall and County Court House.

The name of Belleville and Hastings County will continue to resound throughout Canada as a patriotic spirited and broad-minded section of good old Ontario, the Province which is subscribing half of the total subscriptions to the Victory Loan 1919 coming from the whole Dominion of Canada.

YESTERDAY'S RETURNS

Application for $201,550 came in from Hastings County last night. This brought our team members totals up to $1,812,800. Our objective for this was $1,800,000 so our percentage went over the top to 100.71. Our special subscriptions objective of $100,000 not included in this, was attained some time ago.

Last night Belleville lacked $54,000 to make its objective of $640,000 but this was made up this morning and so our City has also won its Prince of Wales' Flag.

MUST BEAT LAST YEAR

Today, returns are piling in splendidly. Every effort is being made to beat last year's record and we have got a lot to do to get over it. Complete satisfaction will not be felt unless we do. Our last year's total was $2,473,200 It can be readily seen by this that it is absolutely a case 'Every man and woman this day and to-morrow must do their duty.'' There is little doubt that this is possible. Deposits in banks show that it is. It is up to the people of Belleville ad Hastings County to do their utmost.

Every facility is being provided for people to do their part. Nearly all the city banks will be open till 9 o'clock to-morrow night and Victory Loan Headquarters, 194 Front Street, will be open till midnight.

EXCITEMENT INTENSE

The air is charged with electricity at Victory Loan Headquarters. Canvassers are on the job from early morning till late at night. Special facilities are being provided for people to write up their applications. If we do not beat our last year's record it will not be the fault of the County Organization.

Strangely enough reports are coming in that a great many people have only just discovered that they can buy as low as $50 Bonds. No matter how small the amount it is very important that people put it into the Loan. The number of applications put in will reflect just as highly to our credit as the amount totaly subscribed.

WINS FOUR CRESTS

No less than four crests have been won by Mr. W. A. McMurray, canvasser for Tudor, Limerick and Cashel. This puts him at the lead for the County and he expects to turn a considerable amount in to-day in addition. Mr. D. H. Morrison and Dr. A. T. Embury Bancroft, have also three crests to their credit. A Prince of Wales' Flag was also won last night by Mr. C. A. Bleecker and Mr. J. C. Bowen, canvassing Marmora and Lake. They have 102.70 per cent. Trenton, Deseronto and Deloro have also won a crest for their flags.

Trainmen Request Increase In Wages

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—A request for an increase of sixty cents for an eight-hour day is the chief proposal now before Rail Director Hines from the trainmen's and conductors' unions, which opened conferences with him Tuesday.

Hines today was expected to give the unions a final answer. At conferences Tuesday and yesterday, he is understood to have made offers below the amount requested.

"We are asking this increase to put our wage scale on a level with increases granted other railroad workers," said W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, today.

"President Wilson in August, told all railroad workers they must not expect increases proportionate to the advanced cost of living until the Government had been given a reasonable time to reduce the living costs. The President, however, emphasized that wage adjustments could be made in the case of any class of workers who were not being paid in proportion to other classes. The request of sixty cents for an eight-hour day represents our idea of what increases should be given the trainmen to make their scales conform with the scales of other classes of railway workers."

The trainmen have decided to postpone pressing their original demands submitted in April, until the Government has been given a reasonable time to reduce living costs, Lee said. The trainmen's original demand was for an average increase of 35 per cent. Officials of both unions contended these increases were only proportionate to the advanced cost of living.

Before discussing wage adjustments with two of the rail unions today Hines will discuss overtime with officials of the four big brotherhoods.

"Oh, You Women" Is Comedy With A Kick

Laughable Travesty Upon "Manny" Women Delights Griffin Patrons.

John Emerson and Anita Loos' new comedy, "Oh, You Women," was presented before a large audience and scored a decisive hit at Griffin's last night. Ernest Truex and Louise Huff supported by a most capable cast, were the co-stars in this admirable production. The story of "Oh, You Women" deals with the problem of what a young soldier has to do when he returns from the war and finds women rigged up like men and a girl holding down his job. Abraham Licoln Jones is a young citizen of Fremont who returns from the fighting front and finds it difficult to get established in his home town. Abe is the pride of Fremont's 'Congress' an aggregation of old chaps that meet in Hobart's grocery store to discuss political problems. Joe Bush, the mayor, is a Civil War Veteran whose office Abe used to sweep out, and the Mayor wants Abe to be his successor. Mary Shelby, a dressmaker, is the most important woman in town. She loves Abe but he is too busy to pay attention to her. Alec Smart, the richest man in town, loves Mary and tells her so many times a day. Aurora Noyes, a clubwoman, hits the town and brings her daughter, Lotta, a graduate of Strongjaw University with her. The two organize a political club for women Lotta is the first highbrow Abe has ever met and he falls desperately in love with her. When the war breaks out and the men leave town, the women assume control and when the men come back, the women are holding on still. Aurora Noyes is the boss of the town, and she practically has ousted the Mayor. She inaugurates a dress reform movement for women her motto being 'Pants will win the war.' Things are in a terrible shape when Abe gets back from the front. He finds his mother garbed as a postman, Mayor Bush has been thrust out of the office by Aurora who is a candidate for election with every prospect of winning the race. The Mayor is wearing gingham when Abe shows up, while another member of the 'Congress' is a nurse maid. How Abe manages to rid the town of feminine domination is told in a series of delightful scenes. "Sheeps' Clothing" a very interesting reel showing the making of underwear from the raw material to the finished product, "Topics of the Day" revealing the wit of the World Press, a beautiful Outig Chester travelogue ad the Official News completes the program all of which will be shown again to-night and Saturday matinee and night.

"THE HEART OF WETONA"

Norma Talmage and Thomas Meighen are co-starring in a picturization of David Belasco's famous stage success "The Heart of Wetona" which was presented at the Palace yesterday. It is a story of a half Indian girl, who has been wronged by the man she loves. She refuses to tell the name of her lover and Hardin (Thomas Meighen) the agent in charge of the reservation is accused of being Wetona's lover. Hardin is in love with Wetona but has kept it a secret because he has never been given any encouragement. To protect Wetona, Hardin marries her. She is ousted from the tribe, Hardin receives notice from the tribe that he has two days to leave the reservation, failing to leave in the alloted time the Indians seek his life, how events are cleared up to the satisfaction of all is told in a clever and original manner, incidentally holding one's interest to the final climax. "Almost Welcome," a Lyons-Moran comedy, British Canadian News and an excellent chapter of the new "stunt" serial "The Great Gamble" are also being offered on the same program.

"EXPERIENCE"

"Experience" aptly described as the most wonderful play in America, now in its sixth season of remarkable prosperity, will be presented by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest at Griffin's next Wednesday night, enroute from Ottawa to Toronto.

Six years ago Messrs. Comstock and Gest produced this play for the first time and since then it has played in most of the big cities of the United States from coast to coast and has enjoyed remarkable endorsement from press and clergy everywhere it has been presented. Now for its sixth season the managers have provided a complete new scenic production and new costumes for the ladies in the company. The cast has been selected with great care and will be one of the strongest that has ever presented this wonderful morality play. There are ten scenes in the production.

London Meds' Capture Anti-Saloon Leaguer

Sprinkle "Pussyfoot" Johnson With Flour, and Carry Him on Their Shoulders.

LONDON, Nov. 13—Crowds of medical students bearing banners with the inscription, "We want beer and stout,' organized a demonstration against prohibition campaign meetings in the heart of London yesterday afternoon. The crowds were so dense in the Strand that traffic was held up for some time.

Essex Hall, where the meeting was held under a plan arranged by American prohibition workers, was virtually surrounded by noisy demonstrators when the meeting was held.

The students finally captured the Anti-saloon League organizer, W. E. Johnson, commonly known as "Pussyfoot" who was to have addressed the meeting.

Johnson was lifted to the shoulders of students and carried along the Strand at the head of a long procession which cheered and sang. The police were swept aside.

The meeting had been arranged under the auspices of the Overseas Club and the Patriotic League. F. A. McKenzie was the chairman. Mr. Johnson was announced as the principal speaker for prohibition, while the anti-prohibition debater was R. Mitchell Banks. The subject of the debate was: "The way and how of American prohibition." An admission fee was charged and the hall, which holds 500 persons, was filled.

Before the time for the debate to start the organizers became nervous because of the large crowds of students and others outside the hall. They called for police assistance and locked the outer gates of the building.

The students, however, rushed the police, broke through the gates and entered the hall. They seized Johnson, after pelting him and McKenzie with bags of flour, and then carried Johnson on their shoulders from the platform into the streets.

Mr. Johnston's assailants, for the most part, were medical students, and against them, at times, he put up a strenuous fight, receiving a badly-damaged eye and other injuries, so that finally, owing to his weakened physical condition, he was obliged to submit to the indignity.

Eventually Johnson was rescued by the police, who, during the early part of the march, simply kept the crowd moving. He was rushed to the Bow Street Station, where his injuries were dressed, and he was then able to go home.

A CITIZEN ARMY.

Universal Military Training In Switzerland.

In connection with the frequent agitation for universal military training in Canada, it is interesting to study the systems of other countries where such service has been tested

Universal compulsory military service in Switzerland dates from 1874, when the old system of requiring each canton to raise an allotment of three men for every hundred men of its population, was done away with, and the system of requiring every able-bodied man to meet for training was substituted. The system worked with very little trouble or friction from the beginning, and the Swiss people are very proud of their citizen army.

The Swiss boy, at the age of 10, is put into the gymnastic class at school and begins learning the elements of the soldier drill on the schoolhouse playground. Long before he is old enough to be called upon for service he has learned to do the manual exercises and to go through much of the drill that afterward fits him for a soldier.

When a boy reaches 17 years he is liable to service—a liability which continues until he is 50 years of age. Even after that he may be liable, if he is capable of doing any other army work than soldiering, such as acting as baker, veterinary surgeon, or otherwise.

Yet with all of this universal training, the only people in Switzerland who make arms an exclusive profession are the commander-in-chief, selected by the Federal Assembly, and the general staff. These form the brains of the army. The rank and file belong to the cantons.

The Swiss man sacrifices cheerfully a definite amount of his time to preserve his independence as a citizen of a free country.

Entrenched behind his native rocks, the citizen army of Switzerland contains every element of the nation. The man of wealth and the peasant are found shoulder to shoulder. No man is compelled to spend the crucial years of his life away from home in the army, and yet every man is required to contribute his share to that army's maintenance and the nation's safety.

At the age of 20 every able-bodied Swiss youth becomes a member of the Auszug, and every one who lacks the necessary qualifications regrets that he is unable to co-operate with other young defenders of his country. During the first year of liability he must serve 75 days or more, and 11 days for each successive year he is called to the standard. It is no excuse that he has brothers already in the army, or that he has a widowed mother dependent upon him. The burden of preparedness, spread over a nation, becomes no onerous task for anyone, and the average young man in Switzerland looks upon his time spent in training camps as a pleasurable vacation, profitable to the safety of his country.

Service in the "Auszug," or "Elite," continues until the citizen reaches the age of 32. Thereafter he passes into what is known as the "Landwehr" or First Reserve, where he remains until he has completed his forty-fourth year. He must give in that time nine days of service during each four years that he belongs to the "Landwehr." After he has passed 44 he goes into the "Landsturm," or Second Reserve, where he stays until he is 50, and even beyond that if national necessity calls him.

At the various stages in his career proper exemptions become the lot of the soldier. Those in the employ of the state, railway and steamboat men, hospital officials and others reach their exemption early; preachers, doctors, prison officials, postal and telegraphic officials are exempt; but the man who has to go into the field has the consolation that the man who may stay at home also has his burden to bear, for, in addition to all other taxes, he must pay a special military poll tax of $1.20, a military property tax of 15 cents per $100 (with property under $200 exempted), and a military income tax of 1½ per cent. The total tax thus paid by any one person cannot exceed $600. The assessments are rigorously made and every penny "Passing" for Insurance.

A Philadelphia physician, Doctor Gailiard, who has examined great numbers of men for life insurance companies, informs me that "the popular styles in physique have changed," Girard writes in the Philadelphia Press.

When I asked him to elucidate, he replied:

"Not so long ago life insurance companies made a great ado and scanned with care all applicants who were underweight. Now underweight is passed over as of little consequence, while overweight is reckoned as the stumbling block."

In other words, the thin man was once regarded as a poor risk, whereas now he is preferred to the stout man.

When I asked the doctor to tell me the reason for this switch around in the popularity of the two types of the male form divine, he said tuberculosis, once the dread of the thin man, has been far outclassed in fatality by other organic diseases, especially of the heart, which are apt to affect the more rotund.

Truly, every dog has his day.

What Did He Mean?

The minister had eaten a very good dinner and was getting ready to leave for a long time. He happened to glance at the eighteen-year-old daughter.

"Well, well," he laughed. "I suppose that pretty soon I'll be coming back to marry this young woman to one of the interesting young men of the congregation."

The irrepressible eight-year-old son spoke up:

"Oh, no, you won't," he offered. "Mary is going to be an old bachelor."

The family's laugh told him that he had used the wrong word. So straightway he started to make it right.

"I mean an old witch," he asserted more positively than before.

CALLED BY DEATH

GEORGE N. BENNETT

Rumors of an exaggerated nature were last evening and this morning circulated about the city regarding the sudden demise of Mr. George N. Bennett of this city, which sad event occurred on Wednesday night near Brinklow in the far northern part of Hastings County. It appears that Mr Bennett, who was a traveller for the firm of Walmsley & Company, wholesale grocers of this city, left here on Monday in an auto for a business trip and also intended to spend a few days with a party of friends in hunting for deer in the northern wilds of the county. He was at Campbellford and Marmora in connection with his trip and did business at these places. He left the latter place for the north and on the journey a spring of the auto broke which delayed him for some time. This was the last heard of Mr. Bennett until a message reached here last evening that he was dead. While no particulars have been received it is surmised that excitement had caused a sudden attack of heart failure, resulting in death.

Mr. George N. Bennett was well known in Belleville, where he was born and had resided all his life. He was 42 years of age and was a son of the late Mr. Robert N. Bennett, butcher of the city. For the past 21 years Mr. Bennett had been a valued employee of the Walmsley firm and was not only highly esteemed by the firm but by the business public He was a genial and whole-hearted citizen who made friends wherever he went. He was much in favor of sport especially shooting, having been for years identified with Belleville Trap Shooting Club. Deceased was a member of Christ Church and was also a member of the Belleville Lodge A. F. & A. M. A widow and a daughter, Miss Verna, survive, and to them will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all citizens. The body will be brought here for interment.

ENGINEER'S NEGLECT LED TO HIS DEATH, JURY INFERS

Toronto, Nov. 14.—At the Morgue, last night Coroner Pickering's jury, at the close of the hearing into the death of Frank Bignell, the C.P.R. engineer who died of injuries sustained when run over by his own engine at the Union Stock Yards siding on Nov. 1, brought in a verdict of accidental death.

The evidence submitted showed that Bignell went underneath his engine to do some work and failed to properly adjust the cylinder cocks and airbrake so that the engine started of its own volition, and Bignell was dragged along the cement railbed and fatally injured. He died in the Western Hospital a few days after the accident.

LEST WE FORGET!

The anniversary of Armistice Day brought many memories, and the tribute of two minutes' silent thought to the memory of the glorious dead as requested by the King was generally observed in all parts of the British Empire, but no where more generally and with such solemn earnestness as in the United Kingdom, where the red scythe of war cut down so many splendid young men in the springtime of life. Cable despatches from London tell of men and women who stood sobbing in the streets during the two minutes snatched from a busy day for remembrance of that great silent army of heroes who did so much to save the world from disaster. Standing bareheaded wherever they were when the great bells chimed the hour, many heads bowed in sadness and hearts with their burden of grief lightened by pride for the achievements of their heroes who would never return, silently paid a tribute to the nation's dead. Then the bands massed in the open places of the great city played the Doxology, God Save the King, and the buglers sounded the Last Post, while thousands of persons gathered round the monuments erected to the soldiers and deposited floral wreaths. As it was in London, so it was in all parts of the United Kingdom and in the kingdoms beyond the seas, a reverent tribute to the memory of the glorious dead, mingled with thanksgiving to Almighty God Who strengthened the armies of the Allies so that the roads to Paris and the Channel ports were held secure against the Hun.

No more remarkable public example of the fact that mankind does not forget the sacrifices of its heroes or neglect to acknowledge the Supreme Ruler of the Universe as the Giver of all Good was ever manifested, and this tribute of remembrance should be continued year after year while time shall last and the British flag continues to fly over free and happy peoples.

THE PROHIBITION BILLS.

(Montreal Gazette)

The abuse of parliamentary machinery was forcibly exemplified in the passage of the Government's prohibition bills in the dying hours of the session. In the House of Commons, nominally the representative chamber, a bare quorum of members watched the despatch of legislation involving a principle as important as any with which parliaments are called upon to deal. If the legislation itself was objectionable, the manner of its passage was equally bad and cannot but be regarded as discreditable to Parliament.

The Canada Temperance Act has been amended in such a way as to make its provisions capable of province-wide application. If a prohibition province desires to prevent the importation of intoxicating liquor, or its transportation in such province, it may, through its Legislature, petition for a referendum. The Federal Government is bound then to provide for such referendum, and upon a majority vote being recorded against the importation and transportation of liquor, effect is given to that vote by proclamation. The Federal Government and Parliament, by means of this legislation, are divested of any power of discretionary action. The federal machinery is placed unreservedly in the hands of the provinces. According to a ministerial statement to the House of Commons, the province is being given local option, but it is being given that option on a straight majority vote. The position thus taken is one which the Whitney Government in Ontario always refused to take. A motion to require a three-fifths majority before such a law could become effective was rejected by the House of Commons. The one concession made by the Government and Parliament permits the continuance of the manufacture of intoxicating liquor in a dry province for sacramental or commercial purposes, or for export, thus sparing, to some extent, established industries.

In regard to the amendment to the Doherty Act providing for the prosecution in one province of the residents of another Province, Parliament showed itself particularly indifferent to the character of its legislation. A proper but futile protest was registered against this amendment in the Senate, and the provision becomes the law of Canada. Under it a person accused of sending intoxicating liquor from one province into a dry province, however far removed, may be compelled to face a prosecution in the dry province. If he is acquitted, he is to be permitted to make his way home as best he can, and presumably at his own expense, He may be taken from one end of Canada to another and prosecuted in what would be, to say the least, an unfriendly environment. This is going far towards a violation of provincial jurisdiction, and a precedent of that kind, once established, is certain to produce serious complications. To the rights of the individual, no consideration whatever is given, which is in accord with the guiding principle of all legislation.

The time is approaching when the annual shuffle of municipal manager will take place, and apprentices will in some cases take the places of two-thirders and journeymen municipal legislators. It is high time that a system of municipal government was being devised upon business lines to supersede the antiquated method of conducting a large business with men of little municipal experience. The men are all right, generally, but the system is radically wrong.

Some objection is being raised because the prohibition bills were passed on Sunday, but as prohibition applies seven days in the week it seems appropriate that dry legislation should be passed on the first day of the week.

There does not seem to be any reason why there should be any political battles over Porter's Peace Picnic, even if the train was late.

Returned soldiers in Belleville resent the civic five dollar poll tax and the Belleville G.W.V.A. has entered a protest against it. It is rather early to begin levying special taxes upon returned soldiers for the era has not yet passed when dealings with the men who risked their lives to keep Canada free and prosperous should be changed from a basis of trying to pay them in small part the great debt owed them instead of trying to take away from them the little they have of this world's goods.

He first discovered the wonderful power of Zam-Buk by using it for eczema, which it completely ended. Since then his family is never without it.

THE AGE OF HOLIDAYS.

Washington Star.

Stone age, bronze age, dark ages, age of chivalry, electric age, etc., are rough definitions of the ages through which the world has passed. Perhaps some phrase-making chronicler may describe the period in which we are living as the automobile age, the aviation age, the high price age, the strike age, the age of controversy, the age of traction troubles, poor car service, poor telephone service, or something appropriate like that. Perhaps also he may hit on the phrase "holiday age." Holidays now come not singly, but in battalions. Double holidays and triple holidays are becoming usual. Once upon a time a double holiday happened only about as often as two blue Sundays came together, but that was some time ago. Holidays are becoming so numerous that some of us may develop new forms of disease, not due to overwork, but to overrest. If the multiplication of holidays continues at its present rate it may be that a few generations hence the holiday will be the usual day and the work day the exceptional day. However, the holiday trend has not yet made any deep inroad on the newspaper schedule or calendar. The paper comes out just the same.

Catarrh Of The Stomach Is Dangerous

"Thousands Have It and Don't Know It," Says Physician. Frequently Mistaken for Indigestion—How to Recognize and Treat.

"Thousands of people suffer more or less constantly from furred, coated tongues, bad breath, sour burning stomach frequent vomiting, rumbling stomach, bitter eructations, gas, wind and stomach acidity and call it indigestion when in reality their trouble is due to gastric catarrh of the stomach," writes a New York physician.

Catarrh of the stomach is dangerous because the mucous membrane lining of the stomach is thickened and a coating of phlegm covers the surface so that the digestive fluids cannot mix with the food and digest them. This condition soon breeds deadly disease in the fermented, unassimilated food. The blood is polluted and carries the infection throughout the body. Gastric ulcers are apt to form and frequently an ulcer is the first sign of a deadly cancer.

In catarrh of the stomach a good and safe treatment is to take before meals a teaspoonful of pure Bisurated Magnesia in half a glass of hot water as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water washes the mucous from stomach walls, draws the blood to the stomach while the bisurated magnesia is an excellent solvent for mucus and increases the efficiency of the hot water treatment. Moreover the Bisurated Magnesia will serve as a powerful but harmless antacid which will neutralize any excess hydrochloric acid that may be in your stomach and sweeten its food contents. Easy, natural digestion without distress of any kind should soon follow. Bisurated Magnesia is not a laxative, is harmless, pleasant and easy to take and can be obtained from any local druggist. Don't confuse Bisurated Magnesia with other forms of magnesia, milks, citrates, etc., but get it in the pure bisurated form (powder or tablets), especially prepared for this purpose.

"EVERY MAN AND WOMAN THIS DAY TO DO THEIR DUTY"

WHEN BIG BEN RECALLED THE WAR

An Incident of Armistice Day Anniversary, As Seen From the Window of a Toronto Newspaper Office.

(Toronto Telegram)

Big Ben, at the head of Bay street, stood with his two hands uplifted. He began to strike.

"ONE!"

Every lever, cog and key in the newspaper's battery of Mergenthalers that was pouring a drumfire into the multitudinous morning "takes" of "liners" stopped as though "30" had been reached.

* * *

"TWO!!" An aged financier, rounding the corner of the Toronto General Trusts building from Melinda street, glanced up at the sounding tower, and stood stock still, bare-headed in the November sunlight. Perhaps he was thinking of a son buried in Belgium.

* * *

"THREE!!!" A delivery truck skated around the corner, hesitated as the driver recognized the clanging summons, sidled softly in towards the kerb, and stood with engine purring.

* * *

"FOUR!!!!" Bolting down the steps of the Bank of Toronto a messenger upset all traditions of his kind by beginning to run. He had crossed the kerb, when he was arrested by the clanging stroke. He, too, stood still, like the financier across the street.

* * *

"FIVE!!!!!" The messenger boy's head was bare, too, now.

* * *

"SIX!!!!!!" The revolving doors of the Toronto Stock Exchange, on the west side of Bay street, just below the bank, spun out three very busy brokers. A big car was waiting for them. They did not take it. They stood spellbound on the kerb.

* * *

"SEVEN!!!!!!!" The stroke found the brokers bare-headed.

* * *

"EIGHT!!!!!!!!" A telegraph boy on a mud-spattered wheel skidded across the slippery pavement. He "brought up all standing," one foot on the pedal, the other on the asphalt. His cap was in his hand.

* * *

"NINE!!!!!!!!!" With grind of brakes and clang of bell, a street car stopped "dead in its tracks" within a few feet of King street.

* * *

"TEN!!!!!!!!!!" A charwoman—you wouldn't have guessed it from her garb—who had just completed her morning mop-work in an office building, emerged from the front portals like a duchess descending the stairway of her ancestral home. She heard the bell, halted, and stood as reverently as the bare-headed men in front of her.

* * *

"ELEVEN!!!!!!!!!!!" A soldier, arguing angrily over the refused gratuity, as he walked lop-sidedly with a civilian along the north side of Melinda street, came to the salute as he rounded the Bay street corner. He saluted with his left hand. His right was in France.

* * *

There they all stood, drayman, messenger, soldier, business man, charwoman, and motorman—motionless, meaning it, while the smoke lazily curled up into the November air, and the silent salute ran around the British Empire with the British Empire's never-setting sun.

* * *

Not all were bareheaded. Most were. Not all the street was silent. Unenlightened ones, who didn't know and didn't care, bustled past. Some hesitated shame-facedly, and then walked on. Others realized what it meant, and halted, too. Others were too absorbed to see anything but the dollars they thought were ahead of them.

* * *

Big Ben spread his hands just a trifle. The long finger slid almost half way to the first mark past the topmost point of the dial rim.

* * *

Then the Mergenthaler machines roared again like hungry monsters, the street car bell clanged, the dray chug-chugged, and the living rocks in the human torrent once more merged with the ebb and flow of a great city's tides.

"UNDIES" OF SOLID COLORS

Though at First Thought They May Seem Bizarre, They Are Really Quite Practical.

Undergarments developed in black and a great range of vivid colors seem bizarre and rather absurd at first glance, but when one considers that, regardless of the season or occasion for which they are intended, outer garments are now made of the most transparent fabrics, the need of under things that match or blend with them will be easily realized. Petticoat combinations and separate camisoles are shown for next season made of black chiffon and georgette combined with black lace, of all-over lace in black or of either of the first named fabrics trimmed with fine tucking, drawn work, etc.

Emphasizing the tendency to match undergarments with outer apparel chemises and combinations are now being shown made of brown georgette and other sheer silks. Brown has already been bulletined as a leading color for outer apparel for next season and manufacturers of items of lingerie have not been slow to follow this lead.

Bloomers will continue to be in great demand next season, it seems certain, as narrow skirts and voluminous petticoats are an impossible combination.

Crepe de chine and washable satin are the two fabrics most used in the development of undergarments for fall and winter, and various laces, dainty hand embroidery or insets of georgette are favorite trimming touches.

Two-piece pajamas are very popular, because they may serve either as sleeping or lounging garments.

SOMETHING NEW IN APRONS

Young Woman With Ideas Tells How She Adapted Glazed Chintz With Remarkably Good Effect.

A young woman who very much admired the bright glazed chintz which formed the window shades, slipovers and overcurtains in a friend's home was presented with a yard-long remnant to be used "for a pillow cover."

But as the young woman in question felt that glazed chintz would not make especially pleasing or comfortable covers for down pillows she planned another use for the gay patterned fabric.

A circular apron pattern that crossed over in the back and buttoned on the shoulders was chosen. The chintz was cut very carefully with straight, even edges and bound all the way around with rose-colored linen braid just the shade of the most prominent flowers in the pattern. Rose-colored pearl buttons finished the shoulders.

Because of its smooth finish this apron did not become spoiled nearly so quickly as one of ordinary gingham, but when it did require laundering was treated to an extra amount of starch and ironed on the right side while damp.

NEURALGIA

CHRONIC CASE OF 12 YEARS' STANDING REMEDIED BY T.R.C.'S.

"You can't imagine what it means to me to be free from pain after having suffered with Neuralgia for 12 years," writes Mrs. Brunner, 624 Elm St., Buffalo, N.Y. "I am 63 years old and have been under different doctors' care for the past 12 years. When my attacks came on the agony was unbearable. Even the sound of human voices was unendurable. When visiting in Toronto I heard of T.R.C.'s and took a box home with me.

"One of my bad attacks came along soon after. The T.R.C.'s gave me quick relief and the attack, which generally used to last for days, was over in half an hour. Since that time I have never been without them and have no further fear of my old enemy." Neuralgia or bad headaches need no longer make you suffer. T.R.C.'s attack the cause of the pain. NEW C.P.R. BRANCH INTO TIMBER TRACT

The C. P. R. has just let the contract to the Foundation Company for the building of the extension of its railway line from Alberni to Great Central Lake. It is expected it will be completed by next July.

The proposed extension is ten and a half miles in length and from Alberni follows the Sproat River north to the confluence of the Sproat and Stamp Rivers where it branches west and runs along the south side of Great Central Lake for a few miles.

The immediate purpose of the extension is to tap the valuable timber resources in the vicinity of Great Central Lake. It is estimated that the timber traffic from Great Central Lake down to salt water in the Alberni Canal will pay for the line in a couple of years.

At present there is no settlement of Great Central Lake where the line will end. It is likely, however, that before long the C.P.R. will develop that area as a tourist centre.

The C.P.R. started a few weeks ago to clear the right of way for the Alberni-Great Central Lake Extension. To see just when his company can get on the contract, Bayly Hipkins, vice-president and Pacific Coast manager of the Foundation Company, and E. E. Jenkins, local manager, went north to Alberni. This is the first contract on the island outside of shipbuilding that the Foundation Company has attempted although the company undertakes many such contracts in other parts of the continent.

Richard Marpole of Vancouver, British Columbia manager of the C. P. R. says he has given instructions to have it rushed through as soon as all preliminary ararngements have been completed. In speaking of the railway contract J. S. Connell, the engineer in charge of the Vancouver offices of the Foundation Company said that the extension would open up one of the finest sections of Douglas fir, both in quality and quantity, on Vancouver Island.

Preliminary work has already been started on the contract, and Mr. Connell who will be in charge of the works, says that the railway extension between Alberni and Great Central Lake will be completed and ready for operation by next July, providing of course, the necessary steel is delivered as required. Several hundred men will be employed on the job which will be completed with Foundation dispatch.

Wages For Domestics Inflated In Canada

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Misses Girdler and Pott, delegates appointed by the Overseas Settlement Committee to inquire concerning openings in Canada for women from the United Kingdom, presented a long report, which was laid before Parliament.

They spent four months in Canada and admit they had to omit visiting many districts. Regarding domestic service they speak of the mischief caused by agents in England telling attending emigrants that labor-saving devices are in universal use in Canada, which they say, is a complete mistake. The restlessness among domestic workers here is accentuated in Canada by these misstatements. There appear to be legitimate means of counteracting this tendency.

Women Are Inflated

Wages are abnormally inflated, and afford no assured basis for future guidance. British women would do well to realize the opportunity of work as rural school teachers. Although the life presents hardships and difficulties, the teacher will invariably meet with friendliness and kindness. No extensive demand was found for women stenographers, nursemaids or milliners, but there is a considerable demand for first-class dressmakers.

The recommendations by the Commissioners include that women applying to be sent to Canada for domestic service should state in writing whether they wish to live in towns or rural districts. Considerable misunderstanding would thus be avoided. Every woman should be interviewed by a select committee of women on behalf of the Oversas Settlement Committee and the Canadian Commissioner of Emigration. Educated women should be advised that some training in the Dominion is necessary as a preliminary. The number of women travelling to Canada should be regulated periodically by information obtained from Canadian employment bureaus. Close communication should also be established between the Overseas Settlement Committee and the Canadian Women's Councils.

Blame the Agents

The Commissioners finally spoke of harm wrought by the undesirable type of women emigrants in former years. Prejudice is freely expressed by Canadian ladies against young women of the domestic servant class from the United Kingdom. This is owing to the operations of agents who made their living from capitation fees. Practically every experienced authority in Canada is agreed this system has been the source of much evil.

A MARRIAGE SLUMP.

One of the Effects of the Return of Peace.

A certain recklessness was, generally speaking, the characteristic of those undertaking matrimony in war time; a tendency to look two or three times before leaping has taken its place since the fighting ended. A variety of causes combine to account for such a change.

In the first place, life in the army being free from those expenses which weigh most heavily on the civilian, the soldier had little chance to realize the alarming cost of living. Demobilization has, however, given him personal experience of the real difficulty of making both ends meet. The absence of any prospects of an early drop in prices, combined with the problem of house accommodation, is quite enough to account for the shyness which he feels with regard to marriage.

Though practical difficulties are doubtless largely responsible for reducing the number of hasty marriages, the elimination of certain purely war-time incentives to marry has also much to do with it.

Though life is, at best, an uncertain thing, a man's chances of being alive in six months' time are distinctly brighter now than in recent years. As a natural consequence couples are more willing to wait for better days. Again, the man's argument that if he has to be killed the girl he loves may as well get a pension no longer enters into the weighing of pros and cons.

A man home on leave, after months of misery in the fighting line, had some excuse for acting against his better judgment. Especially was this the case when the expressed wishes of the girl he had not seen for so long allied themselves with his natural inclinations.

If the soldier did not always give sufficient thought to his after-the-war prospects — well, those prospects were so vague that adding a little to their uncertainty did not seem to make so much difference. Accustomed as he was to the taking of chances, he was somewhat apt to include the risks of a reckless marriage in the gamble of life.

Now that the crowded experiences and feverish excitement of war are over, an inevitable reaction has set in. Many a man whose nerves stood the strain, finds himself incapable of undertaking new anxieties and responsibilities now that the tension is relaxed. What he seeks is a respite, during which he may recuperate his nervous system and take a few bearings in his new environment.

IF you had a sore place, and had to choose between two remedies, one of which went to the sore spot direct, and the other by a round-about way, which would you prefer? Undoubtedly, the one that gets there direct!

That is just the reason for people's preference for Peps for ailments of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Peps get there direct, because they are breatheable, while remedies which are swallowed only go to the stomach

Dissolve Peps in the mouth, and the vapor which is liberated is carried by the breath direct to the breathing passages and minute air cells of the lungs, destroying all germs, and soothing, healing, and strengthening the delicate membranes.

Once you try Peps you will never use any other remedy for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, tightness across the chest, night cough, laryngitis or asthma. All dealers 50c. box.

CELLAR STOCKERS

MUST WAIT AWHILE

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Persons who are desirous of re-stocking their wine cellars and wish to import liquor for that purpose would be well advised to wait for the formal proclamation of peace before doing so.

Although to all intents and purposes peace has been concluded it was said at the Justice Department today that it would not be safe to assume that the prohibtion order in Council had lapsed The Canadian statute provides that war shall be deemed to exist until formal proclamation by the Governor-General in The Canada Gazette. This will follow in all probability, the proclamation of peace by his Majesty the King.

When his Majesty will issue this proclamation is not known, but as three of the great powers and Germany have now ratified the treaty it should not be long delayed.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (6)

CHAPTER XV.—Continued

She caught the long gloves up and swirled them round on his cheek. Like the others, they were perfumed; but now their scent was in his face. They looked in each other's eyes an instant smiling across the corner of the table. Then, as the smile died away, they remained looking in each other's eyes attentively. He drew the gloves from her hold, and played with them. Her hand laid upturned on the cloth to receive them back and in restoring them his own rested on it. She averted his gaze but her palm did not slip as quickly as it might have done.

"You know you may smoke," she said rising and going over to the fire "I'll have one, too."

"Isn't it too late" he asked, joining her.

His voice was not steady and now he did not look at her as he spoke.

"You can have one cigarette" she declared, sinking into an armchair and crossing her feet on the fender. "How is the paper going, Mr. Kent Eclipsig Le Petit Journal?"

"Of course," he said. "Did you ever know anybody's paper that wasn't?"

"You count Paris your home, I suppose? You mean to stop here permanently? I go back in March; the people are returning here then. I loathe London after Paris; but I shal have escaped most of the winter there that's one thing. Where did you live in town?"

"My neighborhood was Battersea," answered Kent; "that is to say it was suburban wilds. We had a villa i Streatham—have it now in fact," he added, remembering with dismay that there was a quarter's rent due. "No; I'm afraid I can't condole with you, Mrs. Deane-Pitt."

"Pride sleeps in a gilded crown, contentment in a cotton nightcap," she said. "An address is only skin-deep after all; besides, Streatham is pretty"

"Pretty well; and it looks prettier out of a big house."

"Make money, my friend," she said lanquidly; "you are young enough and I think you're clever enough. When all things were made, nothing was made better. And it's really very easy; as soon as you are popular, the editors will take anything."

"First catch your hare," he observed "I'm not popular."

The clock on the mantelshelf struck one, and he threw away his cigarette-end and got up.

"Good-night, Mrs. Deane-Pitt."

"Good-night," she said.

Her touch lingered again, and her personality dominated him as he walked back to the pension through the silent streets. He was angry with himself to perceive that it was so. What the devil had he been about in that business with the gloves over the table? She had let him do it, too! Did she like him? He would not go to see her any more. Well, that was absurd, but he would not go as frequently as he had. And he must keep a rein on himself. Nothing could come of it, he was convinced, even if he wished; and he did not. It would be too beastly to deceive a girl like Cynthia...... and their baby only a year old. He decided as he mounted the stairs he would tell Cynthia when she came back that he had been to the Varietes with Mrs. Deane-Pitt. It would not disturb her to hear that, and though it was juggling with his conscience he should feel cleaner afterwards. There was a letter from her waiting for him on the bedroom table and he washed his hands before he opened it.

Cynthia wrote to say she should be home the next evening but one, and that her parents had been rejoiced to see her. On the whole, things were not to be so desperate as she had feared; but it was quite determined that The Hawthorns should be let, for, fortunately there was a Peruvian family who were prepared to take it just as it stood, and mamma had already been to view a house in Strawberry Hill which was quite nice and far cheaper. Whether Miss Wix would move with them was doubtful.

"Mamma's temper is naturally not of the best just now, and I gather that the dissensions have been rather bad. Papa talks of allowing Aunt Emily a pound a week to live by herself and really she seems to prefer it."

She added, underlined, that Caesar was still the right hand of McCullough She had learned to smile a little at Caesar and Kent winced as he came to that allusion to a mutual joke. And then there followed a dozen affectionate injunctions; he was not to be dull 'poor boy who had no watch and chain' but to go somewhere every night; he was to hug baby for her and give and keep a score of kisses. She was 'always his loving wife.' He read it under the paraffin lamp wih his overcoat on and wished it had not arrived till the morning.

Mrs. Deane-Pitt's inquiry how 'The World and his Wife' was going had had more significance than Kent's perfunctory reply. The band of 'Paris Correspondents' in the vicinity of the Boulevard Magneta and elsewhere were already beginning to talk about 'Billy' Beaufort for, not only was he neglecting the first chance of a competence that had fallen in his way for years, but he was squandering the whole of a very handsome salary, and getting into difficulties besides. The amount of energy which this man when in his deepest waters devoted to seeking opportunities was only equalled by the abundant folly by which he had ruined and always would ruin, all that he obtained. He was one of the fools who devote their lives to disproving the adage that experience teaches them. The circulation of the paper was purely nominal, and the Baronet had constantly to be applied to for increased remittances; indeed, the only work in connection with the journal which 'Billy' now did was to write euphemistic reports to the proprietor. Nor did the drafts supply the journals deficiencies alone. Card debts had to be settled somehow. And an ephemeral attachment to a girl who tied herself in knots at the Nouveau Cirque was responsible for some embarrassment.

Hitherto, however, Beaufort had always spared the hundred and seventy-five francs at the end of the week to his subeditor, but on Saturday after Cynthia's return he asked him casually if he would mind waiting for it a few days.

"Sorry if it puts you out at all," he remarked. "I can't help myself. You shall have the money for certain Wednesday or Thursday. Devil of a nuisance! But I suppose you can finance matters in the meanwhile, Kent, eh?"

Kent could do no less than answer that he would try, but on Monday morning Madame Garin's bill would come up with the first breakfast and he saw himself confronted by the rather unpleasant necessity of making an excuse to her, or pretending to forget it till he could pay.

POISON LIKE UNTO

Venom of Snakes

Professor H. Strauss, M. D., of the Royal Charity Hospital, says, "The cause for an attack of gout, rheumatism, lumbago, is supplied by the increase of uric acid in the blood serum, the result of various causes, the most frequent of which is renal. Before an attack, one suffers sometimes from headache, neuralgia, twinges of pain here and there."

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, when the back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; when you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach; or you have rheumatic pains or lumbago, gout, sciatica when the weather is bad, do not neglect the warning, but try simple means. Take six or eight glasses of water during the day, then obtain at your nearest drug store 'An-uric' (anti-uric acid).

This is the discovery of Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. "Anuric" is an antidote for this uric acid poisoning and dissolves uric acid in the body much as hot coffee dissolves sugar.

"Anuric" will penetrate into the joints and muscles, and dissolve the poisonous accumulations. It will stamp out toxins.

Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package.

STALKING SEALS.

How Mammals Are Hunted In Northern Canada.

The seal's sun naps on the Arctic ice are continually disturbed by his dreams of his enemy, the polar bear, or at least that seems a reasonable way of interpreting his behavior, for after sleeping for thirty seconds or perhaps a minute, he will wake up, raise his head as high as he conveniently can, which is fourteen or sixteen inches, and make a complete survey of the horizon. If nothing suspicious is seen, this survey takes about ten seconds, after which he drops his head on the ice again and sleeps a minute more.

Sometimes the ice is a little rough in his vicinity and you can crawl up and shoot him from behind cover, but more frequently he has chosen a level expanse where no concealment is possible, and you must, therefore, approach him realizing that he is going to see you before you are near enough to shoot.

No mammal that is known has eyesight which at all compares with that of a man. A wolf can see you under favorable conditions a little more than half a mile away; a caribou at a little more than a quarter of a mile, and a seal commonly at about three hundred yards, if you are standing up, or one hundred and fifty to two hundred yards if you are lying down. You can walk unconcernedly toward a seal until less than four hundred yards away, after which you begin a careful approach. You crawl ahead on all fours while he sleeps and you lie flat and motionless while he is awake. It might seem that something could be gained by wearing white clothing to match the snow, but this is the reverse of wisdom, for the seal's one enemy that he fears is a polar bear, and the polar bear is white. If a seal sees anything that is suspicious and white he takes discretion to be the better part of valor and dives promptly into his hole. If the suspicious object is black, he assumes that it is probably another seal that has come out of another hole to bask in the sun. It is, therefore, the task of the hunter to simulate a seal.

When the seal first sees you his actions are unmistakable. He turns so as to face you directly; he raises his head a trifle higher than before, and instead of bending his neck to survey the complete horizon he looks at you steadily and intently. You must be careful that his first view of you shall be a broadside view, for a man lying flat resembles a seal most in that position. It is best to lie still with one's head on the ice for about half a minute; but the seal knows the habits of his own kind as well as the careful hunter knows them, and if you were to lie motionless for more than a minute at a time he would strongly suspect that you were not a seal, and in two minutes he would probably be convinced and would go into the water. It is necessary, therefore, after about half a minute of quiescence, to raise your head seal fashion twelve or fifteen inches above the ice, keep it there about eight or ten seconds, and drop it on the ice again. By the time this has been repeated three or four times the seal is commonly convinced that you are one of his kind and will begin again to take his interrupted naps.

If he is more suspicious than ordinary it may be advisable to move your feet a little as well. Like many other animals, a seal is commonly lousy and scratches frequently with his hind flippers. If a man lying flat flexes his legs from the knee the motion is similar to that of a seal scratching with his hind flippers. These tactics nearly always convince the most sceptical seal, and when once his regular naps are resumed you move ahead snakewise while he sleeps and play seal whenever he is awake, watching you.

Approaching a seal in this fashion is tedious at best, for it takes an hour and a half or two hours to get within fifty to seventy-five yards.

World's Fattest Folk.

Jack Wilson, the 560-lb. fat man of Coney Island, who has just died, was one of America's big things, says Tit-Bits.

But his avoirdupois is by no means a record, and has been beaten by several heavyweights in Britain. The 739 pounds of the historic Daniel Lambert still remains to be beaten, although Leo Whitton, the Canadian Colossus, who died at Macclesfield some years ago, ran him close with 720 pounds.

Then there was Thomas Longley, proprietor of the Star Inn at Dover, who died fifteen years ago after attaining enormous proportions. His height was 6 feet ¾ inches; chest measurement, 70 inches; girth, 85 inches; calf, 26 inches; weight, 564 pounds. Shortly after the death of Longley another heavyweight, Jesse Amos Baker, better known as "Billy Bonno," died in the Blackburn Infirmary. Baker weighed 616 pounds, and the coffin in which he was buried measured 7 feet in length, and about 3½ feet across.

The record of Hilda Flack, of Buckhurst Hill, who, although only thirteen years of age, weighs 210 pounds, and that of Elsie Hopton, of Rayleigh, Essex, who weighs 207 pounds at twelve years of age, calls to mind Packham, who weighed 144 pounds at the age of five.

The fattest child on record, however, was a Worcestershire girl who died in 1816, and who, at the age of five years, was four feet in height, four feet two inches round the chest, and weighed nearly 224 pounds.

When Are Raffles Not Illegal?

In Canada a lottery is illegal, whether it is of a public or a private character. All raffles, being forms of lottery, are illegal, with this exception, that a raffle is allowed by law provided (1) that it is for a religious or charitable object; (2) that the consent either of the City council or the mayor has previously been obtained; and (3) that none of the articles raffled exceeds $50 in value.

Wedding Bells

YOUNG—HILL.

A bright and happy event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hill, at Madoc, on Tuesday, the 11th inst., when their daughter, Miss Ada Beatrice, became the bride of Mr. Maron Young of Belleville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. McTavish, and a large company of relatives and friends from Madoc and Belleville were gathered to offer their congratulations and wish the young couple bon voyage in their new life.

The bride looked very sweet in a dainty gown of palest pink georgette banded with ribbon of the same shade. The travelling dress was of blue jersey cloth. The wedding march was played by Mrs. (Dr.) Crawford, who also delighted the company with an appropriate solo. A fine collection of presents testified to the popularity of the bride and groom.

After a sumptuous buffet luncheon was served, Mr. and Mrs. Young left, going by auto to Belleville, and thence by train to Toronto and other points. Upon their return they purpose taking up their residence in Belleville, and the best wishes of their many friends will follow them.

HUMAN HEADS PLACED

ON ROOF TO DRY

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—The mystery surrounding the three human heads discovered by school boys yesterday morning in a lane near 669 St. Hubert street, has been satisfactorily explained. These relics of the departed are not evidence of a gory crime but part of the stock-in-trade of the medical students of Laval University. According to the report made to the police they had been placed upon the roof to dry and were blown down by the wind. Presumably they will now be removed from the morgue, whence they had been forwarded, and returned to their rightful owners.

AVOID ALUM IN FOOD

Baking Powder is one of the most important food ingredients. Alum or other injurious acids are frequently used by some concerns to lower the cost of production.

Sporting News

The big foot ball game in the States on Saturday is the Yale-Princeton game. Traditionally it may pass down as history-making battle between brothers. In the centre of the line Saturday, captain Tim Callahan of Yale will face his brother Mike of Princeton, on Yale field. Both are giant players. Both hold down a position that may turn the tide either way. That's the most unique situation in American football in years.

WON'T ACCEPT LIQUOR TILL IT IS LAWFUL

Montreal, Nov. 14.—Express companies have issued a circular forbidding their agents to accept liquor consignments for Ontario and other Canadian points until a proclamation is issued cancelling the prohibition order in Council, which will come with the official proclamation of peace. Large orders have thus been held up.

STOLE CASE OF WHISKEY

Some person, or persons, with a skeleton key, entered the wareroom of the Dominion Express Company at the C.P.R. station at Lindsay, some time during Wednesday night and succeeded in carrying away a case of good whiskey.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT

A shooting accident occurred at Lochlin on Tuesday last the first of the hunting season, when a young man named Pringle was the victim. It appears that Pringle, whose home is in Toronto, and who is a returned man, was visiting his uncle, the station agent at Lochlin, and with a companion started out for a hunt. In some manner a dog chain caught in the trigger of Pringle's gun, causing the weapon to explode. The discharge entered the young man's right thigh, causing a nasty wound, from which much blood flowed. No serious results, however, are anticipated.

RESIDENCE BURNED

The beautiful brick residence of Mr. Hilliard McAllister of Bewdley, Northumberland County, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday afternoon. It appears that some of the rooms were being papered and as the old paper was torn off it was burned in the kitchen stove. The pipes became overheated and before this was discovered the house had taken fire. All efforts to extinguish the blaze were futile and Mr. McAllister's fine home is today a mass of ruins. Through the assistance of the neighbors most of the furniture was saved

EXPANSION CAMPAIGN

Headquarters for the Expansion Campaign in connection with the Belleville Board of Trade have been established at No. 8 Campbell Street, and the organization will be directed by Messrs. R. A. Crosby, Dr. H. B. Haskell and A. G. Scott of the Canadian City Bureau of Toronto, who will manage the campaign. The "Drive" will be short and snappy and not over one month in duration. An Advisory Committee of fifty, representing the varied interests of the city will be formed and an energetic campaign will be waged to build up a truly representative body charged with the promoting of the interests of Belleville in a progressive manner. At the Board of Trade meeting Wednesday night a resolution was carried unanimously approving and pledging full assistance to the forward movement campaign, and the preliminary organization is now being effected.

BARN BURNED WITH CONTENTS

On Tuesday night, the barns belonging to Mr. Emory Walker, who lives on Milford Road, about two miles from Cherry Valley, Prince Edward County, were destroyed by fire with the contents including a grain seperator owned by Mr. C. Dainard. The blaze originated in the separator and was discovered by Mr. Dainard and the threshing gang, who were sleeping in the caboose beside the barn. Efforts were made to confine it to the threshing machine and extinguish it, but they were not successful and the building was soon in flames. There were two barns adjoining each other and both were burned. The loss was partially covered by insurance, but will be heavy, as the entire season's hay and grain crop was lost also several implements. The cattle were in the stable, but were saved.

AUTO NUMBER FOUND

Auto permit number 123530 is at the police station awaiting an owner. It was yesterday afternoon picked up on a street in the city.

A STRAY CHILD

Yesterday afternoon a little child was taken to the police station having been found wandering about the street. Later the parents who reside on Foster Avenue were found.

STOLE FROM PRINCE

Chief of Police Newton is expected to return today with John Kyle, arrested in Montreal on a charge of stealing jewelry in Belleville. Yesterday's Montreal Star refers to Kyle as follows: "John Kyle, the returned soldier who was recently found guilty of stealing a cap and badges the property of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, from the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and freed on suspended sentence by Judge Leet, is in trouble again. Kyle who is 22 years of age and gives his address as The Prince of Wales Hospital, Drummond street is now wanted in Belleville, Ont., upon a charge of stealing a gold watch, gold ring and other jewelry. Accused was arrested yesterday afternoon by Detective Sloan and it is expected that an officer will arrive from Belleville for him today. It is reported that the articles in question, which have since been recovered were stolen before those of His Royal Highness. The accused man enlisted in Toronto in 1916.

CURE FOR SMALLPOX.

Mr. Hines sent to the Liverpool Mercury this recipe on smallpox: "I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man if the worst case of smallpox cannot be cured in three days, simply by the use of cream of tartar. One ounce of cream of tartar dissolved in a pint of water, drunk at intervals when cold, is a never failing remedy. It has cured thousands, never leaves a mark, never causes blindness and avoids tedious, lingering illness.

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Two Explorers.

Martin Killin and Adelbert Gumaer, the last two member of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's Canadian Arctic Expedition to leave the Arctic, are reported aboard the trading schooner Anna Alga, which is working its way toward Nome.

Killin and Gumaer were not members of Stefansson's original party. They were members of a party Storker Storkerson, Stefansson's lieutenant, led on to an icefloe last year in the hope that the Arctic drifts would carry the floe westward to Siberia. After spending eight months on the ice the men found themselves about fifty miles from their starting point. They all came ashore and Storkerson and one other member headed overland for the outside world. Killin and Gumaer boarded the Olga and started for Nome.

Storkerson's trip outside was his first in eleven years. He has been an explorer, trader and trapper along the northern rim of the continent over since 1903. He expects to associate himself with Stefansson in handling the Canadian Government's proposal to stock the northern tundra plains with reindeer.

Dogs Eat Esquimo Church.

In the Hudson Bay country, where the dogs are half wolves, a band of these famished animals actually ate up a church. The Esquimo Christians had built a tiny chapel to hold twenty people. But the poor converts did not long enjoy the little church, of which they were so pathetically proud. The building was of whalebone, an edible substance, and one Sunday the pagan dogs ate every morsel of the sacred edifice.

Spiders Walk Straight.

Spiders have so many legs that it does not seem to matter which way they walk, writes Marion E. Bailey, in Boys and Girls Ask-at-Home-Questions," but most of them really do walk straight ahead in the direction of their eyes. If it is necessary they will take a quick side step, and some of them can jump, but they can get over the ground pretty fast just by walking straight ahead, and

St. John Man Gained 28 Pounds

H. F. Rollings Is Surprised By Rapid Improvement—Troubles End.

"The best proof I can give that Tanlac is the right thing for me is the way it is building me up," said H. F. Rollings, of 62 Flower Hill St. Johns, recently. Mr. Rollings has been employed as carpenter by Reeds Newfoundland Railway Company for ten years.

"At the time I began taking Tanlac," he continued, "I only weighed one hundred and twenty-two pounds, but now I weigh one hundred and fifty pounds—have actually gained twenty-eight pounds—and am picking up, both in weight and strength.

"I had been in the worst kind of a fix for some time and could get nothing to do me much good, if any. My appetite went back on me and my stomach was in such a bad fix that I could not eat meats or any of the more substantial foods at all. I had severe headaches and was so run down and weak that I couldn't do justice to my work. I would get so weak, faint and dizzy that I was actually afraid to mount the scaffolds. I was very nervous and nearly all my strength just seemed to be gone. One day while crossing the railroad track I felt one of those dizzy spells coming on me. I managed to call for help, but I fainted dead away, and the next thing I knew I was home. I could never get a good night's sleep and that tired, worn out feeling was with me all the time.

"My improvement since I began using Tanlac has certainly surprised me. My appetite returned after the first few doses and by the time my first bottle was gone I could eat and digest anything. Then I commenced to pick up my lost weight and strength and get rid of that tired, worn out feeling. The headaches, dizziness and nervousness have all left me and I sleep so soundly that I have to be woke up in the mornings. My appetite is so big that I can hardly get enough to eat and I never have the least trouble with my stomach any more, and when it comes to work I can keep up with my end with the best of them. I am convinced that Tanlac will help anyone who tried it and I am glad to make this statement for what it may be worth to others."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vincent, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

TIME CLOCKS FOR CIVIL SERVANTS

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Civil servants are all agog over an order in Council just passed, approving the principle of using time clocks to mark the time of arrival at work.

Hitherto a clerk and a book have been in most departments the recording angel for the unpunctualities of those who arrive late. It is claimed by stern disciplinarians in the service that a good-natured clerk could and does turn his blind eye to tardy arrivals, or else a benevolent eye to the clock. It has not been unknown for people who left their homes at 9 o'clock never to arrive later than 9 at the office, so far as the record shows.

The Public Works Department is to find out now how much time clocks cost, and if the cost is not too great all Federal employees will, in course of time, punch a clock as does any ordinary civilian in railway offices or factory employ.
